Senate Limits Debate On Draft Bill; Passage Today Called Certain

Walsh Amendment To Prevent Calling Conscripts Except In War Is Defeated

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

The Senate last night decisively defeated two substitute proposals for conscription and reached an agreement for limitation of debate which will assure passage of the draft bill some time today.

By margins of 54-29 and 55-22, the Senate rejected an amendment barring any conscription of men in peacetime and another substituting a system of voluntary recruiting for the compulsory training of men under the Burke-Wadsworth measure.

Then, after nearly 12 hours of continuous debate, the Senate adjourned at 10:30 until 11 this morning when it will consider another substitute plan delaying conscription pending a three-month test of voluntary recruiting. Then it will probably take a final vote.

Walsh Amendment Beaten

The first major conscription test in the three weeks of Senate consideration came on an amendment offered by Senator Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, which would provide for a registration of man power and the establishment of draft machinery but delay any call for men until a declaration of war or the invasion of the United States.

The vote came shortly after 9 p. m. in the second night session in as many days, ordered by Administration leaders in an effort to reach a final vote on the controversial measure.

Agree to Limit Debate

Then the Senate agreed to the limitation of debate—allowing each Senator 15 minutes for discussion and amendment and half an hour on passage of the measure.

A little later, Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio, offered as a substitute for the bill a proposal for the establishment of a 500,000-man regular Army and 1,000,000 trained reserves to be obtained by voluntary recruiting. The amendment was defeated, 55 to 22.

Leaders regarded the action on the amendment, striking as it did at the heart of the bill, as indicative of the division of sentiment in the chamber on the measure itself. They predicted the margin on final

President Lays Plane Delays To Congress

Says He's Satisfied, However, With Way Program Is Going

By George Bookman,
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt yesterday personally assured the Nation that he and his top defense advisers are satisfied with the way the plane program is going, but blamed Congress for many delays.

Stepping into the argument over how many military craft have been ordered, the President said industry is actually working on Army and Navy orders for 10,015 planes—the highest figure yet mentioned in the dispute started Saturday by Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia.

Senator Byrd's actual figures were correct but his inference—presumably in saying the plane program has "bogged down"—was dead wrong, the President told his press conference.

Three Bills Considered Vital

The Virginia Senator had produced letters Monday from the War and Navy Secretaries to show that only 343 combat planes had been ordered in the last 100 days.

While asserting that plane production for all types of craft is now at 800 units at month, the President criticized Congress for not passing three measures he considers vital. They are:

The excess profits tax bill, reported out of committee to the House yesterday, which carries provision for five-year tax amortization of new plants and repealing the Vinson-Trammell Act profit limits.

The $5,000,000,000 appropriation bill now pending in the Senate, which would provide funds for more plans and other equipment.

The Burke-Wadsworth conscription bill.

At an unusually long press conference which kept 200 reporters scribbling notes for 40 minutes, the President lead them through a maze of figures, prepared by John W.

McNary Hits At New Deal 'Capacity'

Willkie Ticket-Mate Assails Trade Pacts, Commends Public Power Projects

By the Associated Press

Salem, Oreg., Aug. 27.—Senator Charles L. McNary formally accepted the Republican Vice Presidential nomination today with the assertion his campaign would be an attack against "the New Deal's capacity to govern."

The Senate minority leader, speaking from a high platform at the fair grounds, outlined his views on pressing national problems.

Notified he was the party's selection by Gov. Harold E. Stassen, of Minnesota, the Oregonian charged the Administration of President Roosevelt with fundamental errors of government but credited it with "certain social gains" in the last seven years.

He'll Attack "Heresies"

"In this campaign I shall not seek to indict the New Deal motives," he asserted. "I shall, with all the force at my command, attack the New Deal's capacity to govern and the political and economic heresies which have deflected us from our course."

An early-morning rain and cloudy skies held the crowd to only a fraction of the 40,000 expected by the Republican National Committee. Hundreds of persons, however, gathered early this morning to be certain of seats.

By the time the ceremonies began, the sun was shining through the clouds, but it disappeared while McNary was speaking.

His speech followed activities which opened at noon with a luncheon attended by national Republican leaders who were unanimous in predicting the Willkie-McNary ticket would be successful in November.

Here, Representative Joseph W. Martin, of Massachusetts, national party chairman, described Senator McNary as the "undictated" Vice Presidential choice and the "perfect man to supplement Wendell L. Willkie's strength."

Criticizes Trade Pacts

Senator McNary interrupted a minute-long ovation at the end of Gov. Stassen's notification and launched immediately into his acceptance speech.

The nominee criticized the Administration's reciprocal trade treaty system and approved continued Federal development of hydroelectric power.

The veteran Oregon Senator, long a champion of protective farm legislation, told thousands of Westerners that "any Secretary of Agriculture would be hampered by the reciprocal trade system."

He reiterated a charge made before the Senate last spring that the treaties had failed to "dissipate, alleviate or liquidate the uneconomic conditions" facing agriculture.

He described power as "the prime requisite of modern industrial exist-

LEDERER RAINER TONE

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 17.—Representative Martin Dies (Democrat), of Texas, chairman of the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities, today exonerated Franchot Tone and Francis Lederer, actors, and Luise Rainer, screen actress, of accusations they were Communist sympathizers.

Of film actor Lionel Stander, who also appeared before the committee today in private hearing, Dies said:

"I'm not prepared at this time to make a statement with respect to Mr. Stander. I desire additional information and investigation as to him."

All four appeared voluntarily before Dies' committee to deny accusations by John L. Leech, a California Communist organizer. Speaking of the three, Dies said:

"The evidence is quite clear that these people have permitted their names to be used, or have contributed money, or have spoken under the auspices of organizations which the committee has found to be under the control of the Communist leadership. While there is no evidence that their cooperation was for any other purpose except humanitarian, it is nevertheless true that these organizations used these people and their money, not for professed purposes, but for purposes inimical to the best interests of this country.

"It is an illustration of how a foreign government is taking advantage of certain gullible American citizens. Among the list of such gullible persons will be found a number of Government officials holding positions in high places."

Willkie Shies From Embrace Of Coughlin

Nominee Says He Does Not Want Support Of Race-Prejudiced

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 27.—Wendell L. Willkie said today he did not want the support of the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin if he understood correctly that the radio priest is opposed "to certain people in this country because of their race or religion."

The Republican Presidential nominee was asked at a press conference whether he had any comment on an editorial in Father Coughlin's paper, Social Justice, calling his acceptance speech a "much-needed call to American nationalism."

"If I understand what his beliefs are," Willkie said, "I not only am not interested in his support but I don't want it.

"I am not interested in the support of anybody who stands for any form of prejudice about anybody's race or religion or who stands for any foreign economic or political philosophy in this country.

"I don't have to be President, but I do have to keep my beliefs clear

Midwest Vote Drive Approved By Roosevelt

Louis Johnson to Be Offered Important Defense Position

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt last night approved plans for an intensive Democratic drive for Midwest farm votes commencing next week, as lieutenants termed the corn belt test "pivotal" and likely to determine the outcome of the election.

The President reviewed Western campaign plans following a round of conferences on big and little Cabinet shifts culminating in a decision to offer former Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson an important job in the National Defense setup.

Johnson, who had declined to serve as Undersecretary of Commerce, called at the White House before the President left for Hyde Park. He made plain he was interested in public office only in a national defense capacity. Such a post will be found for him.

What Conscription Means to You

Debt Moratorium Assured to Draftees

(Editor's Note: With conscription a probability, The Post is presenting a series designed to answer everyone's questions about the effect of the draft on him. The series is based on pending legislation and the plans drawn up by selective service specialists since the World War. This is the fourth article. Questions are invited.)

By George Thorpe,
Post Staff Writer

Vital to every man who would be called up for military training are the far-reaching financial implications of conscription.

Conscripts who give up well-paid civilian jobs—just as those now unemployed—will want to know the answers to these questions:

"How much will I be paid? What about my debts whose payment depends on my present income? Will I be exempted from taxation?"

To the man in the higher income brackets in private industry, a soldier's pay will seem miserably small. To others it will mean steady subsistence with the Government paying the bills.

Originally, the legislation now under consideration provided trainees should receive only a nominal $5 per month plus traveling expenses.

When reported out by the Senate Military Affairs Committee, the bill specified conscripts would receive regular Army pay. This starts at $21 a month and ranges up to $157, but it is expected the citizen soldiers will not rise above the rank of corporal in their one-year terms.

Subsequently, there have been a number of amendments, all of which agree on one point—that Army base, or seventh-grade pay should be set at $30—and this was written into the Senate bill last week.

Under this proviso, first-class privates will receive $36 a month, an increase of $6 over the present rate, while corporals

Axis Strives for Balkan Peace After Russo-Rumanian Clash; London Bombed Again

20 British Cities Reported Raided; 2 Attacks Spoil Capital's Sleep

By the Associated Press

London (Wednesday), Aug. 27.—Adolf Hitler's night-flying raiders continued "insomnia raids" on the London area last night and early today, dropping incendiary bomb clusters which started fires—and disturbed the slumbers of millions.

But Londoners, after their six-hour siege in shelters Monday night and Tuesday morning, took the two alarms last night and today much more phlegmatically. There was less antiaircraft cannonading and searchlight activity, and many a yawning householder refused to leave his bed.

The first raid, lasting about 2½ hours, ended just before midnight. Another of less than an hour's duration started shortly after midnight.

The British declared damage was small, though they acknowledged some fires and some casualties occurred.

The raiders again operated singly or in small groups, but threw in the pace-changing "all-clear" period in contrast with their chain raid marathon of the previous night.

Similar harassing raids were conducted through the dark hours over nearly all of England and Wales. [The United Press said at least 20 towns were under attack.]

The British everywhere kept their searchlight and antiaircraft fire down to the minimum.

Freight Train Strafed

Bombs fell north of one Midland town, and Germans were reported over several other communities in the same area. At one northeast town a Nazi plane swooped down for a bit of ground-strafing, with a freight train as the apparent target.

After a short interlude, new rumbling sounds were heard distantly in the London area, indicating that the Nazis had not yet given up their prowling. There was the faint drone of an engine, and searchlights flicked on and off sporadically.

In southeast England, incendiary bombs hit two churches. The British said a large fire in the roof of one was extinguished.

Also in the southeast, a raider dropped high-explosive and incendiary bombs just as searchlights picked him up and guns hammered at him.

One German raider was reported shot down in southeast England.

Dinner Interrupted

A plane dropped a high-explosive bomb on one northeast Scotland town and hurled a number of incendiaries down on flower gardens.

A Midland town had its longest alarm of the war during the night. Explosions were heard and it was announced that about 100 incendiary bombs fell, in open country.

Intermittent raids kept one southeast England area awake most of the night. Fire brigades rushed about, dealing with incendiary bombs. One big fire lit up the surrounding region for several miles, but firemen got it under control in about an hour, they announced.

Early this morning, a northwest town was awakened by bomb blasts and antiaircraft fire.

This second successive night of "nuisance raids," as the British call

The War Today . . .

GERMANY AND ITALY, alarmed by twin war threats in their Balkan "bread basket," hurriedly call Vienna conference of foreign ministers to iron out Rumanian-Hungarian dispute over Transylvania and avert conflict there which might tempt Russian invasion of Rumania from the east.

SEVERE CLASHES between Soviet and Rumanian troops since Saturday are reported from northeast Rumania.

NAZI BOMBERS continue night raids on Britain, giving London two alarms during the night and attacking a score of other cities after Tuesday's lull.

ROYAL AIR FORCE bombers, which Monday night damaged Italy's Fiat plane and tank factory and raided Nazi airfields and industrial plants, apparently are continuing their nightly raids on Axis objectives.

Swiss Hear Planes; Axis Factory Centers Extensively Bombed

London (Wednesday), Aug. 28.—The intensity and range of the day and night bombings by the Royal Air Force reached new heights when the large forces of heavy bombers operating throughout Monday into Tuesday morning extended systematic attacks on industrial targets in Germany, the north of Italy and 27 airfields in Germany, Holland, Belgium and occupied France.

Fiat Works Hit

[Reports of new air raid alarms at Geneva, Switzerland, and Munich, Germany, indicated the R. A. F. was renewing its attacks last night and early today. Alarms over Switzerland have invariably marked the passage of British bombers across the Alps toward Italy.

[Munich, the United Press said, had a brief alarm, but no bombs were dropped and no antiaircraft activity was heard.]

Monday night's raids on Germany were directed against oil and armaments centers with particular attention given to the big synthetic oil plant at Leuna, west of Leipzig, which was blasted for two hours.

Other bombers for a fifth time within the fortnight made a flight into north Italy. Six tons of bombs were unloaded on the Fiat works at Turin, and other factories near Milan.

Italian Fighters Shy

All but one of the night bombers returned, though another plane is missing from the daylight raids on continental airfields. One British bomber returning home from Germany shot down a German returning from a raid over England.

Arriving in northern Italy from France, over the Alps, the R. A. F. rained six tons of bombs on the Fiat works at Turin and the Magneto Marelli factory making

Fear of Russia Seen as Hitler Summons Parley On Transylvania

By the Associated Press

Budapest, Hungary, Aug. 27. The Hungarian and Rumanian foreign ministers, it was learned tonight, have been urgently summoned to a conference with Axis spokesmen in Vienna in an apparent move by Italy and Germany to make a quick settlement of the Balkan crisis lest Soviet Russia have opportunity to move further into that area.

Specifically, they were called to meet Thursday in Vienna with Count Galeazzo Ciano, the Italian foreign minister, and German Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop.

Just before this became known, the German and Italian ministers to Rumania left Bucharest by plane for consultations with their governments, carrying detailed reports of a sharp and bloody clash between Soviet and Rumanian troops. At about the same time, the German and Italian ministers to Bucharest also left here.

Transylvania Key

The Vienna meeting was understood to be designed to force a settlement of Hungary's claims upon Rumania for Transylvania which would avoid a war disturbing to the Balkan productivity so necessary to Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini in their war with Britain, and make an end to the long crisis atmosphere.

Reliable Berlin informants reported the Axis foreign ministers are convinced Germany must settle Balkan territorial disputes at all costs and clashes between Rumania and Russian forces, it was acknowledged, make the settlement urgent.

Germans emphasized that Balkan peace was of the highest importance to them. To that end, the status of Rumania—with which Germany has important trade agreements for acquisition of war essentials—must be clarified not only regarding Hungary, but also Russia, they said.

Rumania in Dilemma

Accounts of the Soviet-Rumanian clash first reached Budapest in diplomatic dispatches from Rumania and subsequently were confirmed by Soviet circles in Bucharest. These dispatches indicated that the fight, in which several hundred

Five U. S. Members Of Defense Board To Tour Canada

Ottawa, Aug. 27 (AP).—Five naval and air service members of the United States-Canadian Joint Board of Defense arranged tonight to leave tomorrow on a flying trip of inspection of Canadian defense facilities as the board adjourned a two-day meeting to resume sessions in Washington September 9.

It was understood the United States section of the board, headed by Mayor LaGuardia of New York, would return soon to Washington for conference and that the Canadian section would consult with the Canadian cabinet's war committee.

LaGuardia said he would fly to New York tomorrow. LaGuardia, acting as chief spokesman of the board, would not disclose details of the discussions, but he declared:

"I can assure you that there will be no minority report from this board. We got right down to work and we used plain English. We decided at once to abandon the complex and involved language of diplomacy and to get down to real issues."

The Army's Plans

D. C., Maryland and Virginia Guards Face November Call

National Guardsmen of the District of Columbia, Maryland and Virginia are expected to be called out for a year's active service in November under plans of the War Department, officials revealed yesterday.

The Twenty-ninth Division, embracing part of the District guard and most of the Maryland and Virginia troops, will probably go to Fort George G. Meade, Md., for training, it was said, while the 260th Coast Artillery, the local antiaircraft regiment, is expected to be sent to Virginia Beach, Va., for encampment during the year.

Authority for calling the National Guard is contained in a bill passed by both houses of Congress and now awaiting President Roosevelt's signature. Funds for the militia mobilization will be asked of Congress within the next two days.

Army officials have already revealed plans for calling four divisions of Guardsmen plus some coast defense units on September 15. They are the Forty-fourth, Thirtieth, Forty-fifth and Forty-first divisions composed of men from New York, New Jersey, Tennessee, the Carolinas, New Mexico, Arizona, Oklahoma, Colorado, Oregon, Washington, Montana and Idaho.

The remainder of the National Guard is to be called before January 1, under these announced plans, 55,000 men on October 15; 65,000 on November 15, and 40,000 on December 15. No announcement has as yet come from the War Department as to which units will go on these dates.

Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, adjutant general of Maryland and commander of the Twenty-ninth Division, was quoted in Baltimore

Improvements Wanted

D. C. Commissioners Agree Budget Must Be Cut 12 Million

The District Commissioners yesterday completed hearings on the 1942 budget, convinced that they must cut from departmental requests at least $12,000,000.

During the two days of hearings influential citizen and business groups appeared and made a determined plea that the budget be confined within expected revenues, but at the same time they took occasion to recommend a host of improvements as outlined by the various department heads.

"We've heard the voice of the people and we are convinced they want us to keep a balanced budget and not increase any taxes," said Col. David McCoach, jr., and his statement was supported by the other Commissioners.

Total department requests are $62,907,225 and revenues are expected to amount to $50,000,000.

Col. McCoach said he was opposed to increasing taxes to meet the requests asked by the municipal officials. The real estate tax, at present set at $1.75, would have to bear the brunt of any increased budget. It has been estimated that the Commissioners would have to raise this tax to $3 in order to take care of $13,953,545 which represents the increase of the new budget estimates over the appropriation for this year.

Commissioner Hazen said he would suggest, in the process of reducing the budget of each department, that the department head have a voice in the individual items to be reduced. This procedure is now followed by the school officials. In this instance, for example, the Commissioners will probably tell school authorities to reduce their $18,346,369 total by some $5,000,000. In this way the school authorities

Hiram Johnson And Bilbo Lead State Primaries

Preliminary returns from primary elections in three States indicated the following trends, as reported by the Associated Press:

CALIFORNIA — Senator Hiram Johnson, a candidate in both major parties' primaries, was conceded the Republican nomination and was running ahead in the Democratic race.

SOUTH CAROLINA — In five Congressional districts where incumbents are seeking renomination all present Representatives piled up substantial early leads over their opponents. In the First District, L. Mendel Rivers forged ahead of Alfred Vonkolnits. Both are seeking the House seat left vacant when Representative Clara G. McMillan did not seek the office again.

MISSISSIPPI—Senator Theo G. Bilbo, seeking his second Senate term, took a commanding lead over former Gov. Hugh White on early returns.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

HOME OF THE BRAVE

Among the Capital's statesmen I admire most are those few who, to the amazement of their colleagues and the awe of their constituents, decide to retire from office and even from politics before they are licked at the polls, kicked out on their ears or completely senile and befuddled.

Harlan Miller

Washington's fleshpots appeal to first-raters for a time, until they've bitten off enough of the bawdy atmosphere of glamour, confusion, power and petty bickering to last them a lifetime and leave them slightly bilious about the glory of public office.

* * * *

But the second-rater never gets quite enough of it. Washington may knock him punch-drunk, reeling into his corner, bewildered and licking secret wounds. It may leave him so dizzy that he cannot, after a few years, examine any issue without hearing little birdies twittering in every corner.

* * * *

He may have moments when he wishes he were the honest, independent proprietor of a hamburger stand, the fearless, outspoken director of a panatorium, or even the ranking attendant in a privately operated (not a municipal) comfort station, so he could call his soul his own.

"—punch-drunk in the Capital"

Yet he cannot give up willingly the chance to strut his stuff as a pseudo-leader, a tinhorn statesman, a hollow bigshot . . . He may groan every time he sees a constituent or gets a letter from home. But he cannot relinquish the limelight; he yearns to die in harness, and believe me, it is harness.

* * * *

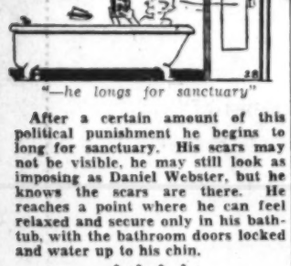
Strangely, it isn't always the $10,000 salary, the 20-cent mileage or the other appurtenances, emoluments and perquisites of office that keep them in the treadmill. Many of them could make more money othrewise, or live more comfortably and happily elsewhere on less money.

* * * *

Rather, it's the same urge that used to keep a vaudeville actor haunting the stage after he had been booed off a dozen stages, or that causes a faded beauty to have her face lifted a second and a third time until it is a mass of scars, a terrifying mask.

* * * *

After making all the compromises and concessions it takes to get elected and stay elected, after all the somersaults and backward flip-flops, the painful retreats and the shameful submissions, a first-rate conscientious, sensitive man is aware of psychic and almost physical scars from the top of his pate to the bunion on his big toe.



"—he longs for sanctuary"

After a certain amount of this political punishment he begins to long for sanctuary. His scars may not be visible, he may still look as imposing as Daniel Webster, but he knows the scars are there. He reaches a point where he can feel relaxed and secure only in his bathtub, with the bathroom doors locked and water up to his chin.

* * * *

If he is lucky, and has been especially diligent, headlong and audacious in the service of his leaders, he may get an appointment to the Federal bench for the rest of his natural life. This carries with it certain immunities from political pressures and turmoils. But it isn't quite taking the veil, by any means.

* * * *

Some first-raters often feel the urge to retire, but always put it off until tomorrow. They're always sorry; they wish they had been able to taste again the joy of living as quiet men on quiet streets, able to punch any man in the nose who called 'em "Senator" without smiling as they said it.

* * * *

The indecent scramble for public office is the bane of democracy . . . The maudlin melee to remain in public office is its scourge and cancer . . . Perhaps a limit to the number of terms of a member of Congress may yet save democracy, even if he must be pensioned off. It would at least save democracy some money.

* * * *

All this may explain partially why the Senate is as the Senate is at this crucial moment in our history—clogged with a crowd of clamorous self-seekers . . . The best thing I hear about the third term is that Mr. Roosevelt won't serve more than a year of it. I hope it's true. Meanwhile, a salute and a fanfare for men like Senator Guy Gillette, who decided to retire voluntarily from Congress. There must be a noble streak in 'em.

President Sidesteps Question Of Reappointing Madden to NLRB

Says He's Studying Whether to Replace Him as Chairman

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

As the five-year term of Chairman J. Warren Madden of the National Labor Relations Board expired yesterday, two Congressional committees turned their attention to the board.

A House Appropriations subcommittee was asked to write into the next deficiency bill a prohibition against the board's continuance of its much-disputed technical services division, while the Smith committee investigating the NLRB heard Charles Fahy, general counsel of the board, object to much of the material previously entered into the record of the inquiry.

The question of whether President Roosevelt will reappoint or replace Madden was left unanswered by the Chief Executive at his press conference yesterday. Queried about the Labor Board vacancy, the president merely replied that the problem was being worked on. However, Madden's reappointment is viewed as a strong probability.

Under New Name

The battle over the Labor Board's Technical Services Division was continued yesterday when, it is understood, the labor subcommittee of the Appropriations Committee flatly requested the deficiencies subcommittee to eliminate the division in the next money bill.

The division in question carries on under its new name the functions of the board's old Division of Economic Research, which the labor subcommittee vainly asked the board to abolish last spring.

It is understood that labor subcommittee members told their colleagues on the deficiencies subcommittee that since the board had disregarded the request to wipe out in fact as well as in name the Division of Economic Research, the only thing left to do is to specifically order it abolished in the forthcoming deficiency bill.

Objects to Toland's Testimony

The board, however, has contended that the division is necessary to carry on its work.

At a revival of Smith committee hearings yesterday, General Counsel Fahy entered strenuous objection to some of the matter put into the record by Committee Counsel Edmund Toland.

When Fahy objected to the accusation that board employes had engaged in lobbying on behalf of the NLRB, Toland retorted that in respect to some of the activities considered "if that isn't lobbying, I don't know what lobbying is."

Chairman Smith added that "appearing before a Senate committee is one thing; but to ride around the country and get some people to come to hearings because they oppose amendments and others to stay away because they favor them—all the activities of that sort to influence legislation—is quite another thing." Board employes engaged in "both activities," he declared.

Fahy countered that "we did understand we could assist the committee by having labor experts testify before it."

At executive hearings of the Senate Labor Committee yesterday morning, Chairman Smith urged that the House-approved amendments to the Wagner Act be favorably reported. The committee still has some other witnesses to hear before taking any action on the pending legislation.

The Gallup Poll

By Dr. George Gallup,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

Willkie's Main Problem Is Winning Votes In Lower and Middle Income Levels

Princeton, N. J., Aug. 27.—One of Wendell Willkie's chief problems in attempting to defeat President Roosevelt—perhaps his most important single problem—is revealed in a survey of public opinion by the Institute. It is a problem which Willkie's two predecessors' in the Republican Party, Herbert Hoover and Alfred M. Landon, each had to face but could not solve when they ran against Roosevelt.

Willkie's problem is how to win more votes in the lower and middle income levels—the people who belong to the "white collar class" and those who, to use the vernacular, live on the other side of the railroad tracks.

Conversely, President Roosevelt's problem is how to increase his strength with the upper and middle income groups.

Divided by Classes

No student of politics can pretend to understand the campaign without full knowledge of the sharp division of sentiment which has sprung up in American politics along class lines. It is clearly revealed in the following results of the Institute poll:

	For Roosevelt	For Willkie
Upper income group	29%	71%
Middle income group	47	53
Lower income group	66	34
On relief	75	25

It can be seen that Willkie is the two-to-one favorite of the upper income group and Roosevelt the two-to-one favorite of the lower income group, including those voters on relief. In the middle bracket, sentiment is fairly evenly divided, with Willkie enjoying a slight advantage today. This middle income level holds the balance of power. Whichever candidate wins the lion's share of the middle vote, while holding his advantage elsewhere, will win the election.

Middle Most Important

The middle income group is important for still another reason. It is the largest group, numerically, in the voting population. The Institute's estimates of the income division of the voting population are shown below. These estimates apply not to the whole population, but merely to that part of the population which actually can vote.

The upper group, in the Institute's estimate, is comprised of the voting families earning more than $50 per week. They represent about one-sixth (16 per cent) of the voting population.

The middle group earns between $20 and $50 a week, and constitutes 48 per cent—nearly half—of the voting population. The lower group, comprising 36 per cent, are those earning less than $20 per week, including persons on relief.

On this basis, it can be seen that a candidate's popular strength in the middle group is far more important than his strength in either of the two extremes in the income scale.

How Willkie Can Win

Despite the overwhelming opposition of the upper income group, Roosevelt was able to win in 1936 by a landslide because he carried the major share of the middle income vote. Only if Willkie can achieve what Landon could not achieve, and keep Roosevelt from repeating his 1936 performance in respect to the middle group, can he put himself in office.

What is the trend so far in the middle income group?

A comparison with the 1936 election indicates that Willkie has succeeded in making important inroads on the Democratic strength in that group.

The following table shows the vote for Roosevelt by income groups today and in 1936, with the degree of defection:

Major Party Vote for Roosevelt	1936	To-day	Pts. Change
Upper income group	42%	29%	—13
Middle income group	60	47	—13
Lower income group	70	66	—10
On relief	84	75	— 9

For the Nation as a whole, all income groups included, the latest poll showed Roosevelt 51 per cent, Willkie 49 per cent. Willkie was, however, found leading in electoral votes, 284-247.

to live with myself."

[In Detroit, Father Coughlin said he had "not indorsed any candidate for President, either Mr. Willkie or Mr. Roosevelt," and added, "nor do I know that I shall do so."

[Coughlin said he "certainly was not responsible" for what might appear in Social Justice. It has contained no article printed over his name in more than six months, he added.

He expects to remain in and around Rushville until September 14, when his Western tour will begin. The broad itinerary follows:

September 14—Leaving Chicago, there will be brief stops in such Illinois cities as Joliet, Ottawa, Peoria, Galesburg, Rock Island and Moline, and Davenport, Iowa, plus other rear-platform appearances in Iowa cities not yet selected.

September 15—No stop scheduled.

September 16—Major address at Coffeyville Kans., in the afternoon; brief evening stop in Tulsa, Okla.

September 17—Stops in Amarillo, Tex., and at several New Mexico towns, including Albuquerque.

September 18—Arrive in Los Angeles that afternoon and remain until the following night.

September 20—Tentative stops at Bakersfield, Tulare, Stockton, Sacramento and Oakland, Calif.

September 21—San Francisco.

September 22—Leave at noon for Portland, Oreg.

September 23—After visiting Portland in the morning, stops in Tacoma and Seattle, Wash.

September 24—Spokane, Wash., and Butte, Mont.

September 25—Stops at several points in Montana and at Dickinson, Bismark, Jamestown and Fargo, N. Dak.

September 26—Aberdeen, Welser-Huron, Mitchell and Sioux Falls, South Dakota, and Sioux City, Iowa.

September 27—Several stops in Iowa, including Fort Dodge, Webster City, Iowa Falls, Cedar Falls and Dubuque.

Then the train will go to Detroit, where Willkie will speak on September 30 before the National Federation of Republican Women's Clubs. The complete itinerary for the last few days however has not been arranged.

300 D. C. Aliens Register First Day

Submit to Questions And Fingerprinting Without Complaint

More than 300 Washington residents yesterday reported to Uncle Sam that they owe allegiance to foreign countries on the first day of the Federal Government's registration of aliens. They were the first batch of an estimated 7,000 Washingtonians who must be catalogued in this area before December 27.

All day long they filed through the City Postoffice and 19 substations and filled out detailed questionnaires and submitted to fingerprinting without a single complaint.

Their attitude, as described by Joseph P. Swinburne, assistant superintendent of the Benjamin Franklin Station, where more than 50 filled out registration forms during the day, was one of complete willingness to comply with the law coupled with sensitivity born of awareness that national feeling is running high.

Reticent About Selves

Willing as they were to answer questions as required by law, none could be found who would make public details of their lives. Only one registrant was willing to talk about himself at all, and he would only speak anonymously of events that had made him a man without a country.

A native of szarist Russia, he said he swore allegiance to the British crown in 1914 to serve in the Canadian army and, later, with the British army in France, where he taught recruits artful uses of bayonet and rifle learned in military academies in Russia and Germany. After the revolution in Russia where his father and brothers still live, he refused to become a citizen of the Soviet. He came to America in 1910 and has lived in Washington since 1920.

All Classes, Nationalities

At least three other countryless men came to register at the Benjamin Franklin station. Two were Russians. One was an Austrian.

Virtually every nationality was represented by the registrants, and all classes from laborer to prosperous merchant. The majority were natives of Poland, Russia, Rumania, Italy, Canada and Germany.

Some had lived in America for 25 years or more, and these, registration clerks said, were more nervous than the others, fearful that their failure to seek citizenship might subject them to some kind of penalty.

The bulk of registrants came to the City Postoffice near Union Station where Postmaster Vincent Burke said he hoped the entire 7,000 would be registered by December 1 so that 32 clerks assigned to the task might be released for the Christmas rush.

Thirty-five aliens came to the Alexandria (Va.) Postoffice to register, but were turned away because the office had not been supplied with forms.

The Law Will Ink Their Dainty Fingers

Greta Garbo — Miss Carroll — Vivien Leigh — BARBARA HUTTON — Empress Zita

Countess Barbara and Garbo Must Give U. S. Fingerprints

Millionaires and Geniuses Must Stand In Line With Laborers as Alien Law Providing Registration Takes Effect

By Jane Cochran,
International News Service Staff Writer

New York, Aug. 27.—Multimillionaire, countess, bricklayer, musician, day laborer, scientist—the fingerprint pad plays no favorites.

The manicured fingers of Barbara Hutton, Countess von Haugwitz-Reventlow, and the work-hardened fingers of an Italian bricklayer alike must record their impressions under the new alien laws which went into effect today.

Not only must she be registered, but the Woolworth heiress, who changes residences with the seasons, must notify the Bureau of Immigration and Naturalization in Washington within five days after every change of address. She renounced her American citizenship after marriage to the Danish count, whom she later divorced.

Even the aloof Greta Garbo—still a subject of King Gustav V of Sweden—must take herself down to her local postoffice in California, deposit her fingerprints and tell whether she belongs to any organization seeking to change the form of Government.

Otto Must Register

The signatures of Baron Edward Rothschild and other members of the famous banking clan now in America are magic when affixed to the lower right corner of a check blank but their fingerprints will be just so many more identification symbols to add to the alien files.

The fingerprints of Empress Zita of Hapsburg may be filed next to those of an Austrian peasant she once ruled. Her entire family, including Archduke Otto, heir to the Hapsburg throne, must register.

Madeleine Carroll, Vivien Leigh, Laurence Olivier, Charles Laughton, Basil Rathbone, Anna Neagle, Ray Milland, Alfred Hitchcock and a long list of filmdom's great must also comply with the alien laws, giving their age, personal description, real names and aliases, and declare whether or not they have ever been convicted of a crime.

Out of the 3,600,000 aliens believed living in the United States, the Grand Duchess Marie, of Russia; Baron Carl von Vietinghof, of Holland; the Hon. Mary Branbury, of London; Lady Daphne Straight, Sir John McTaggart, one of the richest men of Scotland; Sir Louis Beal, head of the British pavilion at the fair and a goodly representation of maharajahs and maharanees must register.

Artists and writers are not excluded and the Parisian designer, Elsa Schiaparelli, as well as many of the divas, bassos and tenors of the Metropolitan and other noted musicians must comply. Even Albert Einstein, who has taken out his first citizenship papers, must visit the registry station, before the period ends on December 26.

So must Thomas Mann, the distinguished German novelist, and Maurice Maeterlinck, the Belgian author.

Few celebrities, however, were among the first aliens to appear at the New York general postoffice today for fingerprinting and registration.

At the general postoffice the first man in line was Arno Kurt Gundelfinger, 28, who had spent three months in the Dachau concentration camp. After his release, he received a visa quota number and was able to come here as a refugee.

9 Miners Killed In Arkansas Blast; Tenth Missing

Bates, Ark., Aug. 27 (AP).—Nine men were killed late today and a tenth was still unaccounted for at 9:30 p. m., after an explosion at the Bates Coal Corporation mine near here.

Bodies of the nine men, all reported badly burned, were taken to Heavener, Okla.

The miners were members of a night crew and had just entered the mine at the time of the explosion, cause of which was not immediately known.

Heiress Gives $20,000 To U. S. Ambulance Unit

London, Aug. 27 (AP).—The American Ambulance Corps of Great Britain received a gift of $20,000 today from Countess Barbara Hutton Haugwitz-Reventlow, dime store heiress, for the addition of ten ambulances to its fleet of 260.

The American Corps, cooperating with the ministry of health, is operating from 12 centers scattered throughout the United Kingdom.

Its operating cost is about $750,000 annually and Wallace B. Phillips, chairman, said today funds already are on hand to carry on its activities and, in addition, to supply 600 drivers until March, 1941.

2 Youths, 20, Indicted in 19 D. C. Robberies

Two 20-year-old boys were indicted by the District grand jury yesterday on 19 counts of robbery, grand larceny, joy riding and housebreaking. And a 25-year-old colored man was indicted for second degree murder, charged with killing a workman on July 31 in a dispute over a bucket of drinking water.

For several weeks, it was reported, the indicted boys conducted a thriving purse-snatching racket on suburban and downtown streets. It was charged they stole several automobiles and one of them drove while the other jumped out and snatched the pocketbooks of women.

One car which they allegedly took on July 1 in front of the Kennedy-Warren Apartments on Connectivut avenue belonged to Admiral John W. Greenslade, U. S. N.

Clarence Smith, 25, colored, accused of killing Jay F. Jett, workman at the new Municipal Center, with an iron pipe July 31, was indicted for second degree murder. Jett was fatally injured during an argument over a bucket of drinking water in the basement of the new project on Indiana avenue northwest.

Others indicted and the charges were:

Yates McCoy Brown, housebreaking; Clarence Evans, housebreaking and larceny; George James Davis, housebreaking and larceny; James Melvin Allen, housebreaking and larceny; Charles James Thomas and James H. Harsley, housebreaking and larceny; Robert White, grand larceny; Aubrey S. Hunter, receiving stolen property; William E. Earnshaw, forgery and uttering.

William Henry Garrison, robbery; James Williams, assault with dangerous weapon; Ocie McCallip, assault with dangerous weapon, and James L. Morton, manslaughter.

The grand jury did not find a true bill in the following cases:

Johnson, Bilbo Lead Primaries

All Incumbents In South Carolina Have Early Leads

By the Associated Press

San Francisco, Aug. 27.—Senator Hiram W. Johnson, veteran isolationist, took a long lead over a string of candidates on the Democratic and progressive as well as on his own Republican ticket tonight in returns from the State primary election.

Johnson, an independent Republican, was seeking renomination as well as nominations on the other two tickets.

Although running what was conceded to be one of the most difficult races in his long political career, Johnson in 2,904 out of the 13,540 precincts received 79,592 on the Republican ballot while Lieut. Gov. Ellis Patterson was getting 7,310 and Assemblyman Samuel Yorty 4,256.

Patterson and Yorty are Democrats but are seeking the Republican nomination in addition to that of their own party.

On the Democratic side of their contest, Jonnson in 3,359 precincts collected 85,548; John Anson Ford, Los Angeles County supervisor, 35,253; Patterson, 30,676, and Yorty, 11,992. Two other Democrats trailed far behind.

At Odds with Roosevelt

The veteran Senator had more varieties of opposition in this race than in previous contests possibly because of his break with President Roosevelt since California in recent years turned from a Republican into a strongly Democratic State.

He campaigned from Washington and summed up his bid for a fifth term by asserting he "never responded to the orders of any man, and I never will."

The Man Bilbo Wins

Jackson, Miss., Aug. 27 (AP).—Mississippi Democrats today renominated Theo G. (the man) Bilbo for a second term in the United States Senate on the basis of unofficial primary returns. Nomination is tantamount to election.

Unofficial returns from 1,125 of the State's 1,660 precincts gave Bilbo 76,491 votes to 53,767 for former Gov. Hugh White.

South Carolina Drys Winning

Columbia, S. C., Aug. 27 (AP).—Dry advocates rolled up a steadily increasing majority as returns were tabulated from today's advisory referendum on whether the State should return to prohibition.

With 696 precincts reported out of a total of 1,523, the vote for a return to a bone-dry regime was 66,107, against 50,550 in favor of retaining the present system of package stores for the sale of liquor and practically unrestricted sale of beer and wine.

The referendum was held along with the biennial Democratic primary in which six candidates for Congress were nominated.

In itself, the referendum will not affect the present law, which was enacted five years ago, but the result was intended to serve as a guide to the 1941 session of the Legislature. Drys in the 1940 Legislature sponsored the referendum.

Five Representatives in Congress, who had opposition, were renominated upon the face of incomplete returns. Nomination is equivalent to election.

In the State's other district, where Representative Clara G. McMillan did not seek reelection, Mendel Rivers, young Charleston attorney, was apparently winner over Alfred H. Von Kolnitz, also of Charleston.

Latest Thing In Gas Masks For Horsie Set

Underwood & Underwood

LOOK AT THE GAS MASKS!—Ruth Pyle, attending the veterinarian convention which opened yesterday at the Mayflower Hotel, was interested in the display of gas masks for horses in the U. S. Army Veterinarian Corps exhibit. Both American and foreign type masks are shown

An Ardmore, Pa., veterinarian, Dr. Otto Stader, has invented a small, steel reduction splint, which will save the world's accident victims days of intense torture and months of disability, he reported here yesterday.

In Washington for the opening of the American Veterinary Medical Association's convention at the Mayflower Hotel, Dr. Stader disclosed that his splint, originally developed for use on dogs, has been applied "with uniform success" on human beings.

"At two large medical centers in New York," he said, "more than 50 human fractures have already been repaired with the use of the splint. All over the country prominent surgeons are studying the new method. It is just a matter of time now and some further study of the new technique, then the device will be available for universal use."

The splint has been used to heal more than 1,500 dog fractures at Dr. Strader's animal hospital in Ardmore, he said. Famous field, hunting and show dogs from all sections of the country have been sent to him for treatment. One, an imported Doberman, captured a blue ribbon in a New Jersey show a few months after the bone healed, he added.

The human splint, a foot-long steel bar weighing less than one pound, takes the place of huge plaster casts weighing as much as 10 pounds. Two steel pins, attached to each end of the bar, are imbedded into the bone through the flesh on both sides of the fracture.

"The greatest advantage," Dr. Stader explained, "is that the steel splint is weight-bearing. In less than a week, the patient can get out of bed and walk around with practically no pain while the bone heals. Under present methods, the patient must remain in bed in great discomfort and sometimes torture for six to eight weeks."

The steel bar can be manipulated so that the broken bone ends are brought into perfect union. Once the ends are joined, the splint prevents any movement.

Text of McNary's Address Accepting Nomination

Vice Presidential Candidate Scores New Deal Reciprocal Trade Pacts And Calls for Continued Federal Development of Power Resources

By the Associated Press

Salem, Oreg., Aug. 27.—The text of Senator Charles L. McNary, of Oregon, accepting the Republican Vice Presidential nomination:

I accept the nomination for Vice President so generously bestowed upon me by the Republican national convention last June. I indorse the platform and renew my loyalty to the candidate for President, the able, magnetic and forceful Wendell L. Willkie.

This is no ordinary campaign. The impact of the wars raging beyond both our oceans, together with our urgent concern for the peace of this hemisphere, surround the political decision we are about to make with a heightened gravity. Domestic issues, linked as they are with preparedness and foreign relations, take on enlarged significance in our present mood.

For more than seven years we have lingered in a backwater, denying our destiny; neglecting our defenses, both spiritual and material. The great energies of America have been hindered—where not actually stifled. Some have lost faith in the future; faith in work, the source of well-being. No party is solely responsible. We of the minority have, perhaps, failed in vigilance. But the overwhelming responsibility rests upon the party in power. They have the mandate.

This campaign is more than a mere contest between rival political parties. This campaign is a conflict between philosophies—philosophies of government and of action. We must choose in November whether America shall advance again along the path of her historic mission or retreat still further into the fields of futility.

I should be guilty of a narrow partisanship unsuited to the great West were I, however, to condemn the New Deal in its entirety. Candor requires me to credit this Administration with certain social gains which have made the lot of the average man more secure—if not more fruitful and satisfying. I, for one, do not choose to relinquish these advances, where they are genuine; nor to detract from the humanitarian impulses actuating the President. In this campaign I shall not seek to indict the New Deal's motives. I shall, with all the force at my command, attack the New Deal's capacity to govern and the political and economic heresies which have deflected us from our courses.

Every Administration since Washington has made progress toward fulfilling the American dream. The New Deal is exceptional in that it, alone, has sought to substitute new states of mind for old, to inculcate reliance on the Government in place of self-reliance and to supplant hope with fear of what lies ahead.

We may forgive the New Deal's incompetence in dealing with economic forces; its inability—or unwillingness—to further the employment of idle capital and idle hands. We might overlook the confusion in theory and practice that have curbed initiative, stalled the engines of production and multiplied debt. We are still a rich country. What we cannot forgive is that the New Deal, finding itself unable to restore national vitality, fashioned its plan upon the thesis that America is finished, that our economy is inevitably contracting, that opportunity has been extinguished and that, hereafter, we must look increasingly to the Government for jobs, for security and for the oversight of our private lives.

Concept Has Its Foundations In Europe's Rampant Statism

That concept, old as human pessimism, germinates now from a Europe which has been transformed—by poverty, political immaturity and war—into a dismal despotism. That concept is statism—the doctrine of the ascendancy of the State over the individual. I deny its validity in terms of a youthful, vital America. I charge, moreover, that the diffusion of that concept has impaired the national spirit and if persisted in might well rob us in time of the will to be free.

What we need, in times like these, is more democracy—not less. In an earlier period of doubt and dismay, Walt Whitman, the good, gray poet of a dynamic America, thus admonished his country:

"Sail, sail thy best, Ship of Democracy,
Of value is thy freight; 'tis not the present only,
The past is also stored in thee."

The Philadelphia convention, meeting in the birthplace of our liberties, handed us our sailing orders, bidding us look to our vigorous past, reconstruct America and set her anew on her course. I accept those orders in full confidence that we shall triumphantly make port in November.

Reading Lessons In the Oregon Trail

This occasion is, in a sense, a personal dedication. I make no apology, therefore, for personal references. Lacking only four years, I have served my native State of Oregon in the United States Senate for a third of its existence. In that 23 years my record has been open to the view of my countrymen. I have supported progressive measures. I have sought to conserve and employ, for the benefit of all, our heritage of soil, water power and forest. I stand on that record. Not one uttered word can be expunged, not one vote recalled; nor would I wish it otherwise, considering the light that then guided us.

I should be lacking in sentiment were I not gratified by the presence of the notification committee. Many of them crossed the continent to be with us. I hope they find compensation in the grandeur of our mountains and forests and the enchantment of the Willamette Valley. I hope they may be recompensed also by the opportunity of mingling with this assemblage of free citizens of the old Oregon country—the Northwestern empire, which once embraced all of Oregon, Washington and Idaho and parts of Montana and Wyoming. This is pioneer country still. We here are pioneers and the sons and daughters of pioneers; of the stock that carried American sovereignty from the Mississippi across the magnificent Rocky Mountain region, to the Pacific, conquering and subduing this rich domain for the Union.

Some of our visitors, flying here, crossed the old Oregon Trail in the air. Their passage across plains and mountains took only hours—instead of months. Others motored here. They reckoned traveling time in mere days. Accustomed to the ease of modern transport, it is hard to project our imaginations backward a century into the experience of the bearded men and the heroic mothers who rode uncomplainingly in covered wagons over the "iron road" from the Great Bend of the Missouri to the banks of the Willamette; following the valleys of the Kaw, the Platte, the Sweetwater, the Snake and the lordly Columbia; fording icy streams, withstanding hostile tribes, suffering hunger, thirst and sickness aggravated by strange diets and exposure—and leaving thousands of unmarked graves beside the trail.

Oregon Country's Settlement Is Part of a Proud Epic

The settlement of the Oregon country remains one of our proudest epics. At the time of the Yorktown surrender, our frontier rested on the Alleghenies. Sixty years later, the surging genius of our ancestors had pushed our borders to the Pacific. The beginnings of Oregon lay in the imagination of Thomas Jefferson, the apostle of democracy, who served only two terms in the Presidency, frowning upon contemplation of a third term. It was Jefferson who, after purchasing the Louisiana country, sent Lewis and Clark to spy out the land beyond the Rockies. Their journals kindled the interest of colonial America in the Far West. The explorer, the fur trapper and trader broke the trail. Next came the missionary and, close behind, the housekeeper. If we pause, we may read in the old Oregon Trail lessons applicable to the problems besetting us now.

The People Move On to the Pacific

Most Americans are familiar with the broad outlines of this vast migration. They are not so familiar with the fact that it was a people's movement. The Government at Washington, absorbed in the 1840's by the acquisition of Texas and the gathering clouds of secession, virtually ignored the trend toward the Northwest. In Congress, numerous voices were raised in discouragement. It was said that Oregon lay beyond our proper aspirations as a Nation; that the Rockies should mark the permanent boundary. Senator Thomas H. Benton, the Missouri giant, suggested erecting a statue of the Roman god Terminus on a peak of those mountains as a reminder of our natural limitations.

Fortunately, there were dissenters. The great Calhoun warned the Senate that, in spite of governmental objections, settlers were overrunning the Oregon country and—he suspected—the settlers, once established, would maintain themselves against the world.

So, the Government did not occupy the Oregon country. That job, thank God, was accomplished by the people. Americas had not then been instructed that they must look to Washington for inspiration and sanction for their every act. And when the pioneers found they needed to organize their rude society into lawful patterns, they made no appeal to the Government. They acted. They formed their own government.

Little Americans Then and Now

The place where they met was Champoeg. A proud and happy sentiment encompasses me as I reflect that that hallowed place lies only a little distance from where we now meet. There, free Americans demonstrated the flexibility of the American political system; they proved that institutions forged on the Atlantic served equally as well on the Pacific and that, therefore, the continent could be welded into one Nation. Out of the bold and considered action at Champoeg sprang the assurance which fortified our diplomacy in acquiring title to the old Oregon country from Great Britain.

We can afford to smile at the timidity of the obstructionists who lived a century ago. In their day, they thought America finished. They belonged to the tribe, seemingly numerous in each generation, which holds that the limit has been reached. Little Americans they were; the type that advocated impeaching Jefferson for his purchase and derided Seward for buying Alaska.

In like manner, the little American of 1940 maintains that our race is run. The throb he hears is not the hum of America's dynamos, but the hardening of America's arteries. It is his despondent outlook that deflates the hopes of youth; insists that our industrial plant is overbuilt and that we must look forward only to a slippered senility.

We, of the old Oregon country, reject the hypothesis of the little American. We are optimists. We say that America is not yet half built. The little American dates the decline of American enterprise from the time when the last free land was thrown open for settlement. We hold that the theory of the last frontier is only figurative. Land, if you had to work it, never was free. Men paid for it in sweat and blood and loneliness, if not in dollars.

As long as great rivers run idly to the sea; as long as vast reaches of virgin soil await only life-giving water; as long as well-being is inequitably distributed, then we say that America is not finished. Our job is to work for an integrated self-confident country, ready to undergo the discipline of the pioneer to the end that we may not only survive in a threatened world but distribute our blessings more abundantly. The call is for a disciplined population. I prefer the self-discipline of the pioneer to the imposed discipline of the European autocracies. The pioneer tradition is strong in our blood. All of us, whether our ancestors crossed the Atlantic in the seventeenth century or whether we ourselves came in the twentieth, are pioneers, or the descendants of pioneers. The virtues of work, thrift, and self-denial for the common good are part of our tradition. We have the tools.

Full Use of Our Resources Essential to Reconstruction

What are some of the specifications for the reconstruction of America? Among the first is the preservation and fuller employment of the natural resources of soil, forest and water power. Prudence dictates that we, at least, conserve those legacies, for this and future generations.

The prosperity of agriculture should be the first charge on the attention of any Administration. Not for sentimental reasons, although society owes a real debt to those who, year in, year out, supply it with its first essentials, food and raw materials. No, the reason for our preoccupation with the farm problem is social and economic betterment. The farm stands somewhere near the center of our economy. For 75 years, the farms of America balanced our foreign trade and, through exportable surpluses, provided the foreign exchange that assisted in building our factories, mines and railroads. The first World War disrupted the profitable trade and, for 20 years, we have struggled with recurring, unmarketable surpluses.

The farm problem is by no means the exclusive worry of the farmer. In a true and realistic sense, the problem is as national as the problem of national defense. Permit me to cite an example: Statisticians find an uncanny correspondence between gross farm income and industrial pay rolls in a given year. When, as in 1929, farm income rose to $12,000,000,000, factory pay rolls also were $12,000,000,000; and when, in 1932, farm income dropped to $5,000,000,000, industrial pay rolls fell off similarly.

The New Deal has administered the farm problem for more than seven years. What is the present state of the American farmer, who, with his dependents, make up a quarter of our population? In the year 1939, his share of the national income was the lowest since statistics have been kept. Moreover, his income during the seven New Deal, or lean, years has averaged only $7,000,000,000; whereas, during the preceding seven years, under Republican administrations, it averaged $9,000,000,000.

Bear in mind, if you will, that the New Deal totals include all the benefit payments from the Treasury of the United States—and that the seven prosperous Republican years include the black year 1932, which marked the depth of the depression. Throughout this New Deal cycle we have been confronted with the related phenomena of depressed farm prices and industrial unemployment. With the farmer producing without profit, the city worker was idle, his consuming power diminished. I have long felt that these phenomena could not be separated; that a sound policy would work toward relieving both of these disorders.

I shall discuss the farm situation in detail later in the campaign. It is a subject near my heart. For 20 years I have sought means and measures to better the lot of the agrarian producer. For the moment, let me say that the Republican platform recommends a hopeful and affirmative farm program. It indorses the principle of parity. It advocates—and this is a departure—incentive payments to farmers willing to experiment with tillage of crops we now import. We stand pledged to continue soil conservation payments, commodity surplus loans; to encourage acquisition of farms by tenants and for research aimed at developing industrial uses for products of the soil. We favor continuing the food-stamp program, which serves the double purpose of assisting the needy and helping the farmer by reducing surplus crops. The platform offers no magic formula. The problem is far too complex for any all-embracing cure. It does constitute a promise that the Republican Party genuinely seeks solutions.

Farm Problem Essentially One Of Revitalizing Farm Markets

A substantial solution of the farm problem may be resolved into a question of markets. Any rational plan must assign the American market to the American farmer. Beside being far and away the greatest market, it is the only one we may hope to control. The farmer is, at least, entitled to that, and no Treasury benefits can compensate him for its loss. Yet the New Deal, which, in seven years, has failed to map out a long-range plan for reconstructing the agricultural empire, piles confusion upon confusion by following two contradictory policies at once. With one hand, the New Deal pays farmers not to sow and heap; with the other, it lowers tariff barriers so that foreign crops undersell our own in our market.

Secretary Wallace, a high-minded and sympathetic Secretary of Agriculture, may not be blamed for this second policy. Any Secretary of Agriculture would be hampered by the reciprocal trade system, which, in the last two years, has admitted competitive farm products to the value of $537,000,000 a year. That sum, it is interesting to note, approximates what the Government has paid farmers to reduce acreage and production. Experts estimate that the 35,000,000 acres withdrawn through Government payments from production correspond closely to the acreage displaced by competitive imports.

I have always opposed reciprocal trade treaties, as formulated by the New Deal. When I spoke against their renewal last spring in the Senate, I charged that the treaties had failed to "dissipate, alleviate or liquidate the uneconomic conditions" affecting agriculture. I hold to that opinion still. Moreover, as the war spreads the areas of closed trade I gravely fear that the effects on agriculture may grow worse and we have no assurance that peace will restore foreign markets for our surpluses.

After seven years we need a realistic reappraisal of the whole problem and, whichever party assumes the responsibility next January, we should demand and have the formulation of a long-range policy looking to the restoration of our agriculture empire. The farmers do not wish to rely perpetually on subsidies which stop short of economic justice. They wish to reenter the economy as independent producers. They are entitled to the fulfillment of that wish.

For years I have advocated a two-price system; a system enabling us to export without injuring the domestic price level. The McNary-Haugen Act, which looked to that end, was twice vetoed by a President. Although conditions have altered radically since the bill was last rejected, I maintain with undiminished faith that some such formula must still be sought.

Farm recovery may well be part of a greater whole. The recovery of our whole economy hinges to some degrees upon removal of such obstacles to easy commerce as adverse Government policies, restrictive laws, burdensome taxation and the uncertainties arising from pyramiding debt. The overall solution may only await the installation of an Administration which whole-heartedly wishes again to see the United States a going concern.

I come to a problem that profoundly touches my emotions. We stand today in the heart of the last considerable area of virgin forest left in the United States; the majestic remnants of nearly a billion acres of timber that clothed this country when the first Europeans saw it. I was born within sight of the great trees that characteristically dominate the western scene from the Rockies to the Pacific. In my lifetime, I have witnessed the growth of the lumber industry to its present huge proportions and the expansion of the social and recreational value of our forests. It is but natural, therefore, that during my years in the Senate I have made legislation affecting the forests my special province.

Everyone knows that American timber resources are being swiftly depleted. We take assurance for the future, however, from the knowledge that they may, with care and wise governmental policies, be restored. Happily a substantial portion of our forest lands are being managed and utilized in ways that best safeguard social values, provide maximum employment, guarantee future supplies, stabilize streams and soils and conserve our rich endowments of natural beauty and wild life.

Improved Credit, Fairer Taxes Would Help Forest Interests

Yet, much more can be done. The Government equitably could assume half the cost of abating loss from fire, insects and disease to the desirable point where forests might become insurable risks. Credit facilities are rudimentary and inadequate. Forest taxation too often tends, by laying too heavy an immediate burden, to compel uneconomic exploitation and forced liquidation.

Unproductive areas increasingly should be acquired for public ownership and the exploration and research arms of the Forest Service should be expanded. Deserted villages and abandoned cut-over lands are the price society pays for wasteful rudations of our forest areas. The remedy for this ruthless policy is a Government-encouraged program of perpetuating this natural resource by regulating the volume of the crop that annually can be harvested. This means balancing the budget between the growth and the cut.

Power is the prime requisite of modern industrial existence. A measure of America's industrial magnitude may be found in the fact that one-half the installed horsepower in the world is developed within our borders. Steam power made England the industrial colossus of the nineteenth century; steam plus electrical power has made the United States the industrial giant of the twentieth. Yet America's water-power resources are still largely undeveloped. In the mountainous parts of the Pacific West, where strong rivers run unimpeded to the sea, a major portion of the country's potential hydroelectric power still waits to be harnessed. Fortunately, the principle on which this power may be made available has long been recognized. The Federal Government accepts the obligation to control floods and assure navigation. Out of these services flows the by-product of power.

Water Power Common Heritage, Should Be Federally Controlled

Unfalteringly the Congress has granted to the public preferential rights to power generated from navigable streams. Such power should be a common heritage. The Government, having made this power available, should have an indisputable right to control its utilization and distribution. Maximum benefits for domestic consumers, farmers and small users of power should be the yardstick by which we measure the usefulness and serviceability of every Federal development. Moreover, rates should be maintained at the lowest level consistent with sound amortization. Where irreconcilable conflicts arise between public and private interests in the development and distribution of power, private holdings should not be confiscated; and we now have a working precedent for such fair treatment in the recent acquisition by purchase of private companies by the Tennessee Valley Authority.

From the standpoint of the Treasury, the records of the great public power projects at Boulder Canyon on the Colorado and at Bonneville on the Columbia are reassuring. Both are liquidating their commitments to the Government, as, no doubt, the mighty power and reclamation development at the Coulee Dam on the upper reaches of the Columbia likewise will do. The subject of hydroelectric power deserves fuller treatment, which I expect to give it in a later speech.

The resources we have been considering bear pertinently on a subject uppermost in our minds as we look across the Atlantic. I refer to preparedness for defense. The last war disclosed deficits in power and farm and forest products. A shortage of power in certain Eastern industrial districts deprived domestic consumers of service. Food deficiencies caused meatless, wheatless days and the plowing up of the short grass prairies in what is now the dust bowl.

In common with what I believe to be the overwhelming majority of my countrymen I oppose involvment in foreign military adventures. America, as always, prefers peace. But America does not prefer the peace of appeasement nor the surrender of our national dignity, our independence of action, our political freedom or the civilized values that we cherish.

The existence of aggressive despots in Europe is not new to our experience. We administered a lesson to George III. Napoleon inconvenienced our commerce. Monroe and John Quincy Adams effectually warned the Holy Alliance to keep its arbitrary hands off this Hemisphere; we helped bring Maximilian's imperial adventure in Mexico to an inglorious end.

No Docile People, Americans Will Face Destiny on Own Terms

Nor have we failed to exercise our guardianship over countries within the scope of the Monroe Doctrine. Unless I mistake our temper, we are no less firm and positive today. We are not a docile people and we propose to work out our destiny on our terms. In the present world situation, we still have a choice. We shall be strong, in which case we shall deter our enemies at home and abroad; or, we may remain weak and thus invite their aggression. For my part, I prefer the part of strength. That has been the American choice.

In conclusion, may I remind you that the Republican Party this year lifts the standard of hope; a standard to which all men and women of courage and clear-sighted faith in our mighty traditions may repair. Everywhere we hear that our country faces greater perils than at any time since the Republican Party preserved the Union under Abraham Lincoln. In another hour of crisis, the Republican Party, cradled in a great tradition and seasoned in Government, offers to lead America out of doubt, negation and disunity. Problems change, new dangers arise—yet remain the ancient virtues—self-reliance, faith, hope and courage—which animated and sustained the pioneer in his quest for a greater, ever greater, America.

With your cooperation, we shall renew that quest—setting our country again on the path of high adventure toward her true destiny. With your help, we shall not fail.

ence" and declared:

"Unfalteringly, the Congress has granted to the public preferential rights to power generated from navigable streams. Such power should be common heritage. The Government, having made this power available, should have an indisputable right to control its utilization and distribution."

Power dams, he asserted, are paying their way—"From the standpoint of the Treasury, the records of the great public power projects at Boulder Canyon on the Colorado and at Bonneville on the Columbia are reassuring."

He chided the Roosevelt Administration for its doctrine of "statism" but refused to "condemn the New Deal in its entirety.

"We must decide whether America shall advance again along the path of her historic mission; or retreat still further into the fields of futility," the nominee declared.

He described the New Deal as "seven lean years" for the farmer, asserting agriculture's income averaged only $7,000,000 annually "whereas during the preceding Republican Administration it averaged $9,000,000." He asserted that in 1939 the farmer got the lowest share of the national income since records have been kept.

McNary indorsed a national forestry program which would obligate the Federal Government to pay half the cost of fighting fires, insects and diseases; development of hydroelectric power by the Federal Government and sale of it "at the lowest (rate) level consistent with sound amortization;" purchase of private companies by the Federal Government as in the case of the Tennessee Valley Authority.

Willkie in Lunchroom

Indianapolis, Aug. 27.—Wendell L. Willkie listened to the acceptance speech of Senator McNary tonight in a small lunchroom on the outskirts of Indianapolis. He stopped there on his way from Indianapolis Airport to Rushville, when it became apparent that he could not reach his destination in time for the broadcast.

HAY FEVER and ASTHMA
Science has not yet found a preparation which will give relief to all hay fever and asthma sufferers. This is understandable when one realizes that both of these conditions can be caused by many things, such as various pollens—from flowers and weeds, perfumes, animal hairs, improper diet, etc. However, science has discovered that many cases of hay fever and asthma get amazing relief from the administration of a certain vital food element. Allersen, a rich source of this important element, gives relief to thousands of sufferers year in and year out. In fact, if Allersen is taken early enough, hay fever and asthma can often be prevented. Allersen is put up in inexpensive, easy-to-take tablets. Trial size, 39c; regular size, $1.00; economy, $2.00.

Greece Seething In 'War of Nerves'

Situation Now Like That of Lowlands Before Nazis Struck

By C. L. Sulzberger
Copyright by New York Times

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Aug. 27.—It is the opinion of many observers that the position of Greece is strikingly similar to that of Holland and Belgium throughout last winter, when intermittent alarms responded to deliberately planned German provocations before the final assault began. The question is, of course, whether Italy intends to follow up these tactics with a similar incursion.

Some think Italy will make her Balkan grab before the war ends on the assumption that Germany is headed toward a quick victory. Others think an invasion of Greece is part of the grand campaign for an Eastern war by the Axis, since such an attack might divert forces of the British fleet. Still others think Berlin has called off the Roman wolf for the time being, but this group is in a minority among the diplomats and Government officials at Athens.

While Greece faced the first phase of the crisis with considerable unity and determination and it was obvious that Premier Metaxas and the King had the loyal support of the population, important elements of discord remain latent. Broadly speaking, the disagreements can fundamentally be traced back to a quarrel between Metaxas and followers of the late republican leader Eleutherios Venizelos, but the opposition includes many other elements, such as some liberal groups and antiroyalists.

Split Is Extensive.

The ramifications of this split extend to high quarters, both politically and militarily. For a long time opponents of Metaxas criticized him as too pro-Axis, although neutral diplomats consider this unfair. It is only fair to believe that he is merely trying to placate Germany and Italy as long as possible and would remain firm if Greece's integrity were threatened. This is the view clearly borne out last week.

The premier's efforts to remain on good terms with Berlin and Rome is always emphasized by his opponents, who are strongly Anglophile. Nevertheless, there is evidence that Germany—which is far more influential here than Italy, since that country is generally detested—not only does not consider Metaxas "safe," but would like to see him succeeded by a politician friendlier to Berlin.

Recently the Nazi press has been writing favorably about Constantine Cotzias, minister-governor of Athens, who is said to have been sympathetic to the German regime ever since he visited the Reich two years ago. Cotzias is a capable politician with considerable popularity among certain Athenian circles, but little influence in the country at large. He is reported to be extremely officious.

Praised by Nazi Press

Since the collapse of France, it is said that Cotzias has abandoned his reticence in expressing pro-Nazi views, and the German press sporadically writes about him with at least one article naming him as Premier Metaxas' successor. Informed persons say the prime minister would like to dismiss Cotzias but fears the Berlin reaction.

Some sources claim Athens' governor is perhaps unwittingly the center of considerable pro-German activity. Important visitors from the Reich pay ther respects to him frequently before they call on Metaxas. Rumors of pro-German nature can sometimes be traced back to friends of Cotzias.

Considering Greece's present difficulties army intrigues are still more important. These are largely around Gen. Constantine Platis, who was retired in July for a breach of discipline. Gen. Platis was commander of the Athens garrison—key military unit of Greece—two years ago and was then appointed assistant to the general staff chief, Alexander Papagos.

ignition generators, at Sesto San Giovanni, near Milan.

About half an hour after midnight fires started by the first attackers at the Turin factory led followers to the scene. The bombers were left severely alone by two Italian fighters that came on the scene.

Explosions and lines of fires lit up the Marelli works, sending up a column of smoke 6,000 feet over the plain of Lombardy. Relays of bombers started new fires and blasted the factory with their share of the six tons of bombs before they turned bac kfor the difficult return journey.

The communique did not mention Berlin, where there was a 40-minute air raid alarm last night, but they did say that "the main strength" of the British bomber force last night was directed at northern Italy and against oil plants near Leipzig and Frankfurt.

Night Raids Nettle Nazis

Berlin, Aug. 27 (AP).—Nettled by British raids which on two successive nights have roused Berliners from their beds, authoritative Nazis warned today that "criminal attacks" on civilian objectives in Geemany will draw full payment in kind.

Britain's scattering of bombs over Germany is "completely aimless," said one source, whereas "London knows very well that the German air force has confined itself to military objectives in the vicinity of the English capital."

Only one of a squadron of British bombers was able to reach Berlin in an attempted raid last night and it came over at high altitude, dropping no bombs, the German wireless reported.

All other British planes, it said, were forced off their course at the town of Brandenburg, about 37 miles west of Berlin, by antiaircraft fire. Minor damage was reported at Hamburg.

Sub That Scored Hits on Scheer Is Believed Lost

London, Aug. 27 (AP).—The Spearfish, adventurous submarine which torpedoed the German pocket battleship Admiral Scheer last April 11, is "overdue and presumed lost," the admiralty announced tonight.

The Spearfish, a 670-ton vessel which normally carried 40 men, had one narrow squeak last October on a raid on Helgoland Bight. Sighted there, she made a crash dive to the bottom. German depth charges blew away her periscopes, wrecked her wireless and disabled her engines. But the submarine survived, even though the wires of German sweeps scraped her conning tower.

When the Germans left, she surfaced, repaired the radio and got aid from a destroyer.

Then, when the Nazis invaded Norway, the Spearfish had her revenge. The admiralty reported that more than one torpedo from this venturesome underwater boat had hit the Admiral Scheer on April 11. Whether the German ship was sunk was not stated, but heavy damage was declared certain.

British Blows At Libya Ports Slow Italians

Severe Setback Seen On African Campaign; Drive on Egypt Likely

By the Associated Press

Cairo, Egypt, Aug. 27.—British naval blows against Bardia and Bomba in Italian Libya were reported today to have inflicted a severe setback on Italy's North African campaign.

The British navy belatedly announces that its forces August 24, for the second time within a week, had "successfully bombarded" both Labyan war ports, making the Bardia attack "at point-blank range."

Full details have not been disclosed, however.

Many observers here believe Marshal Rodolfo Graziani, the Italian commander, will be forced to start a drive against Egypt soon despite any reverses because, they say, constant British air and sea bombardments, with consequent disorganization of war preparations, cannot be withstood indefinitely.

(The Italian high command on Sunday announced that two British destroyers began a night bombardment of Bardia, but were attacked by Italian bombers "and put to flight.")

Egypt's political situation, meanwhile, was confused when Premier Hasan Sabry Pasha announced his cabinet was holding office despite an earlier announcement that it had quit.

Egyptians Warned

Rome, Aug. 27 (AP). — Virginio Gayda, Fascism's chief editorial spokesman, warned Egyptians today against opposing Italian efforts to drive British troops from their country if they wish to keep their independence.

The warning was the second issued in as many days by the authoritative editor in the newspaper Il Giornale d'Italia, indicating Italy's intention eventually of attacking in the Egyptian sector to prevent it from becoming a springboard for a British thrust at Italian Africa or Italy herself.

Il Telegrafo of Leghorn, Foreign Minister Count Ciano's newspaper, says it is "sure" that Marshal Rodolfo Graziani's "sword will cut the enigma" raised by the "threat" to Italy from Egyptian territory, although the Egyptian people are "friendly."

Gayda said a large part of the Egyptian nation was hostile toward the government's pro-British attitude and "favorable instead to a friendly understanding with Italy."

Aimed at British

Italy was not thinking of fighting Egypt, he repeated, but only of dominating the British forces with the idea of making Egypt "really independent." He cautioned the Egyptian nation against "letting itself be trapped into misunderstandings by British maneuvers."

General Ilio Jori, a military expert writing in Il Corriere Padano, said Khartoum, capital and principal garrison city of the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, and Nairobi, capital of Kenya colony and a railroad center, were likely objectives of the next Italian offensives.

Occupation of Khartoum, besides giving Italians possession of rich cotton lands in the Middle Nile, would cut Britain's rail and river communications between Egypt and Central and South Africa.

Mexico's Bank Chief Resigns In Move to Aid Gen. Almazan

"JUST VACATIONING"—Gen. Juan Andreu Almazan, independent candidate for President in the still unsettled Mexican election last month, was pictured on arrival yesterday at Mobile, Ala. Montes de Oca's Action Seen as Bringing Pressure on Cardenas Regime in Behalf Of Candidate Now Reported to Be in U. S.

By Jack O'Brine

Mexico City, Aug. 27.—Luis Montes de Oca, president of the Bank of Mexico, was reported tonight to have submitted his resignation to the government in a move synchronized with efforts of Gen. Juan Andreu Almazan's oppositionist party to bring pressure on the Cardenas administration.

News of the resignation circulated through the capital soon after confirmation of Gen. Almazan's arrival in the United States created a furore in political circles that had not been equaled since the oppositionist presidential candidate left Mexico unexpectedly on July 17, ten days after the disputed election, for a "vacation" at Havana.

While press dispatches said that Gen. Almazan had headed north after arriving last night incognito at Mobile, Ala., sources close to the Government understood that he already had succeeded in returning to Mexican soil, and insisted that his every move would be watched in an effort to intereept any revolutionary attempts that he might make.

One spokesman in the camp of Gen. Almazan's government-sponsored opponent, Gen. Manuel Avila Camacho, said: "We hear that Gen. Almazan has crossed the Mexican border. If this is true, he had better watch his step; the government is watching him closely. Should he start anything, he would be caught like any small fry."

The resignation of Montes de Oca was said to represent a severe blow to the administration, since the noted banker directed its financial policy. It did not come as a surprise, however, because of the general knowledge that the banker was chief financial counsel of the Almazanista party.

The two political developments brought hurried conferences in several parts of the Federal District. One of the most important was held, of all places, at the Munich beer hall in Central Mexico City. There Gen. Emilio Madero, president of the Oppositionist Party, met with the chief military counselor of the party, Gen. Jacinto Trevino, repudiating reports of the latter's arrest. Other anti-government leaders were also in attendance.

The principal topic of this conference was said to have been Gen. Almazan, the strong man from Monterey, whose plans are not always revealed to his lieutenants. It was indicated, however, that this time they had been apprised of his move, although up until a few days ago he was thought to be planning to return to Mexico by way of Guatemala.

Nazis Turn to 'Large Scale' Action With Increasing Fury

By the United Press

Berlin, Aug. 27.—The German air force, turning to a new phase of "large scale action," is blasting the British Isles with 125 tons of bombs a day and the fury of the siege will increase steadily until the British are beaten into submission, Nazi quarters asserted tonight.

The great naval bases of Portsmouth and Plymouth have been hammered mercilessly during the past 48 hours, as well as 17 plane and arms factories in Coventry and factories in Birmingham and other cities of the industrial Midlands, it was stated.

Nazi spokesmen said that in the last 27 days 1,055 British planes have been destroyed—at the rate of one every 40 minutes—and that the German air force has lost only 271 planes in that period of the massive assaults.

The 1,055 British planes included those shot down in air battles, knocked down by antiaircraft fire over German territory and detroyed on the ground at British airdromes. In addition, it was said, 98 British barrage balloons have been shot down.

During battles Monday the high command said that 61 British planes were shot down and nine others destroyed on the ground. The Germans admitted the loss of 21 planes.

The German high command today reported the further aerial blasting of Portsmouth and Plymouth and the destruction of a radio station in the Scilly Islands in the Atlantic off Land's End.

Although the German air force was said to have turned from "armed reconnaissance" against the British Isles to the new phase of "planned large-scale operations against military objectives" it is still using only a part of the strength at its command, an air force spokesman said.

In "relatively restricted attacks" Monday, it was said, about 60 tons of bombs were dropped on the 17 airplane and arms factories in Coventry and another 60 tons on factories in Birmingham and other cities and towns.

"After the dropping of numerous bombs, fire and explosions occurred at many points, particularly Hull and Plymouth," the high command said.

Three merchant vessels sailing in a convoy north of Fraserburgh received several heavy hits, the high command claimed, and it added that "during the hostilities several air battles occurred which were successful for the German airmen."

Hedge-Hopping Tactics

Berlin, Aug. 27 (AP).—In their latest forays against the British today, the Germans reported a squadron of new Dorniers successfully resorted to low-flying strafing—sometimes only 6 feet from the ground—to avoid British antiaircraft fire.

Seven British planes, were declared shot down and a barracks and hangars destroyed in one hedge-hopping attack on an airdrome near London. The German flight captain was killed.

"Bits of timbers from living quarters, steel helmets and uniforms and human bodies were hurled pell mell through the air," an account of the attack said.

Willkie Registers To Vote in N. Y.

New York, Aug. 27 (AP).—Wendell L. Willkie today signed the register of the board of elections as a resident of the Fifteenth Assembly District, where he told the officials he had lived for 12 years, at 1010 Fifth avenue.

Destroyers Convoy Refugee Ship

American Legion, Bringing Norse Royalty, Due Today

By Otto D. Tolischus

Copyright by New York Times

Aboard the American Legion, Aug. 27.—After a voyage through perilous waters which made her the object of world-wide anxiety the refugee ship American Legion, with the Norwegian Crown Princess, North and South American diplomats, and more than 800 American war refugees aboard, is scheduled to arrive at New York tomorrow morning.

Since 4 p. m. yesterday, she has been under a convoy by two United States destroyers which met her 500 miles out at sea to provide an honorary escort for the Crown Princess and to demonstrate to Germany that the United States is still recognizing the exiled royal family as the de facto rulers of Norway.

The last lap of her trip has been favored by blue skies and a glassy sea.

Voyage Called "Criminal Folly"

During her voyage which began at Petsamo, Finland, August 16, the American Legion had to brave uncharted Russian, German and British minefields; had to pass through the combat zone barred by the United States Government to other American ships, as well as through the zone of Germany's "total blockade" in which the Germans threatened to sink every neutral vessel on sight, without warning.

The latter threat especially became a grim reality when German radio stations, heard abroad, began to denounce the trip as a "wanton voyage of criminal folly," and when Lord Haw Haw broadcasted from Germany that only a miracle could bring the ship safely through the danger zone.

Toward the end of the voyage officers of the ship discovered a stowaway, a pretty blonde Finnish girl, Leona Aino Hirmukallio, 17. She left a well-to-do home in Helsinki to come aboard with a regular passenger on the transport.

"I always wanted to go to America," she told Capt. Torning. "This seemed to be my only chance."

The women who died aboard were Mrs. Anna Margarete Lundum, 55, en route with her 29-year-old daughter from Copenhagen to San Francisco, and Mrs. Beda Maria Swanberg, 49, en route with her husband and two children to Monroe, La. Mrs. Lundum, who was carried aboard, died August 11, before the ship sailed.

passage would not vary greatly from this vote.

Senator Walsh declared the draft bill was misunderstood by the Nation.

"A tremendous awakening is coming to the country," the Massachusetts Senator said, "when fathers and mothers learn this is a draft in peacetime to become a soldier in the Army of the United States, and if Congress says so, he (their son) can't get out in a year."

Supporting Walsh's proposal, Senator Danaher (Republican), of Connecticut, said there was "no military necessity for such huge army contemplated by the bill except to fight someone else's wars."

"What war are we preparing for?" he asked.

"We are preparing not only for the probabilities, but also the possibilities," replied Majority Leader Barkley.

"I'd rather have an army and not need it than need it and not have it."

Applause rang from the galleries at his statement, bringing a reproof from the chair.

In the evening session, the Senate agreed to an amendment of Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas, rewriting the section exempting legislative, judicial and executive officers of the Federal Government and States. Only such executive officers would be exempted "whose continued employment is necessary to the maintenance of the public health, safety or interest" of the Nation.

The Senators also modified the job-guarantee proviso to provide that if a draftee has to sue in the courts to get his job back and wins, the employer must pay him back pay for the period of litigation.

It was also provided that any man laid off from his job within 30 days after the bill's passage and who is later drafted, shall come within the protection of the rehiring provision. Senator Pepper (Democrat), of Florida, author of the amendment, said he had been informed some firms have notified employes that if the draft measure passed, they would be immediately discharged to avoid the rehiring clause.

Yesterday morning the talk was resumed, with two-hour-long speeches against the bill by Democratic Senators Johnson, of Colorado, and McCarran, of Nevada, and less lengthy orations pro and con by other Senators.

Meanwhile, the House Military Affairs Committee acted on several amendments but delayed a vote on the draft measure itself until this morning, when the group meets for what leaders hope will be the final session on the bill.

The committee at a morning session agreed to limit to 900,000 the number of drafted men who can be in active service at any one time. A similar restriction was written into the Senate version of the bill on Monday.

Also adopted were amendments granting conscripted men the right to vote by mail and directing employers to rehire them at the end of their service. The latter proviso conforms to language carried in the Senate bill and the National Guard mobilization measure.

Later in the day, the House committee raised the 900,000-man limit to 1,000,000 to permit men to be drawn for service in the Navy and Marine Corps above Army needs.

Senator Johnson attacked the draft bill as a violation of "every tenet of democracy" and "the first step toward the Fascist state." Conscription, he contended, threatens America's future "even more than does the current crop of European dictators and the subversive agents violating our generous hospitality."

"How short-sighted are industry and capital to be building such a Frankenstein," he declared. "If we are justified in conscripting lives, how can we expect the conscripts to hesitate over conscripting property?

"The two eventually must go together, and the two will go together. The conscript, inwardly resenting the imposition of such drastic action upon his life, will have no compunction about conscripting property when he finds himself propertyless and discouraged with the struggle for a chance to live."

Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, took issue with Johnson on the latter's argument that the draft was unnecessary because volunteers, better trained in mechanized warfare, are what is needed.

"I'm no more of a lover of conscription than any of you," he declared, "but I'd rather have conscription and not need it, than not have conscription and need it."

Senator McCarran took William C. Bullitt, Ambassador to France, to task for his recent speech advocating conscription and declaring Hitler would invade the United States if England falls. He called Bullitt a "minister of propaganda" who "emulates the technique of Herr Goebbels."

Senator Lundeen (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota, took the floor late in the afternoon and held it for several hours, speaking in opposition to conscription. He declared that supporters of the measure were "interventionists and world saviors" and denounced England as attempting to get the United States into the war.

Senator Smathers (Democrat), of New Jersey, announced his support for the bill in what he called the "shortest speech in the Senate during the four years he has been here." Declaring that every Senator knows how he is going to vote, he added:

"Let's stop serving the country with talk—speeches. The people of the Nation in this hour of world crisis are demanding of the Senate body—action. Let's vote."

Ringside Table

With Mary Harris

SEPTEMBER FIREWORKS. Right after Labor Day comes the Fourth of July—in the night spot world. Fall openings will be popping all through September. First off will be the Metronome Room, handsomely redecorated and with a new "big name band," on Friday, September 6.

The Troika, we hear, will stage its opening party on Thursday, September 12. The Carlton's Shar-Zad will toss a dare to superstition by opening on the following night, Friday the thirteenth. Shar-Zad has been completely done over, though retaining the Arabian Nights motif.

Raleigh's Pall Mall Room will probably reopen on Thursday, September 26, with Bert Bernath's Orchestra. Ethel Fistere and the Arthur Murray Dancers will be featured, also the Pall Mall Saturday fashion luncheons. A new dance music unit will arrive in the Cafe Caprice on September 23 for the "fall opening party" (though Caprice is really open all the time). September "fall openings" will also be star events in the topflight Lounge Riviera and Rainbow Room.

Latest fall openings will be those of La Salle Versailles and the annual "champagne and orchids party" in the Mayflower Lounge, both due early in October.

Adele Van, Glen Echo's lovely "sing song girl," has some marvelous prospects for next winter. Milton Herth (recent Neptune Room Hearthquake) has offered her a position with his recording group, one of the country's finest. And a scout from Monogram pictures has been hanging around the Glen Echo ballroom.

DANCERS' THOUGHTS. Have you ever wondered what dancers think about when they're doing waltz whirls? The Lotus' Wes Adams and Lisa are giving patrons the lowdown on this angle. Verra fonny. Good for loads of giggles, too, is this team's skit on a dance rehearsal. Both of these numbers are getting their first airing this week . . . Cardmaster Rinaldo is currently recruiting aides from ringside tables. They begin by giving him a card and the next thing they know they're out in the spot light as a part of the act.

SHOW STOPPERS. New York gave a rousing confirmation to Washington's enthusiasm for St. Clair and Day, dancing stars of the Shoreham Terrace. At their recent appearance at the State Theater, in New York, they had to do no less than five encores at each show.

NOVELTIES IN RHYTHM. New Bavarian. "The Jolly Coppersmith" as played on bottles by Owner Fritz Muller and all of his bartenders. It's almost a bottle orchestra.

Rainbow Room. "The South American Way" going a fancy way with Milt Davis doing the rhythm on the novachord and Durward Bowersox' violin taking the melody.

Lounge Riviera. Any interlude trio by Trumpeter Art Humes and Bassist Jerry Rhodes, with Jimmy Nichols at the celeste. The rhythm would shake down the chandeliers, except that Riviera has indirect lighting.

Casino Royal. "Man Who Comes Around," in the new dress given it by Jack Schaeffer. There are new lyrics, too, and such ones!

Hi Hat. "Can't Help Lovin' That Man of Mine," as sung by Marianne Lee and swung by Tom, Dick and Harry. Blue as the Caribbean.

Mayfair. The uncanny version of "Ol' Man River" being tossed at his dear public by "Mousey" Garner. Every levee is washed away when "Mousey" bears down on "Ol' Man River."

Fine plans are brewing at the Robin Hood. After September 1 there'll be a "surprise" in diversion. Right now Warbler Betty Davis and Pianist Bob Brewer are making Robin Hood one of the liveliest after dark spots.

MOTORISTS' GUIDE. Out Bladensburg way you'll find Del Rio in full swing with songs amusing by Jack Wells, songs romantic by Bonnie Fleming and smoothie dance music by Ray Bradfords Band . . . Also near the Peace Cross is the congenial Rustic Cabin, with its fancy food and beverages and novachord music . . . Down on the Mount Vernon boulevard is the Gay Nineties, with Al Oddenes vivid dance music and jolly, intimate atmosphere . . . Also on this beautiful road is River Bend, noted for George Stein's hotcha rhythms, superdelicious chicken dinners and those Wednesday night "Piggy Parties" . . . Three miles below Alexandria you'll find the Nightingale, home of the big Rod Raffell Orchestra, that scorns to play anything but the sleekest and newest of 1940 hits . . . Heading out on the Marlboro pike you'll arrive at a wonderful spot, Maryland Gardens, where you can dance until 2 a. m. to the tunes of Nadines Co-Eds . . . Also on Marlboro pike is O'Donnell's Farms, headquarters for "plantation dinners" and Les Colvin's songs.

Sunday was a hectic day for Mrs. Steers

Last Sunday morning the classified section of The Washington Post carried an apartment-for-rent advertisement for Mrs. Ethel Steers. This four-line ad completely described Mrs. Steers' furnished apartment at 7308 Georgia Ave. N.W. Here's what happened: By 8:30 a. m.

Post readers began calling in person, since Mrs. Steers had no telephone. She scarcely had time to prepare her breakfast. By 10:30 a. m.

Nine applicants had inspected the apartment, giving Mrs. Steers ample opportunity to choose the applicant she liked best. At 12 noon

A very desirable couple knocked at the door. They liked the apartment; Mrs. Steers liked them. A satisfactory agreement was reached and they made a $20 deposit on the apartment. But the day had not ended for Mrs. Steers. By

2 p. m.

The afternoon crowd of apartment seekers were out in spite of the rainy weather.

8:30 p. m.

Persons were still coming in response to the apartment ad in The Post, and Mrs. Steers says, "I was worn out from repeating over and over that my apartment was rented."

Need we add . .

The Post gets action in a hurry? If your apartment is vacant, phone NAtional 4200 for a resultful Post want-ad—a two-line ad costs only 40c!

The Federal Diary:

Defense Housing To Be Split Up

Best-Equipped Agency in Particular Locality to Get Work

By Edward Ryan

President Roosevelt said yesterday that the Government's defense housing program would have to be handled by several agencies, rather than assigned to any one organization.

The question of what agency will get any particular defense housing project, he suggested, would depend on where it was located.

The President said that two main objectives would govern the defense housing program, first to get as much private capital into the job as possible, and second to clear as many slums as possible.

He outlined the probable method for handing out housing assignments through a series of questions at his press conference. He asked whether, in a city where the Federal Housing Administration had done a good job, the FHA should not be assigned to handle housing projects for defense workers. In another defense center, he suggested, where the United States Housing Authority had already handled dwelling projects, it would be given the assignment.

President Sees Wagner

The Navy and Army, he indicated, might logically provide housing for its own employes and service men at air bases and other establishments not near a town where other agencies would do the job.

Earlier the President conferred with Senator Wagner (Democrat), of New York, father of the United States Housing Authority.

Senator Wagner said he would back a move to provide $100,000,000 for defense housing, and let the President say which agency would be given the funds for building. He said the President's aim is to keep the program flexible so that the agency best equipped to do a given housing job would be given the assignment.

Senator Wagner said he saw "no logic" in the National Advisory Defense Commission's proposal to give up to $150,000,000 to the Public Buildings Administration for defense housing projects. He expressed the belief that the USHA, and other agencies with organizations for housing and experience in housing work should have a part in the program.

Housing at Defense Plants

The Defense Commission's proposal was introduced in the House late yesterday by Chairman Fritz Lanham of the Public Buildings and Grounds Committee. The bill would authorize later appropriations up to $150,000,000 for the PBA to build dwellings for workers in defense industries.

Lanham said his bill has nothing to do with slum clearance, or with providing quarters for enlisted men of the Army or Navy. It is a national defense housing bill, he said, to provide necessary but temporary homes for workers at defense industry plants.

The bill specifies that on any defense housing project the average cost per dwelling unit would not be more than $3,500. He said the Public Buildings Administration should be given the job because, through its construction program, which has included postoffices, customs house, embassies and other Government buildings, they have developed a national organization prepared to handle defense housing.

Lanham said hearings on his bill will start at 10 a. m. tomorrow, and that testimony about defense housing needs would be sought from the Army, Navy, Defense Commission, and other agencies.

The PBA, it was suggested, might tie up with the RFC mortgage company which is preparing to finance about $50,000,000 worth of defense dwellings for the Navy. The PBA is already drawing up some housing plans for the Navy.

Philadelphia Judge, World War Hero, Dies

Philadelphia, Aug. 27 (AP).—Judge Theodore Rosen, 44, of Common Pleas Court, who lost an arm and the sight of one eye in the World War, died today of bronchial pneumonia at Mount Sinai Hospital.

For "gallantry in action" and "extraordinary heroism" he was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross. A lieutenant in the 315th Infantry, Seventy-ninth Division, he drew the fire of a machinegun nest and allowed two other offices to escape. He suffered 19 bullet wounds.

Roosevelt Chooses Senator Lucas to Direct Campaign in the Corn Belt

tires Saturday, and a discussion of Frank C. Walker as his probable successor, preceded an intimate conference with Senator Lucas, of Illinois, on Midwestern campaign strategy.

The Presidein received Lucas, his Midwestern campaign manager, after advising reporters that he didn't know a thing about politics. He smiled when he said it.

Lucas, placed in complete charge of the Roosevelt campaign in 13 States, including Wendell L. Willkie's native Indiana, told newsmen the crucial election test will come in his region. He declined to forecast the outcome in any of the 13 States, except his own. Illinois, he said, would go Democratic.

Organizes Trouble-Shooters

With the President, Lucas discussed setting up Midwestern headquarters Monday in the Stevens hotel, scene of the Democratic convention. He will build up a "trouble-shooting" campaign organization, he said, with New Deal authorities on major domestic issues called in to help. Representative Marin Jones, of Texas, chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, already has been placed in charge of the farm phase of the Western campaign, Lucas said.

The Lucas organization, which will also include top-ranking New Deal spokesmen on the labor and race questions, was seen as the Administration's first answer to Willkie's challenge in the Middle West. The Republican nominee, bidding strongly for the farm vote, is expected to operate from his own and his wife's farm in Indiana.

Stop at Own State

Asked why he was short on predictions, Lucas said:

"I never make wild forecasts. I know the situation in my own State and will stop there. I believe this whole region is pivotal and will determine the outcome of the election. For that reason, we are going to work at once, and I will give my whole time to it. I have been promised full authority, subject only to the national chairman (Edward J. Flynn)."

The Illinois Senator, who heads up the Senate's Midwestern farm bloc, was among those who stepped aside for Secretary of Agriculture Wallace in the Democrat's Vice Presidential nominations at Chicago. He said he has occasionally differed with the President on domestic matters, but on foreign policy Mr. Roosevelt has been "uncannily 100 per cent correct. And this election is going to hinge on foreign policy."

The Midwestern Roosevelt campaign organization headed by Lucas will operate in Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Illinois, Ohio, Kentucky, North and South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas, Missouri, Iowa and Indiana.

Madden's Term Expires

Remaining big vacancies in the New Deal official family were discussed earlier as J. Warren Madden's term as chairman of the National Labor Relations Board expired and decision was withheld on a successor to Farley.

Probable reappointment of Madden to another Labor Board term was believed the upshot of talks with Senator Wagner, of New York, and Secretary of Labor Perkins. If Madden, target of much anti-NLRB criticism, fails of confirmation, two other names have been prominently mentioned for the post. They are Msgr. Francis J. Ryan, of Catholic University, former member of the old National Labor Board, and Harry A. Millis, professor of economics at the University of Chicago and former member of the old board.

Magnesium METAL

THE STORY OF A SUCCESSFUL AMERICAN ENTERPRISE

IN FEBRUARY 1940, The Dow Chemical Company stepped up its production of magnesium from 6,000,000 pounds to 12,000,000 pounds a year.

One month later it authorized the construction of plants to double the production again. By December, 1940, Dow's production of magnesium metal will be at the rate of 25,000,000 pounds a year. Further increases in facilities can quickly be provided as needed.

This statement on increased production is of interest because of the rapidly growing acceptance of DOWMETAL*, the magnesium alloys produced by Dow—and particularly because magnesium metal has become so vitally essential in the construction of airplanes.

Magnesium's principal characteristic is its extreme lightness combined with surprising toughness. It is a full third lighter than any other metal in common use. There are four outstanding facts to be noted concerning the present status of this exceptional material:

First—Dow created and owns its methods of production. It pays no patent royalties on the production of magnesium metal to any foreign sources. Magnesium metal production is a free and clear American enterprise in every respect.

Second—Dow licenses magnesium fabricators without license fee or royalty. More than a score of such fabricators are now making DOWMETAL parts under such free license.

Third—Dow, by pioneer work that started 20 years ago, has made available a low-cost domestic supply of magnesium metal. Previous to that time magnesium metal had to be secured from abroad at a well-nigh prohibitive price.

Fourth—Through increase in acceptance and production, Dow has been able to reduce the price steadily through the years. When Dow entered the field, magnesium metal was selling at $3.50 a pound. Today this remarkable metal is selling at 27 cents a pound—an all-time low.

L'Affaire Paish

There seems to be some doubt as to just what Sir George Paish said to Senator Burton K. Wheeler in a conversation which has caused a vast deal of useless fluttering in Capitol dovecotes.

According to the Montana isolationist, the septuagenarian British economist told him that he, Paish, was "responsible for getting this country into the last war" and intends "to get it into this one." According to Sir George the statement he made to Senator Wheeler was much less categorical—and less boastful.

But whatever Sir George actually said or is alleged to have said is of very little importance. He is on no official mission. He has had no connection with the British government in years. He represents nobody but himself. Moreover, as a propagandist he is obviously a complete washout.

The fact that Sir George bearded Burt Wheeler in his lair to plead the British cause proves that he is either monumentally naive or extremely vain. Certainly there is no evidence that, as a result of the visit from the aged British visitor, the fine wine of Mr. Wheeler's isolationism was in any measure diluted.

The surprising thing is that Sir George was ever allowed to leave his native land for a private lecture tour in this country. It is obvious that he is doing no service to his country.

But Senator Wheeler and his fellow isolationists should not quibble about that. Sir George has given them a fine opportunity to raise a hue and cry over British war propaganda and delay a little longer getting down to the business of hastening defense preparations in this country. For their purpose if Sir George Paish had never existed it would have been necessary to create him. For the public at large the Paish affair is a terrible tempest in a tiny teapot.

Part-Time Executive

Harry L. Hopkins resigned as Secretary of Commerce because he was able to spend only six hours a day at his desk. He is reported to have held the view that any Cabinet member should be able to give at least twelve hours a day to his official duties, if necessary.

President Roosevelt accepted Mr. Hopkins' resignation because he at last came to realize that his friend and political adviser was not physically able to carry on. That decision was widely approved because it opened the way for the appointment of a competent executive to this important post. But the White House now suggests that the law forbidding one person to hold two Federal offices be modified so that Jesse H. Jones may become a part-time Secretary of Commerce.

As head of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, Mr. Jones acquired a reputation as an efficient administrator. In reward for his services the President elevated him to the recently created post of Federal Loan Administrator, which gives him control over all the Government's lending agencies. Under his general supervision Federal establishments lend billions of dollars to business concerns and individuals.

In addition to the RFC, the agency headed by Mr. Jones controls the Federal Housing Administration, the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation, the National Mortgage Association, the RFC Mortgage Company, the Disaster Loan Corporation, the Export-Import Bank and the Electric Home and Farm Authority.

Supervision over this far-flung empire of lending establishments imposes on Mr. Jones an enormous responsibility. And that responsibility is being further increased by the extensive lending of Federal funds to private industries expanding their plants for the production of defense equipment. Still another problem of vast magnitude may fall upon Mr. Jones' shoulders if Congress passes the bill to increase Export-Import Bank funds available for stabilizing loans to Latin-American countries.

To suggest that a man already exercising these vast powers is the only suitable candidate for the Secretaryship of Commerce is to assume a grave paucity of executive talent in the Administration's following. In these critical times, when the revitalization of industry is of the utmost importance, the Department of Commerce should be directed by an experienced business or industrial leader. That executive should know the problems of private enterprise and have the full confidence of businessmen in working out those problems. It would be absurd to assume that no qualified person willing to give full time to the position can be found.

Mr. McNary At Salem

The acceptance speeches of Vice Presidential candidates seldom prove to be landmarks in American political campaigns. It is not the privilege of men who hold second place on a national ticket to proclaim new policies or even to command too much of the spotlight of public interest. Rather, their task is to extend and supplement the main currents of thought to which their party is committed.

Senator McNary's acceptance address at Salem yesterday fits well in this traditional pattern. His central theme was essentially the same as that of Wendell Willkie at Elwood, Ind. He is looking forward to new growth within our democratic system. He calls for a renewal of "faith in the future, faith in work" and confidence in the ability of the people to work out their own destiny without bureaucratic domination from Washington.

It is the "pioneer tradition" that Mr. McNary seeks to recapture. Nor was it merely sentiment which turned his thoughts to the men and women who settled the Oregon country without the aid of Government subsidies or direction. Many who are far away from the pioneer tradition realize that a human quality of inestimable value has been weakened during the last seven years.

Men and women have lost the spirit of self-reliance, of fighting their way through adversity. Millions of families cannot be taught to cast their burdens upon a benevolent and increasingly powerful Government without undermining the moral fiber that was so vital in the development of this great country.

Mr. McNary takes vigorous exception to the theory that the United States has passed its maximum period of growth and is now "finished." In this critical period he insists that the Nation must be strong, and that it can become strong by recapturing the "virtues of work, thrift, and self-denial for the common good." That hopeful, forward-looking theme has now unquestionably become the focal point of the Republican campaign.

If the Senator's speech had been confined to his one point about the interrelationship between agriculture and industry it would have been a valuable contribution to our thinking on current problems. "Statisticians," he said, "find an uncanny correspondence between gross farm income and industrial pay rolls in a given year." Farm income and factory pay rolls rose together in 1929 and fell together in 1932. Prosperous industry and full employment create new demands for farm products, and increased buying power on the farm in turn means more factory jobs.

The Roosevelt Administration has forgotten that basic fact. It has attempted to create an artificial prosperity for farmers which could not be sustained because industry and employment have failed to expand.

Much less can be said for some of Mr. McNary's specific proposals for the benefit of agriculture. It is futile to denounce reciprocal trade agreements and to propose a two-price system for agriculture under present conditions. Neither the Senator nor anyone else can foresee what machinery the United States will need for the conduct of its foreign trade a few months or a few years hence. Decisions on such issues must necessarily be postponed until the conditions to be met are far less confused than they are today.

The Battle Continues

The "preliminaries" are over, according to Dienst aus Deutschland, in an authoritative commentary on the Battle of Britain. The real show now begins and with it the "planned destruction of industrial plants essential to war."

This boast that Germany has only just begun the fight against her sole surviving enemy in the field may be primarily designed to reassure German public opinion. It would not be surprising if there is concern in Germany over the failure of the luftwaffe thus far to deal a knockout blow to Great Britain. Such warnings of the horrors yet in store for the British would also aid the psychological offensive which the Third Reich has employed with considerable effectiveness against each of its enemies in turn.

Nonetheless, the announcement of Nazi war plans in advance does not mean that they will not be carried out. The very fact that the aerial onslaught against Great Britain to date has not given the Germans complete mastery of the air over England, and that it has not destroyed the British readiness to continue fighting, makes it all the more necessary for Germany to redouble her assault.

Within a month bad weather may make impossible a continuous aerial attack on Great Britain; it will certainly make effective bombing of particular points difficult. And if the war is prolonged into the winter, Italy's internal weakness plus increased shipments of planes and military supplies to Great Britain from the United States and the dominions may tip the scales in favor of the British.

It is during these next weeks, therefore, that the Nazis have their best chance of winning mastery of the air over Great Britain. That is, no doubt, why a change in the German bombing tactics has been carried out. In the first place, the attack on London with incendiary bombs indicated that the German raids will no longer be limited to military objectives but will also seek to terrorize the civilian population.

In the second place, mass raids are now being undertaken only against coastal points. The attack on the Midlands and other places in the interior of England is left to small and widely scattered groups of raiders.

The effectiveness of these new tactics can be estimated from the results of the raids on Saturday and the first part of this week. Though carried out with far fewer Nazi planes than were employed in the raids of August 11 to 16, these bombings did a great amount of damage. But the British are noted for the punishment they can endure. And they continue to carry the fight back to German soil. Grim as the outlook is, it cannot yet be assumed that the Nazi boast is well founded.

Defense Highways

Reexamination of the United States' highway system in the light of possible military needs becomes an essential part of the defense program. If that study should result in the construction of new modern thoroughfares between Washington and Baltimore and between Washington and Annapolis, far more than military needs would be served.

In any program of building defense highways, strategic factors must, of course, be given first consideration. From this viewpoint it may be that the limited funds available for this purpose can be spent to better advantage on projects remote from Washington. That is a matter for military experts to decide.

But in any event, the preparation of plans for modern four-lane highways between Washington and these two adjacent Maryland cities would not likely result in any loss. Some day such highways must be built for civilian traffic regardless of what their strategic value may be. And it is to be hoped that the time for commencement of these projects will not be too far distant.

Prohibition In France

The gradual passing of the France that Americans knew is no more startlingly illustrated than in the recent Vichy decree, one of a series to create a "new strong nation," curtailing the sale of strong liquors. Following this initial step, the Petain government may eventually order all Frenchmen who can get it to drink only milk; to bathe as often as Americans are supposed to do, and to sleep with their windows open. In that event, France will simply not be France any longer.

Whoever knew a real Parisian who, except where infants are concerned, didn't regard milk with suspicion? Many of them are equally convinced that night air is bad for the health. And the most exotic of our memories of a year's residence with a French family centers about the apparatus used for heating bath water, which, on the one night a week we summoned courage to tackle it, always exploded.

For the present, the new modified prohibition is strange enough. Take away your countrymen's aperitifs, Gen. Petain, and what will happen to their custom of two hours off for lunch? Perhaps one result of France's tragic defeat will be a transition of the French into a nation of nervous hustlers, just like Americans.

"Our grandfathers got along without paying any attention to vitamins," declares a writer. They got along, yes, in a manner of speaking, but did you ever dig up an old album and take a gander at how they looked?

'Female Of The Species'

New Orleans Times-Picayune

It requires almost no effort to put two and two together to make five, and by reading a couple of other items in conjunction with that report from Oklahoma City, one may emerge with a wonderful set of wrong conclusions. The report from Oklahoma City is that the board of directors of Oklahoma's Business and Professional Women's Clubs have gone on record urging Congress to draft women as well as men should it ever get around to doing anything about conscription. The other items referred to are (1) that out of every 1,000 women and 1,000 men arrested during the first half of 1940, according to the Department of Justice, 13 women were charged with murder compared with 10 men, and 55 women charged with assault, compared with 52 men; and (2) that 127 Illinois farm folk, according to the Illinois Agricultural Association, were hurt by cows during 1939 compared with 46 injured by bulls.

Personally we think these statistics absolutely irrelevant to the make-up and motives of the board of directors of the Oklahoma B. and P. W. Clubs and their followers. Far from expressing a desire to do bodily harm in a legal way, the resolutions they have adopted show plainly that when services, "military or otherwise," are called upon for national defense, the women want it understood merely that they are here too and that they are Americans, just as President Roosevelt said the Canadians are.

"Food Is War"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Hoover's suggestion that America send food to the Nazi-occupied countries of Europe is an invitation for England and America to commit national suicide. This will not seem an extreme statement if we think clearly about realities. England's blockade of Germany is her strongest weapon and it is unthinkable either that America should ask England to throw it away or that England should do so.

England is fighting with her back to the wall for freedom, human rights and all that makes life worth living—America's battle as well as her own. Germany lusts for world dominion, flouts morals, ethics, religion and fanatically concentrates her formidable power on mass murder, bombings and machine gunning. The moral issues are clear; no greater contrast exists in world history.

That Mr. Hoover recognizes the danger of helping Hitler is evident from his plan to obtain "pledges" from Germany not to take any more food from conquered countries, to replace food already taken, to permit imports from Russia and the Balkans and to allow disinterested control of distribution.

Suggestions from other sources are that Germany share her plentiful supplies of food with her victims; that no food for conquered countries should go to men working there on munitions for Germany, or to prisoners of war tilling German soil; that Germany should cease converting 1,000,000 tons of potatoes a year into fuel alcohol, cease depriving its people of fats to manufacture nitroglycerin, cease using milk to make casein for plastics for airplanes and cease trying to starve English women and children.

But German pledges are worthless, the Hitler promises being no sooner made than broken, and it is certain that all food sent to Europe would support Germany, either directly or indirectly.

Mr. Hoover's forecast of starvation is considered a gross exaggeration, but this is unimportant. American public opinion will never favor helping Hitler, regardless of the guise in which the proposal is made. Misguided pacifists and sentimentalists may urge the humanitarian view but "food is war" and the greatest kindness we can show is to unite with England to defeat Germany. Then when the risk of our national destruction is past, and not till then, should we feed the victims of Hitler's unprovoked blitzkriegs.

Wealth-Drafting

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A very illuminating bit of information was heard on the Senate floor during the debate on drafting wealth as well as man power, when Senator Lee in condemning the arms manufacturers who put patriotism on a dollar and cents basis said "and yet they are expecting Congress to draft man power to protect their wealth."

This is particularly revealing when we know that these same interests have been in the forefront of the fight to saddle the American people with compulsory military training—and now we know why. Senator Lee frankly let the cat out of the bag. No more honeyed phrases about fighting for democracy and preservation of liberty. Such statements as Senator Lee's should be headlined for Mr. and Mrs. America, who are called upon to sacrifice all today, to read and think about.

We ordinary Americans have no ax to grind for bigger and bigger profits. Therefore, we don't want to see our man power drafted to preserve the wealth of a few warmongers who themselves refuse to contribute anything for defense.

Army Pay

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We of the National Association of Regulars would like to compliment The Washington Post and, through you, Westbrook Pegler for his very excellent article in The Post of August 20 entitled "Let's Boost Army Pay."

Those who have been regular readers of Mr. Pegler during the years since he transferred his writing ability from the sports section to the editorial section of The Post know that he is not a sentimentalist and that he is very apt never to express an opinion until he is sure of his facts. He has proved this in the past by his attacks on dishonest persons in all walks of life. His attacks have usually been followed by the conviction of the wrongdoer of the charges first brought to light by Pegler.

For this reason we of the National Association of Regulars are more than pleased that Mr. Pegler has come to our assistance in the fight which we have carried on for several years to increase the pay of enlisted men of the Army. We have felt and still feel that it is ridiculous for a Nation which has for over six years paid a monthly wage of $60 to some 2,000,000 or 3,000,000 people on WPA relief rolls to say they cannot pay equivalent wages to 1,000,000 soldiers conscripted for the defense of the country.

Mr. Pegler's article will do much to untangle some of the thinking in Congress and to cause our representatives there to awaken at last to the fact that the soldier, like the laborer, is worthy of his hire.

American Munitions

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Partnership in crime is a distinct violation of moral law, whether engaged in by an individual or a nation, and in any common court would be punished.

Even silent consent to a crime, without positive protest and due effort in prevention, involves the individual or nation unmistakably. When the first Christian martyr, Stephen, was stoned to death, the Apostle Paul gave criminal consent by allowing the active participants to lay their outer garments at his feet while he merely looked on.

Japan has not formally declared war against China, but for more than three years has wantonly and cruelly invaded that country, using munitions the United States made possible with shipments of scrap iron. Of course our Government did not officially furnish the material, but persistently permits the wrong, and is thereby "particeps criminis."

Secretary Hull deserves high praise for his endeavor to stop the wicked complicity in crime as a Nation. Moreover, by furnishing the British and French with "sinews of war" in their crusade against Germany and Italy our United States of America are definitely partners in the warfare so terribly being waged. Therefore we should not be surprised if China, Germany and Italy retaliate with invasion of our land by sea or air.

"Let justice be done though the heavens fall," is not merely a trite saying. Eternal principles are involved therein. Men and nations must face it.

Opposes Debate

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In reading the daily papers, I am more than surprised that, while you play up Mr. Willkie's challenge to a debate, you do not point out that when Lincoln challenged Douglas both were candidates in a State election and Lincoln was not President. Of course, I consider Mr. Willkie's challenge an impertinence and his reiterations just a fog of hot air to cloud the issues of the campaign, if there are any issues. The platforms of the two parties are the same.

I would also think that the papers would consider that it would be impossible for the President to desert his office and run over the country for 2½ months, merely to speak from a political platform. You have doubtless seen that "warning" which is posted on the bulletin boards in all Federal buildings. It says that no one who is paid from the Federal exchequer may participate in political activities which interfere with the course of his duties. I imagine that this, aside from any other considerations of war and desire, would keep the President from the speaking tour Mr. Willkie would like to participate in.

Another thing you have failed to notice: Mr. Willkie enumerated various "Presidential giants" who had not run for a third term. How many of them had a third term offered them? Lincoln, whom he mentions, was assassinated during his second term.

ANTI-WILLKIE.

All Of Them

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Since reading about Dr. Gallup's amazing discovery that the American people are 2 to 1 in favor of conscription, I have been no end puzzled, and finally resolved to ask of you a few questions.

First, I want to make it known that I am wholeheartedly opposed to compulsory military training. And a second important point—I have conscientiously taken a poll of the sentiment among my close friends and coworkers, with the result that I can say that for this cross-section of young American working people, the overwhelming feeling is one of opposition and a determined desire to do everything within their power to prevent a peacetime military conscription measure from becoming law.

Therefore, I am writing now to inquire how, where and when Dr. Gallup gathered his information. Did the people he approached know what his vaguely and intentionally misleading question meant? From what strata of American life did he poll his answers—Wall street and Park avenue, or New York's tenements, tenant farmers, migrant workers, and the unemployed? In other words, were these the answers of those who stand to profit by conscription and war, or of the millions of working Americans who have nothing but disease, death and curtailment of liberties to expect from war?

CONNIE MATERE.

Dillydallying

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is the opinion of the writer that there is no time to dillydally with those obstructionist politicians, either at home or at Washington, who are holding up our defense program.

We must build up our defense program now or never. The enemies of democracy are all around us, east, west, north and south. They could attack us if they find that we are dillydallying and playing politics when we are badly in need of building up the greatest defense program that the world has ever known. The hour is here, let's hope that our Government is strong enough to step on all of those who are against our preparedness.

We have the wealth, we have the goods, we have the liberty and we must protect them all.

The Post Impressionist

Ozark Foot-Washing

A GOOD-SIZED CROWD was gathered outside the weather-beaten white schoolhouse that also served the little Ozark community as a church. The men were dressed in overalls or khaki work clothes. The women wore faded print dresses; for the most part they had their hair pulled taut over their skulls, with a straggly knot at the back. Some of the boys sported white dress shirts, open of course at the collar, and a few girls wore rayon dresses, bunched at the wrong places.

The men stood in groups and told how their crops were burning up and their cattle suffering for water. Among them the candidates for county offices, with election time less than a month away, circulated, with hearty handshakes, vigorous backslappings and loud laughter. The women discussed—I don't know what, for it would have been a gross breach of etiquette for a man to have joined one of their groups. The bolder of the boys and girls chatted together with shrill laughter and coy giggles.

A cracked bell clanged from the little steeple and we filed into the bare room, where school benches served as pews and the teacher's desk as a pulpit. Babies in various stages of grime, wetness and vocal protest crawled about the floor or writhed in their mothers' arms.

The elders took their places along a pew facing the people. The leader of the congregation, a pudgy youth, stood at the desk and requested the singers to come forward. With much giggling a group of a dozen girls and four boys, the latter looking greatly discomfited by the possession of a pair of hands apiece, came to the front. After prolonged whisperings and thumbings of paper-backed hymn books, one of the girls raised a voice incredibly shrill and loud in the strains of "The City Where the Lamps Are A-Light." Uncertainly, but with ever-increasing volume and shrillness, the others joined in, till the room palpitated with the dizzy thuddings of the vigorous rhythm, sustained by bellows from the boys and marked by the heavy stamping of many feet. After a dozen hymns, none of which I had ever heard before, had been sung, the singers returned to their seats.

The leader then introduced the preacher of the day, a tall, angular man in a soiled white shirt and black trousers. He sprang to the floor, walled back his eyes, threw up his hands, reared back, and began to prance about the narrow space. His voice was remote and strange, and every third word was a gasping "Amen!" His discourse, what with the theatrical manner, the running commentary of pious interjections, and the screamings of the multitude of babies, was difficult to follow, but from what I gathered he was rejoicing that he was saved.

After about an hour of this he got down to the business of the day. The leader of the congregation was appointed the Scripture reader. He read the text for the day, verse by verse, and the preacher interpreted each verse, turning it into colloquial talk, acting it out with much prancing about, and dragging in unrelated texts from other sources. At this point I seemed to feel a need of air and left for a bit. This attracted no attention, for the room was in a constant commotion of comings and goings.

When I returned, the Communion was being celebrated. The saved, some 18 girls and women and 6 men, were standing at the front of the room, and the preacher passed down the line with a plate of crackers and a glass of grape juice while the singers rent the air.

Then benches were arranged in two rectangles, facing inward, the women in one inclosure and the men in the other. A large basin of water and a towel were placed in the center of each group. The members took off their shoes and stockings. The leader of each group rose, shook hands with the person on his right or kissed him (curiously enough, the women shook hands, while the men gave each other the true ecclesiastical kiss of peace) and knelt before him. Then he very thoroughly washed the feet of the person before whom he knelt, drying them on the towel girt about his middle. The one whose feet had just been washed in turn washed those of the one on his right.

All during this time the choir continued its ear-piercing work. As the ceremony progressed, the women became more and more moved. Two or three of them began to shake violently, and finally one screamed loudly and threw herself on the floor. Some looked at her in pitying silence and others clapped their hands and began to shout.

A stern-faced woman, bent with work in the fields, vaulted over the restraining benches and danced about in the aisles, the pins coming loose from her knot and the hair hanging about her face. As the emotionalism mounted, other women, screaming or weeping, joined her in the convulsive dance.

The choir pretended to ignore all this, and the other members of the congregation gave each other furtive looks of shamed embarrassment. Some of the other women took charge of the dancing ones as their possession left them and quieted them down, rearranging their disheveled clothing and twisting their hair back into place.

Quite suddenly it all ceased. The trembling women put on their shoes and stockings and resumed their seats, and the preacher launched on a long prayer of thanksgiving for the outpouring of the Spirit that they had been privileged to share.

The congregation was dismissed by a noble old fellow with a mane of white hair, who thanked everyone for coming and invited them, one and all, to visit him down at the mouth of Music Creek whenever they passed that way.

Hopkins' Influence

By Ernest K. Lindley

Champion Of Lower 'One-Third'

THE DEPARTURE of Harry Hopkins from the Cabinet is being cheered, chiefly by people who never knew him and are still unable to accept the policies for which he fought. It would be deeply regretted by many others if it meant the complete loss of his influence on the course of public affairs. It will not mean that. His exchange of letters with the President hinted of the strong ties between them. He is, in fact, probably the President's most intimate friend. At the White House, at Hyde Park and on week-end cruises, he has been almost continually at the President's side for many months.

The friendship between the President and Hopkins is relatively new, although they met in 1928. Three years later, when New York, under Roosevelt's leadership, became the first State to recognize an obligation to aid the unemployed, Hopkins was made head of the State relief agency. When Roosevelt set up the first Federal Emergency Relief Administration in 1933, he put Hopkins in charge of it.

HOPKINS RAPIDLY became one of the President's more important advisers, but this close official relationship did not at once develop into intimate friendship. At first Hopkins' best avenue of approach to the President was through Mrs. Roosevelt, whose deep sympathy for the underprivileged was in tune with Hopkins'. When the President's oldest son, James, came to Washington as his father's secretary in 1937, Hopkins took him under his wing and gave him much good advice. The tragedies in Hopkins' life—the loss of his wife and his own serious illness—brought him into even closer contact with the Roosevelts. By 1938 he was almost a member of the Roosevelt family.

His quick mind, gift for jaunty repartee, and good fellowship seemed to appeal to the President. Certain of his deep-seated convictions jibed with the President's. And he was unquestionably loyal; ready, when beaten in argument, to carry out the President's decision. Temperamentally he is not unlike the President; mercurial on the surface but consistent in his major purposes.

FEW REALIZE that Franklin D. Roosevelt is really a lonesome man. He talks much, but rarely unfolds himself to anyone. Hopkins seemed to suit him, although there is a trace of father-son relationship between them.

Hopkins and Robert H. Jackson were the proteges whom Roosevelt seemed to regard as best fitted to succeed him. Henry A. Wallace, with whom he was less intimate, was not far below them.

The influence of Hopkins has trickled into so many fields that it is difficult to trace. Always he has been a tenacious champion of the lower "one-third" of the population. He knew their problems as a welfare worker in "the good old days" when those problems were more largely individual than they became when the great depression struck. But when the times required it, he lifted his sights.

Hopkins was the head and symbol of the first great acknowledgment that the resources of the Nation, through the Federal Government, should be used to keep American citizens from starving. His own most notable contribution was the further idea that it was better to let them keep themselves from starving through useful public work than to hand them baskets of groceries or cash doles.

HARRY HOPKINS
"His mark is registered at the higher level of national policy"

HOPKINS FOUGHT incessantly for work-relief. In 1933 he put across the civil works program, which at its peak gave employment to more than 4,000,000 persons. When that was abandoned, he resorted to an emergency work program through the Federal Emergency Relief Administration. And in 1935 he ushered in the Works Progress Administration.

There were many faults in the execution of these programs—although probably no more than with other programs of comparable magnitude, including the mobilization and training of the United States Army during 1917-18.

Hopkins shares with the President the responsibility for making useful work, instead of idleness on the dole, the chief means of Federal aid to the unemployed. This was an important step toward the establishment of the fundamental principle of the right to work.

Hopkins was crucified in the press. The attack was more often on the performance than directly on the fundamental principle—but the most relentless attacks came from those who, in the last analysis, were opposed to the principle. It has not been openly accepted even yet by the Republican Party or by its present nominee for President.

WITH ALL of his determination to help the underdog, Hopkins is not open to the accusation of inciting class-consciousness. He was never much interested in the reform of business or financial practices. He saw much earlier than many of his New Deal colleagues, and advocated, a rapprochement with business leaders. That was one reason why the President made him Secretary of Commerce. It was an interesting experiment. If Hopkins had recovered his health he might now be recognized throughout the country as a socially minded friend of business.

As a practical politician, Hopkins is not much, although he may be useful in this campaign in mustering the progressive and independent vote for Roosevelt. His mark is registered at the higher level of national policy. It will be visible, I believe, long after those who have attacked him in recent years have been written off by their descendants as persons of unaccountable obtuseness.

Change Of Heart

IF YOU HAPPEN to know the name and address of a good reliable merchant of death it would be deemed a favor to the people of the United States if you would communicate this information to the proper authorities in Washington without delay. You need not fear that you would be turning him over to the executioner, because all has been forgiven, and our Government would roll out the red carpet all the way down to the Union Station and strew his path with dewy petals. We don't want to kill the merchant of death these days. We want to kiss him and buy his merchandise.

The more diabolical and fatal the merchandise your friend has to sell and the more of it, the happier we would be to make his acquaintance at this time; and we sincerely hope that he will let bygones be bygones and turn to with a hearty good will to build those war tools. It seems but yesterday that we the people were running a high and bitter indignation against those fiends in more or less human form who made money by turning out artillery and shells and ships, shoulder guns, machine guns, bombs and planes which were frankly intended for the taking of human life.

THERE WAS something sickening about the cold ingenuity of men who could actually build big factories where, under black banners tossed to the sky by smoking chimneys, they tinkered and petted the mechanisms of war, stretching the range and accuracy of guns or increasing the power of explosives, and we certainly let them know how we felt about them and their works. Did we pour it on them!

But they seem to have been more sentive than we thought, because it now appears that our merchants of death took shame and died or turned to the manufacture of goods which cannot be relied on to kill except in respectable, if regrettable, traffic accidents on the highways. At any rate, they are hard to find at a moment when it is earnestly desired to buy large quantities of killing machines, and the deadlier the better.

Thus the present situation is once, at least, where it cannot be said that the war, if any, was deliberately promoted by the merchants of death so they could take vast and bloody profits from the suffering of the common man of all nations and his wife and children. On the contrary, the crisis, or emergency, has caught them out of training for their evil work and without plans, equipment or sufficient staffs of skilled and heartless mercenaries to go into production.

AND SUCH has been our change of heart that if the mysterious ogres of Britain, Germany, France and Czecho-Slovakia were to offer to deliver to the United States in quick time an appreciable quantity of things designed to kill we would readily waive our old abhorrence of such monstrous men and do business with them on the nod.

Nor will it seem reasonable this time to blame the war on the international bankers who were said to have caused the last big one and to have kept it going by some process that never was explained in any terms that the groping intelligence of the small people could understand.

They may have started and prolonged that one for profit, but this war was started by three dictators who angrily proclaim their independence of the conventional financiers of the capitalist countries and vow that, when they have finished their job, money and profits, as bankers understand them, will be done. On the contrary, the international bankers were accused this time of trying to appease Hitler and his colleagues, Stalin and Mussolini, and, since appeasement failed, have been blamed for that, proving that the international banker is damned if he do and damned if he don't.

AT HOME the financiers have been annoyingly bashful about teaming up with the merchants of death to buy new plants, and we are getting pretty impatient with them for refusing to unstrap their bank rolls. Their position is that war business is bad business, but the public position is that if men must risk their lives, then Wall Street should be compelled to finance the merchants of death in the production of things that can be relied on to kill.

It looks as though they will be forced to cooperate. We are not going to stand for any pacifistic slackerism on the part of the merchants of death or the big financial interests. In fact, we are more than half inclined to blame them for their failure to continue to turn out war stuff in time of peace in spite of all we said about their brutal creed, in which case, of course, we would have said they deliberately caused the war.

The lamp burns in the window, and we hope they won't be empty-handed when they come home.

Lord Tweedsmuir's Memoirs

AN ANTIQUE dignity stamps the memoirs of the late Governor General of Canada, John Buchan (Lord Tweedsmuir), which he called, remembering John Bunyan, "Pilgrim's Way" (Houghton). It is the story of a boy born on the Scots border when memories of Sir Walter and even of the Jacobin uprisings were still alive; who grew up on border ballads and recognized a kindred world in Virgil and Theocritus; who, accustomed to seeing things in half-lights such as never were on land or sea, in South Africa lived an Elizabethan romance of empire that was part Kipling, part Augustus and all poetry.

"The border shepherds, the men of the long stride and the clear eye, were a great race—I have never known a greater," he wrote. "Their people were 'grave livers,' in Wordsworth's phrases. God-fearing, decent in all the relations of life, and supreme masters of their craft. They were a fighting stock because of their ancestry, and of a noble independence. As the source of the greatest ballads in any literature, they had fire and imagination, and some aptitude for the graces of life. . . . Being in themselves wholly secure, they were aristocrats with the fine manners of an aristocracy. By them I was admitted into the secrets of a whole lost world of pastoral. . . . I have never had better friends, and I have striven to acquire some tincture of their philosophy of life, a creed at once mirthful and grave, stalwart and merciful."

That was John Buchan's credo; that is the keynote of his book. He wrote of an enchanted world that is gone, and de mortuis nil nisi bonum was his motto. He paid gracious and discriminating tributes to scores of the departed great, and criticized few! He had been a Tory even in his Oxford days, though of a Tory group which was ready to disestablish the church and nationalize the land of England; and, never having been quite young, he was yet ready in his age to avow that "some time in my early twenties the arteries of my taste seemed to narrow and harden." He was a son of the manse, but early admitted to intimacy into the great houses of England, and he married into a "county family." Homesick for a past whose disintegration he was intelligently aware, he expressed, in his novels and in disinterested public service, a great, if dying, British tradition.

Sincerly he believed that his upbringing had made "any kind of class feeling impossible" in him. Yet, like so many aristocrats, he understood servants but not upstarts. There is a beautiful self-revelation in his comment on the phrase "middle class;" "odious word" he calls it. In Parliament he could like trade-union officials but he loathed labor party intellectuals. "I respected the working classes so profoundly," he says, that "I did not want to see them turned into middle classes, as some of their patrons desired." His heart was in the Middle Ages.

SOME OF HIS comments on America are banal, some acute. "Half the misunderstandings between Britain and America," he suggests, "are due to the fact that neither will regard the other as what it is—a foreign country." Coming to America for the first time he was amazed that no one had ever told him how lovely the country was. "I mean lovely, not vast or magnificent. . . . I am thinking of the ordinary rural landscape. . . . Most of America, and some of its most famous parts, is pockety, snug and cozy." First among the qualities that flourish most lustily in the United States, he thought, was its "homeliness." The English live in houses; though an American live in a camp he makes it a home. Even the richer Americans he found pleasingly domestic. "In America the kitchen is not too far away from the drawing room, and it is recognized, as Heraclitus said, that the gods may dwell there." However, "this ardent domesticity has had its bad effects on American literature, including sentimentality which makes a too crude frontal attack on the emotions, and which has produced as a reaction a not less sentimental 'toughness.'"

There is a richness and charm to these memoirs of a man who so consciously felt himself born into the wrong century.

Japanese Christians Organize National Church, Oust Aliens

By Hugh Byas
Copyright by New York Times

Tokyo (Wednesday), Aug. 28.—The movement for the eradication of foreign influence from Japanese Christianity is progressing rapidly. A purely national church, tentatively named the Genuine Japan Christian Church, is being organized.

The movement is part of the present wave of extreme nationalism that is sweeping Japan, but Japanese Christians deny hostility to American or other missionaries. The amalgamation is advocated as a means of making up for the loss of foreign donations.

American missionaries are shocked at their expulsion from the churches they have built up, but declare that Christianity after 80 years of mission work is too firmly rooted to be lost.

Following the Episcopal Church's dismissal of foreign bishops last week, 40 Japanese representatives of other Protestant churches met in Tokyo Monday night to discuss amalgamation of the different denominations, the cessation of financial help from abroad, the elimination of foreign missionaries, and Japanese missionary work in Manchukuo and China.

Detailed plans for reform of the Salvation Army are being negotiated between Salvation Army leaders and the Education Department.

Statement Left At White House Condemning Draft

Delegates representing the National Committee to Defend America by Keeping Out of War presented a statement at the White House yesterday in opposition to the President's call for enactment of the Burke-Wadsworth conscription bill.

The statement criticized the President for comparing the need for trained man power to the need of Knute Rockne, late Notre Dame football coach, for reserves of trained football players.

The statement was signed by the Rev. John B. Thompson, chairman, Reid Robinson and Pearl Heart. Those on the presentation committee were John P. Davis, executive secretary of the National Negro Congress; Lucy Hancock, of the Women's Peace Committee; Milton Kemnitz, of the National Federation for Constitutional Liberties, and Basil Pollitt, of the Washington Youth Council.

The Balkan Tangle

Will Hitler Crack The Whip?

WHEN RUMANIA ceded Bessarabia and northern Bukovina to Soviet Russia last June she set a precedent which has since plagued her. Russia was not the only one of Rumania's neighbors with claims on her territory. There was also Bulgaria which for weeks had clamored for the return of southern Dobruja and there was Hungary which had never become reconciled to the loss of the rich and fertile province of Transylvania.

Both of these nations immediately began to put pressure on Bucharest to satisfy their irredentist aspirations. But Carol resisted. He relized that if the territorial claims of those countries were met Rumania would be reduced to half her size.

In an effort to save what he could of his crumbling kingdom, Carol threw himself at Hitler's mercy. Economically Rumania had already been in the Fuehrer's pocket for some time and Carol was well aware of the fact that with the war not over the disrupting effects of a partitioned Rumania would be disadvantageous to the Third Reich. After the loss of Bessarabia and Northern Bukovina he saw to it that his nation became a political and ideological satellite of the Third Reich as well. In a gangster world, he reckoned, the weak must pay for protection.

KING CAROL
"He threw himself at Hitler's mercy"

JOINING the Axis has had only limited value to Rumania, however. In the first place it did not end either Bulgarian or Hungarian pressure for frontier revision. In the second place there was not and there still is no certainity that Hitler can or will protect Rumania against further exactions by Russia.

For some time after the annexation of Bessarabia and Northern Bukovina, however, Russia showed a disposition to be content with the gains she had made at Rumania's expense. But this attitude is, the Bucharest authorities realize, subject to change without notice. They know what happened to Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania which were not swallowed whole but piecemeal but in the long run swallowed just the same. The reports of clashes between Soviet and Rumanian troops along the new frontier may mean, if true, that Russia is again on the march in the Balkans.

In the meantime Rumania has secured only limited aid and comfort from Hitler in her disputes with Bulgaria and Hungary.

IT NOW APPEARS that Rumania has or is about to abandon all efforts to keep any part of southern Dobrudja. That region, it is reported, will definitely be ceded to King Boris' kingdom. But far greater resistance has been manifested by Rumania to the Magyar demands for Transylvania.

Negotiations with Hungary were undertaken by the Bucharest government some time ago. But they broke down in the face of Rumanian unwillingness to satisfy the Magyar demands. This week the negotiations will be renewed, again as a result of pressure from Berlin. But there is no certainty that the latest discussions on the Transylvanian problem will prove any more successful than did the previous parley.

IN ONE PARTICULAR there is an air of unreality about the Rumanian-Hungarian negotiations. In a real sense neither country enjoys independence today. They are at the mercy of the Third Reich although, for the time being, Hitler appears willing to permit them a large measure of internal autonomy so long as they follow Berlin's lead and obey Berlin's orders in external and economic matters. So far as Germany is concerned it makes very little practical difference whether Transylvania is Rumanian or Hungarian.

Yet there is a very sound reason for Rumania's reluctance to give up an inch more of her territory than she absolutely has to. Real as her present state of subservience to Germany may be, there is still no certainty that it will be permanent. That will depend, after all, on the outcome of the present German-British struggle. If Germany wins, what is left of Rumania's effective independence will be doomed, as will the independence of all other still unconquered nations on the continent. If Britain wins, Rumania will regain her freedom of action. But no matter who wins it would be difficult and it may be impossible for her ever to regain any territory she had ceded to her neighbors in the meantime.

It is not surprising, therefore, that Rumania is holding on desperately to what she has while playing for time. For with each passing week of British resistance the possibility grows that the present situation in southeastern Europe will not remain permanent. At the same time the fact that Germany has her hands full at this moment may prevent Hitler from forcing the Third Reich's satellite states to settle their differences peacefully.

The Hungarian-Rumanian border clashes that have occurred during the last few days have ominous overtones for the Fuehrer. They show how precarious his past triumphs, military and diplomatic, may prove to be unless he can win over England. Without that victory all others will be dust and ashes.

'You Can't Win,' British Tell Berliners With Leaflets

By Percival Knauth.
Copyright by New York Times

Berlin, Aug. 27.—The New York Times today was given one of the British leaflets dropped in Berlin Sunday night during the air raid. In addition to a proclamation to Berliners headed "Berliners do you comprehend now," explaining that the "war will last as long as the Hitler regime," the leaflet publishes a list of "facts known to the whole world" and the transmission program of the British Broadcasting Corporation German language broadcasts.

The air blockade, the leaflet states, is purposeless since "in June and July, 1940, the total tonnage in all British harbors was greater than in the same period in 1939 while the total tonnage of the British merchant fleet is 7,000,000 tons larger than on September 3, 1939."

The air blockade, it continues, "is expensive as well—since the middle of June 450 German planes have been shot down on the English coast . . . in attacking a convoy on August 8 the German air force had to use 400 machines to sink 2 small ships—the German air force lost 60 planes and the R. A. F., 16."

Citing Air Marshal Herman Goering's statement that "not a single bomb fell on Ruhr territory," the leaflet states that the R. A. F. dropped "37,000 bombs on Germany in a single month, during which time the Germans dropped 7,000 on England. Continuous British attacks were made on military objects in Wismar, Kassel, Bremen, Goettingen, Rothenburg, Hamburg, Rheinberg, Kamen, Bottrop, Kastrop-Rauxel, Gelsenkirchen, Dortmund, Wanne-Eickel, Gotha, Hamm, Soest, Essen, Gladbach, Duisburg, Ikern, Sterkrade, Paderborn, Diepholz, Osnabrueck; the Dortmund-Ems Canal was destroyed; 31 airports were bombed with heavy calibers, and now, also Berlin!"

The leaflet describes the "power of the British Empire," detailing contributions to the defenses its troops and material of Canada, India and South Africa. Additions to the British fleet were stated to be greater than its losses. The fleet today was said to be stronger than in September, 1939, and fully capable of fulfilling its duties in carrying on the continental blockade.

Public opinion in the United States was said to be "88 per cent for arming against Hitler, at any price."

The leaflet tells of the approval of the conscription bill by the Military Committee of the United States Senate and states that the publisher, William Randolph Hearst, has announced that the "United States is with England in the war against Hitler," while the former Ambassador to Berlin, James W. Gerard, says "in six months."

The leaflet tells of the United States' promise to supply 3,000 planes more monthly to England while President Roosevelt forbids the export of scrap iron and airplane gasoline which is said to be directed against Germany, Italy and Japan, since "England gets gasoline from other quarters."

Gen. John J. Pershing's demand for the sale of 50 destroyers to England, is likewise recounted. The Pan American Conference results were detailed. "Germany will not get the French, Dutch or Danish colonies," the leaflet declared.

Pacifists in Grant's Headquarters 'Turn Guns' on Conscription Bill

(In this day of spreading war, with the words blitzkrieg, conscription and defense on every American's tongue, The Post believes it interesting to present this story of one group, and their leader, who remain undaunted in efforts to prevent war.—Editor's Note.)

By Edward T. Folliard.

As the historical marker relates, the dingy four-story building on the southwest corner of Seventeenth and F streets northwest used to be the headquarters of Gen. U. S. Grant. That was in 1865. Today it is the headquarters of America's No. 1 peace lobbyist—Frederick J. Libby, founder and executive secretary of the National Council for Prevention of War.

Is not this anomalous, a peace advocate holding forth in the headquarters of a general?

"Oh, well," says Libby, smiling, "swords into ploughshares, you know."

Although he might not relish the word, Libby is something of a general himself. He is not the dreamy, impractical type of pacifist, but a realistic, hard-hitting fellow who is a pioneer in the art of "building a fire" under members of Congress. He was urging his followers to bombard Senators and Representatives with telegrams and letters long before Father Coughlin and other fire-builders were ever heard of in this country.

Right now Mr. Libby is training his guns (if he will again forgive a militaristic term) on the Burke-Wadsworth conscription bill, and it is a sizeable bombardment he is laying down, too. This conscription fight is the biggest in which Libby's organization has ever engaged.

Mr. Libby has just ordered 400,000 copies of the anti-conscription speech recently made by Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana. These will be sent out to clergymen, to farm and labor leaders, to the 1,700 volunteer workers in the National Council for Prevention of War, and to the 400 local, State and national organizations with which the council corresponds.

In Peace Action, the council's magazine, Mr. Libby writes:

"Your Senators and Congressmen have never watched their mail more closely than they are doing now. It is running today heavily against conscription—in some offices, 20 to 1; in other offices a bare majority. Can YOU do more?

"1. Write a short, simple letter to each of your Senators and your Congressman. Find others that will.

"2. Write a letter to a newspaper IN A NEIGHBORING CITY, putting your case in your own words.

"3. Propose a constructive substitute such as one-year voluntary enlistment with decent pay."

How is the National Council for Prevention of War financed? Mr. Libby says the money comes from individual contributions, ranging from 50 cents upward. A Washington woman (whose name Mr. Libby asks not be published for fear she will be harassed by others) once contributed $71,000.

Peace Generalissimo Libby is 67 now and white-haired. He started out as a clergyman after being graduated from Bowdoin College and Andover Theological Seminary, and after studying at Oxford and Heidelberg. He was pastor of a Congregational church in Magnolia, Mass., and he taught at Phillips Exeter Academy, New Hampshire, for seven years.

He served with the Quakers and the Red Cross in relief work following the World War, and he became so revolted at the result of war that he resolved to dedicate his life to prevent the recurrence of such a tragedy. He joined the Society of Friends (Quakers) in 1921. In that same year, backed by several large organizations, he established the National Council here.

That was the year of the Washington Conference for the Limitation of Armaments.

Was it a mistake for Uncle Sam to scrap ships then building and tear up the blueprints for others? No, answers Mr. Libby, and he points out that the country was saved a lot of money because the ships would now be obsolete.

In 1928 Mr. Libby fought the bill for 15 new cruisers. He lost that fight. But suppose he had won it; how could he reconcile that with his present advocacy of adequate defense?

"Well, quite true," he says, "but they would be building now if they hadn't been built then."

Mr. Libby argues that the present war could have been avoided if economic agreements had been made with the struggling German Republic. When he is reminded that the German people have been accused of loving the gleam of a sword, of being war-like, he answers that they repudiated their war lords in the early 20's and would even now rather be taking the family out for a Sunday glass of beer.

"Conscription we regard as Hitlerism brought over here," says Libby earnestly. "We regard the Burke-Wadsworth bill as more dangerous to our democracy than anything Hitler can do to us."

"Do you mean," he was asked, "that you would oppose conscription even if it meant a Hitler conquest of the United States?"

"We deny the existence of that danger," he replied promptly. "We point to the problem Hitler is facing in crossing the English Channel; to the undigested 300,000,000 non-German Europeans whom he hopes to consolidate around Berlin; to the rival dictators, Mussolini and Stalin; and we repudiate the theory—for it is only a theory—that Hitler will be ready to attack the United States if Britain falls."

To suggest that Britain would give the British fleet to Hitler, Libby says, is an "undeserved insult" to British character. But even if that should happen, he says, a regular, well-trained American Army of 400,000 ought to be able to meet any emergency, so great are the difficulties of a German invasion.

Mr. Libby charges that President Roosevelt has used events in Europe to scare Americans, and is now using the defense program to "crowd Willkie off the front pages."

Sidelights of the War

Britain Makes Bid To French Colonies

Churchill Offers Economic Aid To 'Loyal' Ones

By the Associated Press

London, Aug 27.—Prime Minister Churchill today assured Gen. Charles De Gaulle, leader of Frenchmen in exile, that economic assistance comparable to that granted the British colonies would be extended to all French overseas territories loyal to the Allies.

The Prime Minister's statement followed an announcement by Gen. De Gaulle that the Governor and commander of Chad Territory in French Equatorial Africa had decided to fight with Britain.

French circles in London regarded the decision as of great importance since Chad Territory borders Italian Libya and the Sudan and is the key to Equatorial Africa.

It was thought here that certain other French African possessions may follow suit.

German Catholic Bishops To Read Pledge to Hitler

Berlin, Aug. 27 (AP).—A solemn pledge of loyalty to Adolf Hitler by the German Catholic Bishops conference at Fulda is to be read to the faithful from pulpits at the end of the war, DNB, official news agency, said today.

The pledge to Hitler is contained in expressions of gratitude to German troops adopted by the conference which ended August 22.

The agency said the view predominated at the conference that "the Catholic Church in Germany is indebted to German troops for the victorious defense of the German homeland."

Eire Blames Nazi Planes For Bombing, Killing 3

Dublin, Aug. 27 (AP).—An Eire corner's jury returned a verdict today that German aircraft dropped bombs that killed three girls Monday at Campile, on the southeastern coast of Ireland.

Several witnesses testified they saw German markings on the plane.

President Blames Delays on Congress

Biggers, deputy production member of the Defense Commission, all designed to show that the plane procurement program is going along well.

Explaining why so many of the planes now under order are training craft, the President emphasized that the United States needs to train large numbers of pilots.

Another cause of delay in production of actual fighting craft, he said, was that a first objective is to expand productive capacity—that is, factory floor space.

Both objectives are coming along in excellent shape, he said.

Still another cause of delay, the President added, was the fact that Congress on June 28 changed the Vinson-Trammell Act profit limits on aircraft from 12 per cent to 7 and 8 per cent. Many contracts had to be rewritten.

Turning to production figures for the Nation's aircraft industry the Chief Executive said the rate was at 6,000 a year last September, is now at 10,000 a year, will be 13,000 by January, 24,000 during 1941, and 36,000 early in 1942.

These figures are not confined to combat planes, or even combat and training planes, but include all types of planes produced in the United States, the President said.

Speaking of actual contracts signed—the point of which Senator Byrd made an issue, the President said the Army and Navy have concluded contracts for 6,381 planes.

In addition, he said, 3,054 Army planes and 00 Navy planes are being worked on by plants without contracts, just on the strength of letters of intention that hold good until Congress passes pending legislation.

Adding these orders up, the President arrived at the figure of 10,015 planes actually being worked on.

The figure, as pointed out by The Post yesterday, includes large numbers of training planes and large numbers of craft that were contracted for before the Defense Commission became active three months ago.

Nevertheless, the President maintained that the best business brains, including William S. Knudsen and Edward R. Stettinius, commission members, are satisfied.

Production of other equipment aside from planes is also satisfactory, the President said.

He said he was told by Knudsen and Stettinius that they discerned no signs of a sit-down strike by industry against the defense program and he also denied that politics might be the cause of some delay.

With some severity, the President refused to make public the industrial mobilization plan that has been drafted since the World War and was revised last year by an industrial group headed by Stettinius.

In answer to a question about the plan, the President asked why he should make it public any more than publishing the plan of the Civil War. We are working in 1940, he said sharply, adding that he was not interested in any old plans.

The report from which President Roosevelt drew his plane figures was described by the White House as a reconciliation estimate to draw together figures from the Army, Navy, Treasury, Congress and the Defense Commission.

Defense Sidelights

Enlistments In Army Fall Back to 8,449

Officers Blame Drop On End of Vacancies For Colored Men

Army recruiting failed last week, for the first time since May, to set a new successive weekly record for peacetime enlistments, but officers attributed the failure to a technicality.

In the previous week, they explained, there was a large number of vacancies for colored men, which always are rapidly filled. As a result, new enlistments exclusive of replacements in the ranks mounted to 8,605.

Last week, with the colored vacancies closed, enlistments dropped back to 8,449.

Representative Rich (Republican), of Pennsylvania, blocked completion of Congressional action yesterday on legislation to increase the number of midshipmen at the Naval Academy on the ground that the House should have more time to debate it.

Under procedure requiring unanimous consent, Chairman Vinson (Democrat), of Georgia, of the Naval Committee, asked approval of the measure, already passed by the Senate. Rich objected.

Contracts for $1,697,256 worth of construction and material granted by the Army and approved by the War Department for building a number of bridges marked national defense action yesterday.

Chief Navy construction was one of $665,000 for new shipbuilding ways at the Boston Navy Yard, awarded to the New England Foundation Co., and $85,618 for improvement of the fire protection system at the Puget Sound (Wash.) Naval Ammunition Depot to J. J. Agutter Co., Seattle.

Supply orders included a wide variety of clothing, fuel oil, tools, propeller shafts and equipment for various depots.

House Votes to Pay Barlow $592,719

An a roll call vote, the House tentatively approved yesterday, 191 to 73, payment of $592,719.21 to Lester P. Barlow, bomb inventor, for alleged infringement by the Government on five bomb patents in the World War.

The House action came after Representative Cochran (Democrat), of Missouri, unsuccessfully tried to cut the payment to $250,000 to give Barlow "the benefit of the doubt and to give the taxpayers a break." Cochran contended there was doubt that Barlow had invented the bombs and read a letter from the War Department supporting his claim that the full amount should not be paid.

as stating the division tentatively was slated to be called October 15. Officials here said the unit probably would not be mobilized until November.

About 1,200 District Guardsmen are included in the Twenty-ninth. They form the 121st Engineers, the first battalion of the 104th Quartermaster Regiment, and the special troops of the division. The District Antiaircraft Regiment has a strength of about 1,300.

Under the mobilization bill, men below the rank of captain are entitled to discharge if they have dependents. Those under 18 years old may not be called. All others must go, and under the measure, employers must rehire them after their military service, unless changed circumstances make such action "impossible or unreasonable." In case of refusal, men can appeal to the courts, with the assistance of the District Attorney's office.

President Roosevelt is empowered under the bill to send the Guardsmen, in case of trouble, anywhere in the Western Hemisphere or American possessions. He recently declared that the chances are 100 to 1 that any of them will have to be sent outside of continental United States.

Axis Strives To Save Peace In the Balkans

Hitler Summons Conference as Soviet, Rumania Clash

troops were killed, had begun after Russians had overstepped the Rumanian frontier at a point where Rumanian troops had been removed for service in Transylvania.

Subsequently the staff of the Soviet Legation in Bucharest confirmed that a bloody clash between Soviet and Rumanian troops occurred Sunday and Monday with heavy casualties on both sides.

The calling of the Vienna conference was the latest in a chain of events which began Saturday with the breakdown of a Hungarian-Rumanian conference on the Transylvania dispute.

Rumania immediately countered Hungarian strategic measures by moving thousands of troops from Moldavia to Transylvania.

Count Istvan Csaky, Hungarian foreign minister, will go to Vienna.

Foreign Minister Mihail Manoilescu of Rumania, who conferred with the Russian minister today over the clashes, is understood to be going there also.

The opinion was expressed in quarters close to the governments in Budapest and Bucharest that Soviet troops crossed the Rumanian frontier in a major "scouting expedition" to prepare the Red Army for the possibility of a real push in the event that Hungarian-Rumanian differences over Transylvania develop into open warfare.

Thus, some foreign military observers conjectured that perhaps the Soviet's ultimate plan was to profit directly from the current Rumanian-Hungarian crisis over Transylvania.

[The United Press meanwhile quoted neutral observers in Bucharest as reporting—without confirmation—that Germany had increased her eastern armies to 100 divisions, and that Russia had recently been moving troops up to her new frontier with Rumania through Bessarabia and Bucovina.]

Hungary Pulls in Horns

In a second incident further threatening the uneasy peace of southeastern Europe, the Hungarian foreign office accused a Rumanian pilot of shooting down a Hungarian bomber on Hungarian soil today, and protested angrily to Bucharest against what was termed this "unprovoked and murderous attack."

After Hungarian officials had been in communication with Berlin, however, the foreign office spokesman said:

"The attack was provocatory, but we ourselves will not provoke."

The Hungarian official news agency suppressed the news of the bomber's destruction and the newspapers were forbidden to mention it.

In Bucharest, a Rumanian government spokesman said a Hungarian plane had dropped propaganda leaflets in Transylvania on Sunday and that this probably was the craft which the Hungarian foreign office asserted had been shot down.

The Rumanian national press displayed anti-Hungarian editorials. Timpul, the newspaper of former Foreign Minister Grigore Gafencu, declared:

"We have reached the point in negotiations with Hungary (over the latter's demand for Transylvania) where peaceful procedure has failed.

"Hungary must suffer the consequences . . . territories are conquered by war. Boundaries are established by peace treaties. Historical rights cannot be mentioned except as pretexts for a new war."

More sensational, however, was the report of the Rumanian-Russian border fight.

This news was neither confirmed nor denied by the Rumanian government, but a foreign military attache in Bucharest wrote that the Rumanians alone had lost more than 300 soldiers.

Air Battles Reported

His information was that the outbreak occurred just north of the town of Dorohoi, in the province of Moldavia, hard by the new frontier fixed two months ago when the Russians seized Bessarabia and northern Bucovina from Rumania. The fighting, the attache reported, began Sunday when Soviet troops crossed into Rumania proper and was resumed yesterday.

The Russians, he added, were understood to have flown over Rumanian territory and to have shot down two of six Rumanian pursuit ships which rose to the attack.

The Hungarian bomber declared here to have been destroyed was said by the foreign office to have been shot down about 18 miles within the Hungarian-Rumanian frontier. One of its crew of three was declared to have been wounded.

The attacking craft, said the foreign office, was plainly marked with the Rumanian insigna and disappeared after the struggle in the direction of Transylvania.

Hungary's war preparations were speeded up noticeably. Artillerymen facing the Rumanian frontier were ordered to load their guns with live shells; Budapest and other Hungarian cities were under semi-blackouts.

Thus, circumstances appeared to be making increasingly difficult a fruitful resumption of negotiations over Hungary's demand for Transylvania, which was lost to her after the World War.

Nevertheless, it was disclosed during the day that conferences probably would be resumed Thursday at Turnu-Severin, Rumania, where only last Saturday they collapsed and then were urgently and suddenly revived, apparently at the instance of the German government.

Any action, however, must await the return of the German and Italian Ministers to Bucharest and Budapest.

Men of Draft Age Rushing To Wed in D.C.

Record of Licenses For August Near An All-Time High

Young men of proposed draft age are swarming into the marriage license clerk's office at District Court in numbers that bid fair to establish an all-time monthly record in wedding permits by the end of August.

When Mrs. Maud R. Rynes, marriage license clerk, closed her books yesterday, a total of 937 applications had been filed thus far this month. Highest previous month in court records was June, 1937, when 991 licenses were issued. This was prior to the three-day waiting period before marriage became law.

Since the first of August, marriage license applications here have increased from a daily average of 22—established in June, traditional wedding month—to 40.5.

Most of the men applying for wedding permits are between 21 and 31 years old. Highest day of the month was last Monday when 71 applications were filed. A total of 46 were filed yesterday.

It was recalled that in 1917, after the draft became effective, the marriage license figures increased an average of 200 during the next three months, returning to normal after the first of the new year.

FBI Is Probing Paish Charges

A Justice Department official said yesterday that an investigation is being made of charges voiced in the Senate that Sir George Paish, 72-year-old British economist, came here to try to get the United States into the war.

If the investigation reveals that Sir George was here for such a purpose and failed to disclose it in his application for a visitor's permit, this official said, that could be made the grounds for revoking his permit.

Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, said in the Senate yesterday—and Sir George subsequently denied the charge—that the Englishman had told him in a conversation:

"I am responsible for getting this country into the last war and I intend to get it into this one."

Night-Raiding Nazis Again Rob Britons of Their Sleep

then, again caught big crowds in London's West End entertainment spots.

Late dinners were abandoned hurriedly; guests in hotels and restaurants ran to shelter. But theaters continued their shows, their managements making stage announcements of the raid warning.

The punctuality of the raiding Nazis occasioned a good deal of comment. On their first attack they arrived within two or three minutes of the time of Monday night's visitations.

Authoritative spokesmen, analyzing the new trend of the air Battle for Britain, declared: "The enemy has started to train for night work; he is looking for a soft spot because of his series of reverses."

By contrast with Monday night's chain assaults over 500 miles of England and London's six-hour air raid alarm, Tuesday's daylight raids were trivial.

Only a few planes penetrated inland and the only bombs dropped on land fell "on the foreshore of the Isle of Wight," the Air Ministry and Ministry of Home Security asserted.

However, a convoy off the Scottish coast fought an hour's battle with a raiding squadron, with the results unannounced.

Three raiders were shot down today, compared with 47 yesterday.

The Admiralty stated today that naval antiaircraft guns had accounted for 122 German planes up to August 12 and that an additional 64 probably had been destroyed and 45 damaged.

Suburbs Suffer Most

The fleet air force shot down an additional 28 planes and damaged 25 others, many of which "can be considered lost," the admiralty said.

Londoners, nursing an "A.R.P. hangover" from waiting in shelters, theaters and other places until almost dawn Tuesday for the sounding of the "all clear" sirens, were told the raiders which caused the long alarm bombed one district "on the outskirts of central London." Other bombs dropped by some 50 raiders, flying singly or in small clusters, fell in uburbs, and official statements minimized the damage and casualties.

Timed, apparently, to coincide with the Monday night London raid were attacks from northeast England to the southwestern tip of the isle. Typical was the experience of one southwestern town (Berlin said Plymouth was raided) where at least 50 bombs were dropped during the night. Several persons were killed.

One northeastern town had an estimated 40 attackers. They smashed two shops and killed two persons.

British official spokesmen said both England and Germany must concentrate now on the problem of fighter planes intercepting bombers on night flights.

District Budget Must Be Cut by $12,000,000, Board Decides

have the opportunity to retain in the budget items which they consider most urgent.

The Commissioners intend to call before them within the next two weeks all department heads to hear their justifications for their budgets. As soon as these hearings are completed they will begin the pruning process.

The Commissioners' budget will then be submitted to the Federal Budget Bureau, which intends only to determine if the budget will balance and the extent or proportion of funds the Commissioners are including for capital improvements. In previous years the budget bureau held its own hearings with the department heads. Under the new arrangement, whereby the Commissioners have been granted primary control over their own budget, this has been eliminated.

Sidney R. Katz, executive secretary of the Maryland and District Industrial Union Council, appeared yesterday and requested the Commissioners to call a city-wide referendum on the question of the citizens' willingness to pay increased taxes for municipal improvements.

His suggestion found little support among the Commissioners. Katz spoke in favor of an increase of $300,000 in the direct relief fund requested by Welfare Director Robert E. Bondy.

Destined to feel the full extent of the Commissioners' cuts are the schools, health and welfare budgets. The schools seek a $5,581,485 increase over present sums; health, $961,987, and welfare, $1,500,000.

G. L. Shorey, president of the Piney Branch Citizens Association, told the Commissioners lighting along Sixteenth street northwest, between Blagden avenue and Piney Branch Parkway, must be improved to protect citizens.

Leifur Magnusson, representing the Monday Evening Club, indorsed the welfare program submitted by Bondy, and called particular attention to the $300,000 increase for direct relief. He said he would be willing to pay increased taxes in order to provide better municipal service. He suggested a change in law to permit the use of gasoline taxes to defray expenses for other departments.

A demand for more recreational facilities in Forest Hills and for a school in the American University Park section were voiced by Henry Coleman, president of the Northwest Citizens Council.

J. Louis Gelbman, president of Congress Heights Citizens Association, favored a branch library for Anacostia; a new precinct for this section which is now served only by the Eleventh Precinct; a new bridge in line with South Capitol street; funds to complete the Anacostia Junior High School; completion of the Oxon Run interceptor and widening of Alabama avenue southeast, between Fifth and Twelfth streets.

Vernis Absher, of the Southeast Council, said the one "really important" item of need of Southeast Washington is new schools. He called attention to the rapid growth of this section of the city and said the Commissioners apparently "did not realize this fact."

Abscher said Bradbury Heights was also in need of a school. F. Randolph, of the Bradbury Heights Citizens Association, on Monday made a strong plea for this project. Dr. Paul J. Ewerhardt, of the health committee of the Council of Social Agencies, asked the Commissioners to recommend to Congress the $11,400 item in the Health Department budget for establishment of a mental hygiene clinic.

A. D. Calvert, president of the Lincoln Park Citizens Association, renewed his request the Commissioners build a superhighway paralleling the metropolitan branch of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, from Takoma Park to the Washington Terminal as a means of providing quick transportation to the downtown areas.

Miss Etta Taggart, speaking for The Washingtonians, spoke in favor of a domestic relations court to handle adult cases which in turn would reduce the crowded docket at Juvenile Court; more policemen, a new Receiving Home, increase teaching force for "shut-in" children, and increase in the inspection force for the Department of Inspection.

Henry Rhine, speaking for the United Federal Workers of America, indorsed the suggestion of Col. Charles I. Stengle, of the American Federation of Government Employes, to increase the custodial force of 70 schools which now have only one man.

Molly Yard, representing the Washington Youth Council, said the policy of keeping the direct relief budget at its present base was "contemptible and stupid." She said persons denied sufficient relief often entered a life of crime or wound up in the municipal hospitals. She said her group favored the food stamp plan, a better program for "shut-in" children, and more case workers for the public assistance division.

Miss Yard was one of four persons who spoke in favor of increased taxes to meet the needs of the departments to appear during the two days. She favored an increased income tax but opposed a sales tax.

Scalise Informer Expects Murder

New York, Aug. 27 (AP).—An informer against George Scalise, on trial on charges of stealing $60,087 from the Building Service Employes International Union he once headed, testified today "I still think I am going to get murdered."

Madame Chairman

by Suzanne

"ELIZABETH," the Tudor Princess," new biography by Marian King, made its bow yesterday on the book stands. Miss King, who has spent the last nine weeks in Canada, arrived home last Friday in time to see it make its initial appearance.

She has spent the summer vacationing after a strenuous period of hard work when the book was in the making. She sailed, swam, hiked in the mountains, picnicked and, incidentally, gathered material here and there on the folklore of the French-Canadian sections she visited. She lived with a French-Canadian family and had opportunity to keep up her French in conversation with them. What her next book will be she has not yet decided, but it will be a biography.

Although there was comparatively little talk of the war in Canada, one felt it constantly, she said, with men in uniform and other reminders everywhere. In Montreal, she met a mother and two children, refugees from England. The little girl, aged 3, had no color in her cheeks when she arrived. They experienced air raids in Yorkshire before their departure, the mother said, and the child had not recovered from her fright. After she had been in Canad for a while she improved and the pink was gradually replacing the paleness in her cheeks when Miss King left. She took her out walking on several occasions and entertained her with stories.

She also talked to several older English boys and girls whom she met in Westmont Library. They were happy and looking forward in their school work, she said. Realizing there was nothing they could do in the war, they were eager to complete their education. "I want to grow up and carry on," one little lad told her.

OTHER VACATION NOTES—Mrs. James Craig Peacock, chairman of the Vacation Lodge committee of the Y. W. C. A., is on her way home, with Mr. Peacock and their son John, from an extended motor trip in the West. They visited Glacier National Park and the Park Hill ranch in Montana, where their son went early in the summer. He joined them on their trip home, stopping at Lake Louise and Banff on the way.

Mrs. Frederick M. Kerby, president of the Woman's Club of Chevy Chase, has spent part of the summer in Maine with Mr. Kerby who has recovered from a serious illness.

Mrs. Henry deCoursey Adams, vice president of the club, with Mr. Adams, will return this weekend from an automobile trip to Yellowstone and Glacier National Parks, Banff, Lake Louise and a visit with relatives in Detroit.

Mrs. Ben Temple Webster, a member of the board of the Y. W. C. A., will return after Labor Day from a month in Atlantic City and Philadelphia.

Mrs. Carl Plitt, of the Woman's Club of Chevy Chase, has returned from a stay on the New Jersey Coast and in Maine, where she visited Mrs. Dudley Holtman, also a member of the club. She was accompanied by Mr. Plitt, their son Fred and daughter Marjorie.

PLAN FOR FALL—Mrs. George Landick, jr., chairman of the program committee of the Woman's Club of Kensington, yesterday entertained members of her committee and of the advisory board of the club at luncheon at her new home in Kensington.

At a business meeting following, the program for the coming season was outlined. Mrs. J. Staley Elms and Mrs. John T. Graff are other members of the program committee. The meetings this year will be monthly instead of twice monthly as before.

BIRTHDAY PARTY—An impromptu birthday celebration was arranged Monday in honor of Mrs. Henry M. Robert, jr., president general of the National Society, Daughters of the American Revolution. Members of the staff at headquarters arranged a party, birthday cake and all, in her office.

FINAL MEETING—Representative Frank H. Buck, of California, will address the final meeting of the summer study group of the Women's National Democratic Club today at 11 a. m. His subject will be "How Shall We Finance National Defense?" Mrs. Philip F. Dodson will preside and Mrs. Helen Moodie will suggest a reading list.

PRE-SEASON DANCE — Phi Sigma Kappa Fraternity Monday night gave a dance at the chapter house, 1765 Massachusetts avenue, in honor of members of Pi Beta Phi Sorority and prospective freshmen registering at George Washington University.

Debt Moratorium Provided Draftees

and sergeants will see their salaries boosted to $54 and $80, representing raises of $12 and $6, respectively.

The amendment of Senator Maloney (Democrat), of Connecticut, which would delay conscription until an intensive recruiting campaign should prove a failure, provides for a monthly pay scale of $36, $54 and $80 in these categories.

The pay of higher ranking noncoms would remain the same at at present under both amendments. Disposition of the salary provisos awaits final passage.

The Senate, drastically split on other phases of conscription, agreed last week to this principle: Draftees shall suffer no financial loss that can be averted by legislation, after they join the armed forces.

The War Department on August 12 had proposed a debt moratorium plan under which courts would be empowered to order temporary deferment of rent, insurance and taxes of men called up for service.

August 19 the Senate adopted an amendment offered by Senator Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, granting trainees special protection from seizures, foreclosures and other loss when they shift out of private jobs to a soldier's pay.

A House committee, however, is now working on separate legislation.

The moratorium plan, which almost duplicates the World War Civil Rights Act, is expected to operate in this manner:

Should a conscript leave behind him a piece of mortgaged property, the moregagor would be barred from foreclosing, in the discretion of the court, should he fail to meet payments. Interest, however, would accumulate and the trainee would have to pay the accrued amount within a given time after his discharge from training.

Under the proposal in the House committee the Veterans' Administration would be authorized to guarantee payments of a conscript's insurance premiums during his year of service, but he would have to pay them after his return to civil life in order to hold his policy.

In the case of rent, a man's family could not be evicted because of his failure to pay rent for a stated period, probably three months. (At present no men with dependents would be called up unless the latter are self-supporting. Should the emergency become sufficiently acute, however, it is entirely possible men with dependents might be drafted.

The proposal excuses trainees from taxation while they are serving in the armed forces.

In the World War the Army provided men could "allot" part or all of their wages to be sent directly to their families. This practice will probably be resumed upon commencement of conscription today, selective service experts say.

Two Government buildings turned on their heating systems yesterday as Washington's weather continued erratic and damp. For today the Weather Bureau promised more rain and continued rain.

Although no records were set, the mercury shuttled between 60 and 69 yesterday and a persistent rain kept Washingtonians indoors. Heat was turned on in the Navy and Munitions Buildings, while workers in other Government buildings continued their daily shiver.

White House Boat Meets Norse Royalty Today

Crown Princess and Children to Leave Ship At Quarantine; Mrs. Harriman, Minister To Oslo, and Mrs. Sterling Also Aboard

By Hope Ridings Miller.

NORWEGIAN ROYALTY and star-spangled United States celebrities will be the center of attention when the S. S. American Legion sights the Statue of Liberty at noon today.

Among the notables coming in are Crown Princess Martha of Norway and her three children, Princess Ragnhild, Princess Astrid and Prince Harald; the United States Minister to Norway, Mrs. J. Borden (Daisy) Harriman, and Mrs. Frederick Sterling, wife of the United States Minister to Sweden.

Hope Ridings Miller

Spectators who stand at the dock with the hope of catching a glimpse of the Crown Princess and her children, however, will be disappointed. Her Royal Highness and members of her entourage will be met at quarantine by a White House boat and brought in with a minimum of fanfare.

The visitors will be taken directly to the Waldorf-Astoria, where a royal suite is in readiness for them, and tomorrow, they will leave for Hyde Park to visit Mrs. Roosevelt. Later, the Crown Princess and her children are expected to make their home in nearby Virginia for the duration of the war.

In New York to meet Her Royal Highness are several members of the Norwegian Legation, headed by the Norwegian Minister, Wilhelm Munthe de Morgenstierne. Among those in the group are the Naval Attache, Commodore Per Askim, and the Military Attache, Col. Oscar Klingenberg. With them is C. J. Hambro, speaker of the Norwegian Parliament, who has been in this country about a month.

MME. MUNTHE DE MORGENSTIERNE, who has been spending the summer at Osterville, Cape Cod, is also in New York to meet the royal family. The Minister is expected to return to Washington Friday.

In New York especially to greet Minister Harriman, when the boat pulls into dock around 1 p. m. today are Miss Maxine Davis and Max Stern, who left Washington late last night and will return early tomorrow. Mrs. Harriman is expected to come to Washington in the next few days.

Mrs. Sterling, who is a daughter of "Ma" Williams—Mrs. John R. Williams—probably will be in Washington within the next few weeks. Her many friends are hoping she will spend the winter here. Shortly after the powder keg blew off in the Scandinavian countries, most wives of members of the American Legation staff scurried away from Stockholm. But the former Dorothy Williams, who loves nothing better than being in the thick of any excitement, stayed with her husband in the Swedish capital. Their two sons and their daughter, however, were sent to safer realms.

SOCIETY-GO-ROUND: Mrs. Paul V. McNutt returned to Washington yesterday from Boston, where she has been visiting friends . . . Mrs. Crosby Miller, who has been the guest of her sister, Mrs. Crosby Hornblower, in New York for some time, will be back at her home in Warrenton, Va., this afternoon . . . After an extended trip to the West, Assistant Attorney General and Mrs. Sam O. Clark will return to the Capital this afternoon or early tomorrow. They made a series of visits in Washington State and stopped at the Yellowstone National Park en route home . . . Edith Wright, daughter of Mrs. J. Butler Wright, is visiting Helen de Limur in Newport . . . AND—There's a romance brewing between Anne Bullitt, daughter of Ambassador William Bullitt, and Harry Balfe, son of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Balfe, of New York. Incidentally, he's a cousin of Mrs. Gary Cooper.

Mrs. Carl Farman Sails for Chile

Mrs. Carl H. Farman, wife of Dr. Farman, and her daughter, Elsa, are en route to Chile, where they will spend three months. They sailed Monday on the Chilean Imperial and will go directly to Santiago.

Before returning to Washington, they will make a series of visits with relatives in southern Chile. Mrs. Farman, a native of Chile, has not been in her country for ten years.

Birth Announced

Mr. and Mrs. N. J. Greenberg, of 7420 Georgia avenue, announce the birth of a daughter on Sunday, August 25, at Garfield Hospital.

Mrs. Gray Home From Dayton Rites

Mrs. George A. Gray, of Chevy Chase, Md., and her daughter, Miss Jacquelyn Gray, recently returned from Dayton, Ohio, where they had gone to witness the unveiling of the memorial to the Wright Brothers.

Capt. Gray, a pupil of the Wrights, was the first aviator to cross the Adirondack Mountains. The feat took place in October, 1912, in a Model B, 35 horse power Wright machine. Capt. Gray was one of the 17 early pilots to be present at the ceremonies last week at Dayton. His name is on the scroll of honor on the bronze table on Wright Hill.

Selected as "A Spirit"

Miss Marcella Chandler, lovely daughter of Senator A. B. Chandler of Kentucky and Mrs. Chandler, has been selected by her State as "The Spirit of Kentucky" to attend the Tennessee Valley Celebration at Chattanooga, Tenn., from August 30 through September 2. At that time President Roosevelt will make the principal address for the dedication of the entire chain of TVA dams and lakes of the seven valley States. "Spirits" of the different States will take part with the "Lady of the Lake" in numerous street and water parades, and will be on the speakers' platform for the dedication. Miss Chandler, who has just finished her first year at Stevens College in Columbia, Missouri, spent her Easter holidays here in the Capital last season and will accompany her family here in September. Though the Chandlers have in previous years had an apartment at the Mayflower they will take a house in town this fall for the season here

The Hunt Country

By Nina Carter Tabb

A HIGHLIGHT of the coming very gay week-end will be the cocktail party to be given by Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Winmill on Sunday at their Warrenton home, Clovelly. They have one of the largest and loveliest estates around here and are both charming hosts. Guests will be able to enjoy tennis and swimming or just sitting around on the lawn.

Martha Scott and Frank Lloyd, stars of "The Howards of Virginia," which was made in part at Williamsburg early this summer, have been invited to the Monday performance of the Warrenton Horse Show. There is much local interest in the stars, as residents of Williamsburg and students at William and Mary took part in the movie as "extras." The actors are coming to Richmond for the premiere of the picture on September 4. They will attend the Winmill cocktail party if they get here in time, and will also be entertained at luncheon on Monday with the officials of the Warenton Horse Show Association.

Several Washingtonians will show their horses on Saturday and Monday, and the State of Virginia is represented from every quarter, with over 500 entries altogether. They include many champions from prominent stables such as those of Mrs. Forres Sherman, Lieut. Fred J. Hughes, Miss Nancy Hanna and Lieut. Col. Charles B. Lyman, all of Washington.

Mrs. Altemus Whitney is expected to return from Hollywood in time to ride some of her famous mounts. Ernest Redmon, of Middleburg, will be represented by several entries, and Mr. and Mrs. George P. Greenhalgh's Springbury string from Berryville will be shown.

Mrs. James Hamilton's Dunnattar Farm will be well represented and her three children, Peggy, Jimmy and Barry, will ride. Other exhibitors include Crispin Oglebay, of Gates Mill Stable, Ohio; George C. Lee, of Norfolk; Mrs. Marion T. Shotter, Glen Head, Long Island; Ray S. Shoemaker, Harrisburg, Pa.; Robert S. Waters, Johnstown, Pa.; Mr. and Mrs. W. Haggin Perry, Cobham, Va.; Mrs. Cary Jackson and W. B. Bogart, Keswick; A. R. Heinrick, Bethesda, Md.; Mrs. A. Teller Archibald, The Plains; Benton Stables, Mrs. Daniel C. Sands, Middleburg; Donald C. Bradley, Silver Spring, Md.; Manley W. Carter and Mrs. Mary K. Drewry, Meander Farm, Orange, Va., and Mrs. Howard Mirillat, Toledo, Ohio.

DON'T FORGET that this is the second day of the forty-first annual Orange Horse Show, at Orange, Va., proceeds from which go to the Red Cross.

Among the horses and exhibitors to be seen at Orange are Gay Cockade, owned by W. G. Boger; Fire Chief, Miss Elizabeth Lloyd; Redport, Edgewood Farm; Union Jack, Mrs. Mary Drewry; Blaze Terpin, C. M. Greer, jr.; Golondrina, Mrs. James C. Hamilton; Inky and Balkonian, Mrs. George Watts Hill; Croyden Park, Smoulder and Prossic, Mrs. Cary Jackson; Gay Blade, Mrs. Austin Jennings; Spanish Spear, Mrs. Dorothy N. Lee; To Victory, Mr. and Mrs. W. Haggin Perry; Royalty II, Robert S. Waters; Black Caddy, Fred J. Hughes; Step Along, Miss Jamie Terrill; The Bear, Spring Hope and Bon Nuit, Mrs. Altemus Whitney.

Other exhibitors include Mrs. Marion duPont Scott, Miss Elizabeth Steig, Mrs. H. T. Holladay, Ernest Redmon, Wilber Osborne, Dr. Lewis M. Allen, Howard N. Butz, Truman Dodson and J. North Fletcher.

J. C. Montgomerys Will Live Here

After September 1 Mr. and Mrs. John Clyde Montgomery, who were married on Sunday, will make their home in Washington. The bride is the former Miss Helen Malinda Thompson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. V Thompson, of Augusta County, Va.

The ceremony took place at the Thompson home, Miss Janet Thompson serving as her sister's only attendant. Hyde Kerr, of Staunton, Va., was best man.

Biddles Attend Christening As Godparents

Officiate at Rites Here for Infant Son Of John B. Hendrys

Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Drexel Biddle, of Philadelphia, are in Washington for a few days and are staying at the Carlton Hotel. Yesterday afternoon they attended the christening ceremony of John Charles Hendry, son of Capt. and Mrs. John Burton Hendry. Mr. and Mrs. Biddle were in the Orient while Capt. Hendry was stationed there, and also while the baby's grandfather, Col. Charles F. B. Price, had a Far Eastern assignment.

After the christening, at which the Biddles officiated as godparents, Col. and Mrs. Price entertained at a small reception at their home on Bancroft place.

Mrs. Hendry and her two children, Elizabeth Burton and John Charles, have been staying with Col. and Mrs. Price while Capt. Hendry has been with the fleet in the Pacific. The latter part of the week Mrs. Hendry will leave with her children for California.

Mrs. Monroe To Give Tea

Mrs. J. Elmer Monroe will entertain at a tea tomorrow in honor of her daughter, Marjorie, who will leave next month to attend Stephens College in Missouri. The party will take place at the Monroe home on Rosemary street, Chevy Chase.

Assisting the hostess will be her other daughter, Joan, and Mrs. W. Hamilton Knox, godmother of Marjorie.

Mrs. Knox will give a tea on Wednesday, September 4, at the Iron Gate Inn in honor of Miss Monroe. Guests will include a number of other young ladies who will be leaving soon for college. In the group invited are Miss Ann Hathaway, Miss Patsy Maphis, Miss Marian Falck, Miss Josephine Gossett, Miss Phyllis Stoever, Miss Mimi Rita, Miss Alice Erickson, Miss Betty Starkey, Miss Suzanne Offutt, Miss Evelyn Rapee and Miss Mary Jane Gott.

Charles J. Brands Back From Tour Of Maine, Canada

Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. Brand have returned from a motor trip through northern Maine and Canada. Traveling by boat to St. Johns, New Brunswick, they motored to Murray Bay, where they spent a few days at the Manoir Richlieu, a beautiful hotel overlooking the St. Lawrence.

From there they drove to Quebec, where they stayed at the historic Chateau Fontenac and spent their days seeing the sights of Quebec. They wound up their trip through Montreal, spending a few days at Westport before returning to Washington.

James R. Millers At Virginia Beach

Several from Washington are among the late summer arrivals at the Cavalier Hotel, Virginia Beach. Among them are Mr. and Mrs. James R. Miller, a honeymooning couple whose marriage was solemnized at St. Matthew's Church.

Paul Mallon, newspaper columnist, and Mrs. Mallon are at the Cavalier, and other recent arrivals include Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Ryan, Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Farrell, Miss Mary Patricia Farrell and Paul Farrell.

Maj. Van Dyke And Wife Leave Today for N. Y.

Maj. W. S. Van Dyke, the noted Hollywood director, and Mrs. Van Dyke, who have been at the Mayflower for several days, will leave today for New York. They expect to return to Washington later for a brief stay before returning to the West Coast.

Among parties given for them was a small dinner at which Col. and Mrs. Robert Davis entertained on Monday. The Davises first met the Van Dykes as neighbors in Brentwood, Calif.

Guests at the dinner included Miss Barbara Davis, Miss Dita Davis, who made her debut here last winter, and the Assistant Naval Attache of the Italian Embassy, Count Filo della Torre.

The Misses Barbara and Dita Davis will leave this week-end to attend a house party at Fortress Monroe, Va. They will return to their Virginia home directly after Labor Day.

Mrs. Achilles Here From London With Children

Another American refugee from England, Mrs. Theodore Achilles, has arrived in Washington and is busy house hunting.

Mrs. Achilles was one of the group of ladies of our Embassy in London who sailed for this country in June. From New York she went directly to California with her children, who are remaining with Mr. Achilles' brother there until she finds a house in the Capital. For the present she is staying at the Shoreham.

Mr. Achilles is second secretary of our London Embassy, and he and his wife lived here for several years before he was assigned that post. Mrs. Achilles said she was sorry to leave London, but that she felt for her children's sake it was necessary.

She will go North over the week-end, but expects to return here Monday or Tuesday.

CAPITAL WHIRL

By SALLY SWIFT

RECENT VACATIONERS at Lake Placid were Mr. and Mrs. George Maurice Morris and their daughter, Hillis, who were joined by Mrs. Morris' mother, Mrs. Wilbur Hubbard. Now, the whole family has adjourned to Mrs. Hubbard's place at Chestertown, Md., and will finish their vacation there with Hillis' twin brother, Bud.

MRS. MORRIS

Young Bud cut loose for himself this summer and, after a visit to a school friend in Oregon, took a camping trip through Glacier National Park. He was enchanted with the life out West and is full of admiration for the rangers and cowboys who were his guides in the great open spaces. They have a picturesque manner of expressing themselves that impressed Bud very much. For instance, to voice the utmost contempt for someone they would say, "He's as useless as hair on bacon."

After his trip West, Bud went to his grandmother's home at Chestertown and took a job with a firm which builds sailboats. Sandpapering the mast of a sailboat for days on end is a job that requires patience and perseverance, and when Bud was invited to Rehoboth recently he felt that he had earned a little relaxation.

At Rehoboth he visited a former schoolmate at St. Alban's, Harold Hinton, and saw a number of other old friends, among them George Goodrich and Bob Werlich. He also attended the dance of the Nine o'Clock Club at the Rehoboth-Indian Beach Club and was a guest at the dinner given by Mrs. Felix du Pont for some members of the young set.

MR. AND MRS. Clifford Bangs are putting the finishing touches to their attractive house on Henlopen avenue at Rehoboth. Mr. Bangs declares that he will be only too glad when it is finished, as he's been able to get to the beach only twice all summer. Nevertheless he sports a beautiful tan. It must have been acquired while overseeing the workmen.

Downstairs the Bangs have a living room, dining room and guest room, all panelled in walnut, and a wide screened porch. The front stoop, of round-edged, hand-made bricks, brought by Mrs. Bangs from Virginia, is furnished with two high-backed benches for weary callers who may want to rest a moment before lifting the big brass knocker on the door.

Mrs. Bangs, who is fond of antiques, had bought an old iron Franklin heater with the idea of using the quaint stove in the living-room in place of an open fire. The heater was nicely decorated with American eagles and other colonial designs but was not really suited to take the place of an open fire. So Mr. Bangs, not wishing to see his wife disappointed in the use of her find, cleverly managed to have part of the old ironwork used to outline the red brick fireplace. The effect is very nice.

Mrs. Emery Smith is spending a few days in Rehoboth and is at the Henlopen Hotel. Mrs. Chase Donaldson, of Washington, is at the Memorial Hospital in Wilmington, where she is recuperating from a mastoid operation. Her friends are hoping that she will soon be able to leave the hospital for a vacation at Rehoboth.

A RECENT exhibition at Rehoboth of portrait drawings by Caroline Bond included a charming drawing of debutante Cynthia Dunn when she was a little girl. There was also a portrait of the late Adolphus Greely, the famous explorer. Rehoboth visitors were especially interested in the latter because of the publication last week of "Six Came Back," a diary of the Greely expedition, which was edited and arranged by Mrs. Marquis James.

Mrs. Broussard Fetes Sister At Coffee Party

Silver Spring Matron Introduces Old Louisiana Custom

Introducing a custom of old Louisiana to her friends, Mrs. Felix R. Broussard, of Silver Spring, Md., gave a "coffee party" yesterday morning at her home on Springwood drive. The fete was in honor of her sister, Mrs. John R. Wood, Teaneck, N. J.

Former residents of Washington, Mrs. Wood, with her husband, Maj. Wood, U. S. A., and children, Sandra Jane and Joanne, are spending three weeks with Mrs. Wood's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Austin T. Powell, of Brookeville, Md., before Maj. Wood resumes his medical course at Columbia University, New York.

Among the guests yesterday were Mrs. Walter A. Covert, Mrs. Robert Dulin, Mrs. Lee Robey, of Manor Club Estates; Mrs. David Kelly, Mrs. Donnell Masson, Mrs. Charles Prettyman, Mrs. Carlos Greenleaf, Mrs. Howard Dozier, Mrs. John Marsh, Miss Mary Louise Dozier, Miss Betty Gibbon, of Silver Spring; Mrs. Ralph Mahr, Mrs. Frank McAllister, of Barnaby Woods; Mrs. L. K. McDorman, Mrs. Fenner D. Powell, of Chevy Chase; Mrs. Aubrey Powell, of Norbeck, Md., and Mrs. Austin Powell.

Maj. and Mrs. Wood are being extensively entertained during their visit. Tonight they will be guests of honor at a cocktail party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. McDorman prior to a dinner and dance they are giving at the Shoreham Hotel. Tomorrow night Maj. and Mrs. Wood will be entertained at a barbecue steak roast at the Manor Country Club by a group of friends. Mr. and Mrs. Covert, Mrs. Wood's brother-in-law and sister, gave a cocktail party followed by a dinner dance at the Manor Club Saturday night. Mr. Broussard is the son of former Senator Broussard, of Louisiana.

A Woman's Washington

By Jean Brownell

TO REFER to Mrs. Vinnie G. Barrows as director of personnel guidance at George Washington University scarcely does justice to the variety of her problems. She manages to look out for: All girl students under 23 years of age, and in particular the 110 who live in the women's dormitory, 10 sororities, 100 other clubs and organizations, the university' social calendar and the students' dining room. On the side she advises the many male students who bring her problems, and finds jobs for about 200 students each year.

Mrs. Barrows

She is amused when people tell her that personnel work looks easy. "Everyone thinks he gets along well with people," she says. "That's because all of us have at least a few congenial friends and neighbors. We're apt to forget the people we DON'T get along with."

She finds George Washington unique in many ways. "Students take co-education for granted more than at any college I know of; for one thing, outside of the newspapers, the girls are seldom referred to as coeds. Also, many of the women students live here with their parents, and the men usually have come here to take Government jobs. Naturally, one doesn't expect a lot of romantic flub-dub under those circumstances."

Bill Ewing, publicity man for Warner Brothers, called The Post recently to talk to a member of the Woman's Department. The girl with whom he was connected seemed puzzled and finally said, "We have no one by that name at present." It turned out that he had dialed NAtional 4000 instead of NAtional 4200 and was talking to the House of Detention at the Police Department Woman's Bureau.

A weird little drama was enacted not long ago on a Lincoln Park street car near Dupont Circle. Instead of starting the car after taking on passengers at a loading platform, the conductor abandoned the controls and wandered up and down the aisle, mumbling and peering under seats. Then he left the car and walked around it several times, still mumbling. As he returned to his stool and was about to start the motor, he saw a pedestrian stoop to pick something from the sidewalk, "Here, babe!" he shouted unceremoniously. She crossed over to the car and handed a dollar bill through his window. "Just blew out," he said. "Thought it was gone for good." The passengers were as relieved as he was.

The night that Mrs. Thomas Martin Boyle, of 3052 P street northwest was scheduled to undergo a rather serious operation, her anxious children gathered at the hospital. The doctor was there, the operating room in readiness, but the prospective patient did not show up. A telephone checkup of her friends located her hours later at the Shoreham, deep in a bridge game. She had forgotten about the operation, and only after some persuasion did she consent to break up the game so that it might proceed.

Ann Sheridan Urges Exercise For the Figure

Hollywood, Calif.—Ann Sheridan believes every girl should seize on sports for recontouring her figure. Especially since predicted fall modes emphasize the slim, form-revealing silhouette.

Either wear a corset to hide generous proportions or slenderize the figure by other means. Ann suggests her four-sport routine.

Dancing is on her list of sports because it's fun, too. In place of a series of boring setting-ups, Ann turns on her radio, then glides, whirls, does a few high kicks and some back bends.

Try golf or badminton on fine days. Ann is certain these two sports have kept her ankles trim, her legs and hips the same. When she swings her club or racquet she holds stomach muscles tight while she's placing her shots. Results: She never has to diet and her waistline measures only 23 inches. What's more, these games have made her shoulders perfect.

If a girl can't be bothered with stretching exercises morning, noon and night, with practicing deep breathing or chewing routines for a lovely facial contour, she may get the same benefits and enjoy herself as well by going swimming. The chin is held up, every muscle gets a workout and you breathe from exertion. Ann drives to the beach every night after work for her daily swim.

New Nail Polish A Good Pick-up

If you want a good pick-up, try doing something for your hands—a little exercising, perhaps some of the new nail polishes in the hot pink-or magenta shades.

If you have broken and split nails, better look to your health—perhaps you're nervous or a bit rundown. Lack of iron or calcium in the system can be remedied by regulating the diet. In extreme cases a doctor should be consulted.

It is best to leave troublesome nails alone as much as possible. Use an emery board and orange-stick on them when manicuring, never steel files. It's best to do very little shaping; nails gain strength by growing wide and broad.

Some Modern Epitaphs

I

Here lies Ophelia Potterby,

She came to her end brooding about the undone tasks hanging over her;

The letter from her Aunt Libbie she had not answered, and the one from an old school friend who had recently discovered her address, and the one from somebody in her home town who wanted her to look up and send the address of somebody else;

The questionnaire from her alumnae association about her professional life that she had not filled out; the one from a college student in sociology about her love life;

The wedding anniversary bid with an R. S. V. P. on it which she had carelessly mislaid; the piano recital invitation she had not acknowledged; the tea invitation from a strange hostess she had done nothing about;

The wedding present she had not bought for the acquaintance married last June; the one she had not yet bought for the friend to be married the next day; the three births announcements she had ignored;

The telephone call she had not made to the friend who entertained her at dinner; the ones she had not made to the half-dozen friends she had promised to call about getting together some time;

The book she had not read that somebody had thrust into her hands with a firm injunction to "report" on it;

The club committee report she had not made; the dues she had not yet mailed to the club treasure;

II

Here lies Elvira May Earnest,

She fell into a coma of exhaustion at the end of a day in which she had tried

To do all the daily exercises prescribed for posture, waistline, abdomen, throatline, tibia, fibula, and for prevention of dowager's hump, double chin, crow's feet, knock-knees, bowlegs, swayback, flat feet and fallen arches.

To do the required deep breathing, vowel practice, consonant practice, poetry reading, etc., required for voice control.

To bathe twice using bath salts, bath oils, basic soap, finishing soap, cologne, dusting powder, back brush, arm brush, leg brush, toenail brush, elbow brush, rubber relaxing pillow, and electric stimulator.

To use all the morning and night creams, astringents, et cetera, that the demonstrator at the cosmetic counter talked her into buying.

To put vaseline on her fingernails, to massage her toes, to exercise her ears, to wiggle her toes, to relax her face, to cup her eyes and stand on her head for five-minute periods to aid circulation.

To practice her posture rules whenever she walked, her voice rules whenever she talked, her diet rules whenever she ate, and her personality rules whenever she met anyone she wanted to influence.

To memorize a poem, to look at a great picture, to listen to a symphony, to read from a good book, to think a high thought, and—

To wedge in the duties of the day in her spare minutes.

III

Here lies Florabelle Steppe;

She went hopelessly mad in the maze of higher mathematics trying to figure out

Whether she owed a tea or a luncheon to the wife of the influential official from her home town who had once bought her a cocktail.

How many of the smarter-looking members of her club had ever accepted her luncheon and tea invitations and how many had repaid under the two-week deadline;

Whether an invitation to an exclusive cocktail party with a literary lion present would balance one to an informal buffet supper with only nice people present;

Whether she could get rid of her obligation to attend a small socially unprofitable luncheon by bringing the hostess a gift when she returned from her vacation;

Whether she had entertained once or twice the acquaintance whose husband had just been elevated to an important position—and if the possibilities were sufficient to warrant her inviting them to dinner.

Whether her best friend's invitation to a Cabinet lady's at home balanced her own two bids to Senators' wives' teas and to the buffet supper of a Representative's wife.

Whether she really owed a luncheon invitation at her club to a woman who had entertained her at a mass luncheon at a hotel.

What the complete score was with everyone of any moment whom she knew, and how she could make her debits and credits balance by the end of the season.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Should Girl Believe Man's Protestations of Love, When He Never Overlooks Any Pretty Women?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: The young man I am in love with, and who claims to love me (we are not engaged) has a "roving" eye. Any attractive girl can catch and hold his attention at any time—although he had eyes only for me, for a time after we met. I certainly don't want to be too sensitive about this, and have a perfect horror of being a jealous woman, but on the other hand it makes me wonder if he is sincere in his professions of love for me.

If he really were as deeply in love with me as he says, would he turn around and stare at pretty girls on the street, in theaters, restaurants, etc.? Does that indicate waning interest in me? I am attractive but not beautiful.

He is 29 and I am 27, and he is just getting started in private law practice. Like all promising, well-educated young professional men, he is somewhat pursued by girls, although he has dated me five nights out of seven during the four months we have known each other. My friends have remarked on his apparent devotion to me, and he tells me often, with jocular severity, that I mustn't date anyone else. I have met his parents, who were cordial, and seemingly sympathetic to his interest in me.

After we had known each other about two weeks, he remarked that he no longer noticed other women, which may account for my recent worries, now that I see his actions contradicting his words. I have teased him a little about it, and suggested that he date others, but he disclaims any interest in them or desire to do so. So please tell me what to believe and how to "adapt" to his attitude.

JANE.

He Means to Be True, But Doesn't Know How

DEAR JANE: There is hardly a man "with soul so dead" that he fails to see, or to quicken at sight of, a beautiful, an attractively gowned, a radiantly magnetic, or otherwise eye-compelling woman; although the majority of men are so convention-tamed, in the sense (1) of subscribing to a fixed pattern of "good manners," and (2) conceding the social worth of monogamous behavior, that they keep the impulse to "turn and stare" pretty well under control.

Your beau's unconcealed interest in the charms of every passing pretty girl does not necessarily give the lie to his "professions of love" for you. If actions speak louder than words (as the proverb says), the fact that he was "dated" you five nights out of seven since you met, certainly proves that you rate ace-high with him, even though he isn't blind to the attractions of other women.

What his x-ray attitude toward other women implies is, firstly, an extraordinary susceptibility to feminine come-hither, and, secondly, an insensitivity to the dictates of well bred deportment. It means that he is a philanderer at heart; which is to say, a man who is constitutionally incapable of being spiritually faithful to one woman. Whether he could remain technically faithful to sweetheart or wife is problematic.

It is characteristic of the philandering type of man that he wants to be faithful in love, without knowing, in some instances, how to integrate his faculties to that end; or without his being willing, in other instances, to accept the forfeits which such a course imposes. Usually, he just drifts, hoping some day to meet a woman so fascinating, so endlessly absorbing and satisfying, that all other women will seem vapid and tedious in comparison. In other words, he unconsciously puts the burden upon wife or sweetheart to keep him faithful, instead of recognizing (and acting on the realization) that fidelity is an intrinsic attribute, to be achieved by rational personal discipline, after an essentially compatible choice of love-partner has been made.

But to return to the subject of your beau! I think you may accept his protestations of love at face value, as sincerely defining what he really feels. However, I doubt that he would ever be so single-mindedly in love with you (or with any woman) as to fail to see, or react appreciatively to, the charms of other attractive women.

You ask, "how adapt to his attitude?" That depends. If his "roving-eye" appraisal of passing women is conspicuously bold, it may verge on the vulgar, and few wives or sweethearts could adjust to such discourtesy, which is as much of an impertinence to the woman admired as it is an insult to the woman (at his side) whom he is momentarily ignoring.

Yet, happily married men tell me that they never like their wives so much as when the latter spontaneously approve their taste in other women. As one man (with whom I discussed your quesions) said: "If I admire a pretty girl, and my wife agrees with me, as she always does, I don't give the matter a second thought. But if she were to disagree, I'd take it as a reflection on my judgment and I'd probably become more stubbornly set in that particular opinion. And I would think she was jealous, besides. And when dispute and jealousy set in, that's where the trouble begins."

Whether your beau is a vulgarian or you are hypersensitive is a matter for you to decide. But this I know, if his behavior makes you secretly unhappy now, despite your best efforts to ignore or excuse it, you had better break off the association (for the sake of both) before you find yourself even more deeply involved, emtionally.

Planning the Fall Wedding

Associated Press Feature Service.

If you're to be a September bride, you'll want to make arrangements for as cool a wedding as possible.

Start with yourself. After all, you'll be the center of attraction.

If you will buy your wedding dress a half-size larger than you usually wear, you can have it fitted to leave plenty of room, particularly over the bust, under arms, and at the back.

It's also a good idea to select shoes a half-size larger than usual.

You should plan to take about two hours to dress. That will give you time for a bath, in lukewarm water, a deodorant and removal of superfluous hair, a rubdown with cologne or alcohol, half an hour of rest, and a leisurely makeup.

Use as little makeup as possible, and rub ice over face and neck to set the powder. That's what movie stars do before they go in front of the bright lights.

Eat lightly if you really want to be cool. Drink a lot of cold fruit juice for breakfast.

That's all for you. But you can help the men in the wedding party by urging them to wear white flannels and blue coats or in white linens instead of formal dress.

You can choose decorations for home and church that will look cool. That means leaving out the flowers with pungent odors. It means using much greenery.

The food at the wedding reception ought to be light and simple, the drinks very cold.

Gen. Poore, Cited as Hero 6 Times, Dies

Retired 7th Corps Area Commander Was Pershing's Classmate

Maj. Gen. Benjamin A. Poore, 77, decorated four times for heroism in the World War and commander of the Seventh Corps Area on retiring in 1927, died yesterday at his home in Fitchburg, Mass.

Gen. Poore was graduated from the Military Academy in 1886 as a classmate of Generals Pershing, Patrick, Menoher, McIntyre and Hay. He was awarded the Silver Star Oak Leaf Cluster for gallantry in action against the Spanish forces in Puerto Rico, 1898, and against the insurgents in the Philippines, 1899. Heroism in France earned him the Distinguished Service Medal and Distinguished Cross as well as the Italian War Cross and appointment as officer in the French Legion of Honor.

He leaves his second wife, Flora, of Fitchburg, and three daughters, Katherine, wife of Maj. Gen. Joseph O. Mauborgne, Washington; Priscilla, wife of Col. Donald A. Robinson, Fort Bliss, Tex., and Adelaide, wife of Maj. Gen. Charles L. Bolte, Washington.

The funeral will be held in Arlington National Cemetery at 10:30 a. m. Saturday.

Agriculture Prepared to Bulwark Democracy In War-Torn World, Wickard Says in Speech

By the Associated Press

WICKARD

Falls City, Nebr., Aug. 27.—Agriculture is better prepared than any other industry to help bulwark democracy in a war-ridden world, Claude R. Wickard, newly appointed Secretary of Agriculture, asserted in an address prepared for delivery here today.

"Through the farmer's foresight, with the help of the farm program," he said, "the Nation today has an abundance of those farm products which are as essential in wartime as the guns and munitions."

He came here to speak before a four-State farm rally in the first address since his appointment to succeed Henry A. Wallace, Democratic Vice Presidential nominee, whose policies Wickard pledged to "continue and strengthen."

A strong American agriculture, Wickard declared, is essential "if we are to meet the challenge of aggressor nations."

Portland, Oreg., Aug. 27 (AP).—Gov. Harold Stassen of Minnesota, said today the American people believe the third term "is one tradition that should never be broken."

The 33-year-old executive, en route to Salem, Oreg., to notify Senator Charles L. McNary of his nomination for Vice President, told interviewers:

"I have had Democrats walk up to me and say they had been voting Democratic tickets straight for 40 years, but this year they were going for Willkie and McNary, believing that the principles laid down by Washington and Jefferson are mighty good ideas and should not be abandoned now."

Richmond, Va., Aug. 27 (AP).—Leaders of the Richmond Democrats for Willkie Club said today the national committee of that organization planned to use the Richmond organization as a model for similar groups in other parts of the country.

They said the local organization would be described in a pamphlet entitled "The Richmond Plan" to be distributed by the National Willkie Democratic Organization.

Married Bliss an Achievement, Church of God Crusaders Told

Magic Not Required for Happiness, But Rather Couples Should Continue 'Ways of Courtship,' Dr. Wood Says

There is no magic in marriage to make it succeed. Instead, happiness in marriage is an achievement Dr. Leland Foster Wood told the twelfth international convention of the Crusaders of the Church of God here yesterday.

Dr. Wood, chairman of the commission on marriage of the Federal Council of Churches, addressed a morning conference on "Spiritual Foundations of Marriage," talked at a luncheon meeting for married couples on "Creating Happy Homes," and spoke last night at a dinner for pastors on "Helping Our Young People Build Christian Homes."

Dr. Wood believes persons should marry young, but not too young. Marriages under 20 have less chance for success, statistics show, he said. But he decried the popular mistake of making fun of young love.

"Love among humans is never "puppy love," he said, "and it should not be treated with disdain. It is part of the development and life of young people. They will later come to a more mature conception of love, but they way to that is not by ridicule of early love."

Sex should not be overemphasized as an element in marriage and neither should it be treated with disdain, Dr. Wood told his audience. The human body, he said, should be regarded with respect as well as with understanding. Beyond this factor, he added, husbands and wives should recognize that marriage involves the whole problem of adjusting two personalities to each other.

"Every couple should continue the ways of courtship in whatever manner is appropriate throughout marriage," he continued. "Love should not be given in a meager and penurious way."

In his talk to the pastors, Dr. Wood declared "It is no longer tolerable to allow young people to enter marriage with a thin and inadequate conception of love, and Hollywoodish ideas of what marriage is like."

He condemned sensational or stunt weddings and such careless procedure as "sandwiching a marriage in between two other engagements." He urged that the clergymen take time to know the couple and continue his contact with them as counselor, guide and friend.

The convention yesterday passed a resolution reaffirming the stand of the young people of the Church of God as "fundamentally opposed to our entrance into any war of aggression . . . to any alignments that may lead us to war and to any program which would put our Nation under a military regime."

A. W. Miller, of Anderson, Ind., was reelected president of the organization, with A. L. Forrest, of Lansing, Mich., vice president; Ida Byrd Rowe, of Anderson, secretary, and Caroline Glassman, of Lansing, treasurer.

The national oratorical contest was won by McCoy Nevin, of Owatonna, Minn., who placed first, and Alice Switzer, Belding, Mich., second.

D. C. Police Scrutinize Green Guards

Uniformed Women's Local President Resigns on Hearing Of Overdraft

Activities of Green Guards of America, Inc., an organization of Washington women in uniform whose purpose is to train for home defense, are "being followed very closely" by the Metropolitan Police Department, Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent, said last night.

Brown's statement was made after disclosure that the organization's president, Mrs. Frank A. Werner, 1841 Columbia road northwest, has resigned and that Green Guard records have been removed from their headquarters at 1742 Church street northwest and are in the custody of police.

"When I joined the Green Guards, I was given to understand that it was to be a non-profit, patriotic organization," said Mrs. Werner in explaining her resignation. "Since, I have learned that it is not strictly that kind of an organization," she added.

Furniture Repossessed

Mrs. Werner decided to resign after learning, she said, that the organization's bank account was overdrawn Monday and after, she declared, office furniture and equipment had been repossessed.

Maj. Brown's name was brought into Green Guard affairs by Mrs. Werner, who said she had been advised by Needham Turnage, United States Commissioner, to consult with the police superintendent and with United States District Attorney Edward M. Curran.

The police department's interest in the guards, however, dates from its organization at a meeting at Odd Fellows Hall, 419 Seventh street northwest, last July 15. Maj Brown, it was learned, became concerned with the organization's activities when an organizer of the guards announced that the meeting would be held at Police Headquarters and that arrangements had been made to give the group instruction in pistol shooting as a part of its defense training.

Call to Store

Maj. Brown at that time denied any such announcement had been authorized by him. He said that permission had been granted for Sergt. Sheldon McKee, police pistol expert, to give pistol instruction to small groups in his spare time, but that he had no intention of authorizing instruction for a large organization.

Maj. Brown's interest in the organization was further enlivened, he said, when he learned that a woman identifying herself with the Washington Police Department had telephoned an official of a downtown department store and had stated that the Police Department had a defense program for women free of charge and requested that store employes be notified of the July 15 meeting.

The Post verified the call to the department store and was informed that it was made between 10 and 10:30 a. m. July 15.

Mrs. Werner pointed out that funds for operation of the guards are obtained through sale of uniforms. Of the $9.50 uniform purchase price, $5 goes to the organization and $4.50 is paid by the purchaser to a Washington trading company handling uniform distribution.

A group of Green Guards met last night with Mrs. Virginia Nowell, 1747 Church street northwest. For the group, Mrs. Nowell issued a statement describing the gathering as an "indignation meeting" and attacking Mrs. Werner as "trying to wreck the Green Guards" because "she became angry when she was not allowed to march at the head of the Green Guard parade" when the organization was in New York last week-end for the World's Fair.

Mrs. Nowell, national president, said the organization is "solvent" and "doing business as usual." She announced the election of the following new officers:

Mrs. Ora Emge, president; Mrs. Abbe Kerr, vice president; Miss Iona Trafton, secretary; Miss Oleta DeMar, auditor; Miss Texas Rosenson, treasurer, and Miss Jan Reading, official photographer.

Mrs. Nowell, who with Mrs. Werner signed the organization's checks, explained that while there is no money in the bank account there are sufficient funds on hand and accounts receivable to meet all obligations.

Mrs. Werner said she discovered the bank account condition when she called at the Riggs National Bank branch at Eighteenth street and Columbia road northwest, to determine if there were funds to cover a $71 check she had been instructed to turn over to a costumer for rental for costumes worn by guards at a World's Fair pageant.

Mrs. Werner produced a bank book showing the following deposits: $180, August 7; $23, August 13; $555, August 17; $90, August 20. She said an additional $115 deposit was not entered.

Girls Put Into Practice Graces Learned at Neighborhood Club

Personal Interest Group Entertains Board Members

"Will you have sugar or cream?" Miss Gracie Evelyn Dowdy, 13-year-old president of the Personal Interest Club of Hampshire House, church-supported neighborhood project at 1105 New Hampshire Avenue northwest, asked yesterday afternoon as she poured tea for board members, some from St. John's Episcopal Church, Lafayette Square.

Presiding over the red and black clothed candle-lit tea table with the grace, poise and charm of a society matron, the blonde neat-as-a-pin hostess and sister members were putting into practice etiquette and other social graces taught in the club, of which Mrs. Irene Davis is counselor.

And a Napkin, Too

The youngsters, most of them from the Washington Circle area, worked hard to insure success of their first social function as a club. Only one "faux pas" was committed. One of the board members spilled her tea and cookies.

Gracie, Western High School sophomore, brought a picture, tea, lemons and cream from her home at 2155 L street northwest; Marie Taulelle, 13, and Janet Boles, 12, baked 18 white-icing cakes, which vanished before the tea cooled; Agnes and Louise Repetti donated cakes, crockery, lemons and candy, while Teresa Scanlon, 13, gave cloves, cookies and A napkin.

Steering the girls along was Mrs. Mary Cox, new house director, and recent sociology graduate of the University of Chicago, who sacrificed part of her living quarters on the third floor for studio space for special art classes, soon to be started. Miss Roberta Rowzee, of 1867 Kalorama road northwest, dropped in to assist with the tea arrangements.

Success Hailed

Warm compliments on the affair's success came to the "charm school" members from the guests, among them Mrs. Hannah Hill, Miss Jennie Murchison and Mrs. J. C. Burns, all of St. John's Guild, which this summer launched Hampshire House with the cooperation of other churches and civic agencies and individuals.

They include St. Thomas' Episcopal Church, worship place of President Roosevelt; Union and Foundry Methodist; St. Matthew's Cathedral; the Friends' Meeting House, near Florida and Connecticut avenues; St. Stephens and the Incarnation and St. Margaret's Episcopal; First Baptist, Covenant-First Presbyterian, and other churches. Goodwill industries donated a ping-pong table and the Self-Help Exchange gave and placed a piano.

Mrs. G. A. Hadsell Will Be Buried In Arlington

The funeral of Mrs. Sara Platt Hadsell, widow of Col. G. Arthur Hadsell, U. S. A., who died Sunday in Poughkeepsie, N. Y., will be held there this afternoon. Burial will be at 2:30 p. m. tomorrow in Arlington National Cemetery.

A native of Poughkeepsie, Mrs. Hadsell had spent considerable time in Washington. She had visited frequently at the home of her brother, the late Edmund Platt, vice governor of the Federal Reserve Board, and lived here while Col. Platt was assigned to a year's duty in the Philippines. Surviving are a daugnter, Mrs. Susan H. Fay, wife of Maj. E. N. Fay, Army Quartermaster Corps, of Bolling Field, D. C., and a son, Capt. G. Arthur Hadsell, jr., U. S. A.

Ill, D. C. Clerk Ends Life by Gas In Kitchen

A 48-year-old Pepco clerk, Lawrence A. Connor, of 2112 F street northwest, was found dead on the kitchen floor of his apartment last night, a cloth around his mouth, a note by his side and three jets of the kitchen stove turned on.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald issued a certificate of suicide by asphyxiation.

The body was discovered by Connor's brother, John T. Connor, of 1026 Fifteenth street northwest, who had been living in the F street apartment the past week. Inhalator treatment failed.

The note revealed that Connor had been in ill health for some time. It also gave instructions for the liquidation of several debts.

Nellie Lichenstein, Former Bank Employe, Dies

Miss Nellie Lichenstein, 66, who was believed to have completed the longest term of service of any woman employe at a Washington bank, died yesterday at Garfield Hospital after a month's illness.

She had been connected with the Washington Loan & Trust Co. since 1893, when she served under the bank's first president, Brainard H. Warner. She later became editor of the monthly magazine, Savings Journal, which achieved a national circulation under her administration.

Miss Lichenstein was an ardent supporter of the National Symphony Orchestra and was connected with several charity organizations in the city. She leaves a sister, Mrs. Amy L. Wolf, with whom she lived at the Wardman Park Hotel.

The funeral will be private.

PLAN CHRISTIAN SERVICE TRAINING—Metropolitan Baptist Church, Sixth and A streets northeast, last night held a special testimonial service for young people who are beginning preparation soon for a ministerial or missionary career. Left to right—William Creech, Clyde Freed, Virginia Noell, James Roberts, Virginia Tribble, Ruth Mabis, Bland Wright and Jack Wyne. Creech, Freed and Wyne will begin studies in September; Roberts will start his second year of study, and the others are planning to begin their studies in 1941

The congregation of Metropolitan Baptist Church, Sixth and A streets northeast, last night staged a testimonial for a group of its young people who are planning to begin training for Christian service. It also honored two others who are returning to campuses for further religious study.

Sponsored by the Baptist Adult Union and the Baptist Young People's Union of the church, the service drew a large audience, which heard each of the future religious workers give a testimonial of his call to Christian service.

The group included William Creech, 23, who soon will enter Wake Forest College, North Carolina, for preparatory study for theological training; Clyde Freed, 18, Eastern High graduate in 1940, who is entering Wheaton College with a ministerial career in mind; Virginia Tribble, 17, who also is enrolling at Wheaton, and who may become either a religious education worker or missionary, and Jack Wyne, 21, graduate of Eastern High School in 1939 and recent Columbus University law student, who will study for the ministry at Bob Jones College, Cleveland, Tenn.

Also honored were James Roberts, 22, who in September will begin his second term as theological student at Bob Jones College, and Miss Agnes Stevens, who soon will begin her second year at Southern Baptist Seminary, Loulsville, Ky. Her ambition is to become a missionary.

Roberts, who has been assisting in the worship services and in other ways during the summer at Metropolitan Church, conducted last night's program. The B. Y. P. U. quartet and others furnished special music.

Man and Boy Killed in D. C. Area Traffic

Potomac Man Hit; Capitalite Hurt Saturday Dies Of His Injuries

A District child and a Potomac (Md.) man were killed in automobile accidents yesterday, and a second Washingtonian died of injuries in a crash Saturday.

The dead are:

Houston White, jr., 3, colored, of 2018 Gales street northeast.

Joshua Lynch, 60, of Potomac.

Thomas W. Finney, jr., 20, of 427 Seventh street southeast.

The child was injured yesterday morning when he ran into the path of an ice truck in an alley behind his home. The truck, police said, was operated by Harry C. Bostian, 34, of Riverdale, Md. The youngster's death raised the District traffic toll to 47 for the year. Over the same period last year 56 persons were killed on Washington streets.

Lynch was killed when an automobile in which he was riding ran off the road into a bank and turned over during the rain last night. The accident occurred at Falls and Conduit roads, near Potomac. The driver, police said, was Lloyd Roberts, of Bethesda.

A skull fracture was suffered by Finney when his car crashed into a pole and turned turtle on Fort Washington road, near Oxon Hill, Md., Saturday. He succumbed last night at Providence Hospital.

Three brothers escaped with minor cuts and bruises when their coaster wagon was struck by a laundry truck in 700 block, Anacostia road southeast. The boys, Stanley Phelps, 11; Walter, 10, and Lewis, 13, were given first aid at their home, 3104 G street southeast.

Boston Pastor Accepts Call To St. John's

The Rev. Leslie Glenn To Serve at 'Church Of the Presidents'

The Rev. Leslie Glenn, D. D., rector of Christ Episcopal Church, Cambridge, Mass., has accepted a call to the pulpit of St. John's Episcopal "Church of the Presidents," effective November 1, congregation officials announced yesterday.

DR. GLENN

Acceptance came after weeks of deliberation on the part of the Rev. Mr. Glenn, rector of a church whose history antedates the American Revolution—a church that is responsible for Episcopal work among undergraduates of Harvard University, Radcliffe College and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Forty years old and a native New Yorker, the Rev. Mr. Glenn will succeed Dr. Oliver J. Hart, who resigned to become rector of another historic church—Trinity Episcopal, of Boston, where the noted Dr. Phillips Brooks once served as rector.

Dr. Glenn received an honorary degree of D. D. from the Episcopal Theological Seminary in 1938. He served on the Forward Movement Commission and the Commission on College Work of the Episcopal Church.

In 1930 he married Miss Georgiana Sibley, daughter of Harper Sibley, one-time president of the National Chamber of Commerce. Mrs. Glenn is national vice president of the Girl Scouts and active in child welfare work. They have three children—Tertia, 9; Margaret, 8, and Charles, 2.

Funeral Services For Mrs. Gullion Set for Tomorrow

Funeral services for Mrs. Ruth Matthews Gullion, wife of Maj. Gen. Allen W. Gullion, Judge Advocate of the Army, will be held at 1:30 p. m. tomorrow at Fort Myer Chapel. Burial will be in New Castle, Ky.

Mrs. Gullion, who died Monday at her home, Woodley Park Towers, was a native of New Castle. She was educated at Jessamine Institute there.

Mrs. Gullion had traveled widely with her husband in this country, Hawaii and the Philippines. She had lived here 10 years during Gen. Gullion's several tours of duty here, the first of which was in 1917.

Surviving are three sons, Edmund Gullion, vice consul at Saloniki, Greece; Phillip Gullion, of this city, and Allen W. Gullion, jr., a cadet at West Point; two daughters, Mrs. Frederick Simpson, of Honolulu, and Mrs. Thomas Moorman, wife of Lieut. Moorman, United States Army Air Corps, of Randolph Field, Tex.; three grandchildren, two brothers and two sisters.

Miss Winslow, Fitz-Simons Dance at Watergate Tonight

Noted Team Will Perform at Finale Of Season's Sunset Symphonies, With Guy Fraser Harrison as Conductor

Don't ask Miriam Winslow and Foster Fitz-Simons if they are modern dancers.

That is, unless you're a connoisseur of the dance. The press delegation calling on them last night was not.

Consequently, that proportion of Washington which has not seen them must await their appearance at the Watergate tonight to learn the answer. They'll dance with the National Symphony Orchestra and Conductor Guy Fraser Harrison in this season's final sunset symphony.

"I always bristle a little when that question is asked," said Fitz-Simons, a husky, young blond. "I feel like saying I hope I'm not an heirloom."

"It's like asking a violinist what kind of music he plays," added Miss Winslow. "We call it The question. It's always the first one asked and the hardest one to answer."

Are "American" Dancers

The nearest thing to an answer, however, seems to be that they are strict adherents to neither the conventional ballet type of dance nor the ultra-modern school with its sharp and sometimes grotesque movements.

"I guess we are caught between two fires," said Fitz-Simons. "We catch it coming and going because we don't subscribe completely to either school. We try to say what we have to say as simply and directly as possible, without extra movements that don't mean anything. Yet, our dancing is not so severe as that of the so-called modern school."

"We use a ballet foundation, technically, as every dancer must," said Miss Winslow. "My work is in the lyric side. But we are free to break away from the strict ballet form."

Whether or not they are modern dancers, Fitz-Simons and Miss Winslow are certain they are American dancers, who try to express "the conglomerate culture en masse that makes up America."

She is Back Bay Boston, though she looks more like a Spanish senorita. He is a native of Atlanta, Ga., of Charleston (S. C.) parentage, and looks it.

Harrison to Conduct

They'll dance tonight to the music of Debussy, Tansman, Jarnefelt, Etenraku, Reger and Guion.

Harrison, conductor of the Rochester Civic Orchestra, will direct the National Symphony in Handel's 'Royal Water Music," Liadov's "The Enchanted Lake," Tchaikovsky's "Francesca da Rimini," Beethoven's Eighth Symphony and dances from Borodin's "Prince Igor."

Miss Winslow, Fitz-Simons and Harrison appeared together at the Watergate last year.

Mt. Pleasant School Plans Trial Exams

The Mount Pleasant School for Secretaries, 3313 Fourteenth street northwest, will conduct a three-hour model civil service trial examination tomorrow at 7 p. m. for both junior and senior ratings.

Alexandria Pastor Going to Baltimore

The Rev. Elmer F. Leonhardt, pastor of Immanuel Lutheran Church, Alexandria, Va., for the past decade, has resigned to accept a call to the Nazareth Lutheran Church, Baltimore, Md., effective about September 15.

The clergyman came to the Alexandria church following his graduation from Concordia Theological Seminary, St. Louis, Mo., in 1930, and his ordination to the ministry. His pastorate at Immanuel Church has been one of the most progressive periods in the congregation's history.

No successor has yet been chosen to the Rev. Mr. Leonhardt.

Man Found in River Is Identified as Georgian

A man whose body was recovered Saturday from the Anacostia River at the foot of Half street southwest was identified by fingerprints yesterday as John Johnson, 45, formerly of Georgia.

Police records, which showed Johnson's fingerprints were taken when he was arrested on charges of drunkenness, gave no Washington address.

D. C. 'Peace' Delegates To Be Feted Tonight

A party will be held tonight at Stansbury Hall, 5832 Georgia avenue northwest, for approximately 100 members of the Washington delegation which will attend the Emergency Peace Mobilization in Chicago over the Labor Day week-end.

Rain forced postponement of last night's scheduled Sylvan Theater performance of "Rip Van Winkle" to 8 p. m. tomorrow. A half-hour concert by the WPA Orchestra will precede the production of the Washington Players.

Rites Tomorrow In Passaic N. J., For Rep. Seger

The body of Representative George Seger, dean of the New Jersey Congressional delegation, was taken to Passaic, N. J., yesterday for funeral services tomorrow afternoon at the Seger home.

His son, Reginald Seger, of Passaic, accompanied the body. Members of committees appointed to represent the House and Senate at the service—Representatives Eaton, Woverton, Norton and Hartley and Senators Smathers and Barbour, all of New Jersey—will leave for Passaic late today or early tomorrow.

The 74-year-old New Jersey Republican died Monday at Naval Hospital here. He had served 16 years in Congress.

First Defense Course Here Ends Friday

Approximately 40% Of 500 Trainees To Be Ready for Jobs In the Program

Approximately 40 per cent of the 500 men in the first local vocational training course in connection with the national defense program will be ready for jobs when the six-week period ends this Friday, according to William D. Wallace, supervisor of the national defense training program for the District.

Placements will be waiting for virtually all of the men when they have completed the course, but some will need to take additional training to reach that goal, he said.

The men who have not yet qualified for jobs will continue their training in the night course which will start Tuesday, September 3, and be conducted from midnight to 8 a. m. A supplementary course for employed men who desire to improve their skills will be run from 5:30 to 9:30 each night. This opens Monday, September 23.

Under this schedule, the present setup will have training facilities for 1,200 men, including those carried over from the present course, Wallace reported.

No time limit is set for completion of training. Those who start with a background of experience are through before others who begin from "scratch." The men remain in the course until they have mastered each part of the mechanical process required, Wallace explained.

Those assigned from WPA rolls are paid according to the WPA schedule. Others coming from the D. C. Employment Center receive no compensation.

The highest number of placements now listed for the men are in machine shops, sheet metal work, and auto mechanics. Others are in electrical work and wood working, and one in drafting.

Contest Finds District 9th In Auto Safety

Rating Is Computed For 250,000-500,000 Class, 1930 Census

The halfway mark in the National Traffic Safety Contest finds the District officially in ninth place as of July 1, it was announced yesterday by the National Safety Council.

The rating for Washington is based on the 1930 census, thus placing the city in the 250,000-500,000 classification, in which it was led by Providence, Kansas City, Jersey City, Rochester, Denver, Birmingham, Minneapolis and Dallas. Buffalo led cities of more than 500,000; Baltimore was ninth.

The standings, it was pointed out, are calculated on traffic fatality records and the improvement over the last three years' average. For the first six months of this year the District has had 38 fatalities against 41 during the same period in 1939.

The council emphasized that the fatality records comprised but half the points in the final judging. An equal number of points will be awarded for the scope of each city's accident prevention program—accident reporting system, traffic engineering and enforcement, child safety program and public education.

C. & O. Canal Leaks Delay Flooding; . . . Muskrats Blamed

Two mysterious leaks yesterday brought a halt to the National Capital Park Service's flooding of the long-unused C. & O. Canal between Chain Bridge and Great Falls.

"We can see where the water is leaking out of the bank, but we can't find where it leaves the canal bed," one park engineer said.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

Melodrama Tunes Up For Place in Spotlight

Comedy Prepares to Bow to Chills-and-Fever; Phil Regan to Headline Capitol's New Revue; This, That and the Other About the Theater

HAVING HAD A ROUND of more or less rousing and slightly ribald comedies sprinkled through its screen "escape" fare, Washington now seems to be in for a cycle of rip-roaring melodramas.

BELL

Perhaps it is the "Sea Hawk" influence; perhaps merely coincidence. Whatever the cause, there can be no dodging the fact that Warner Brothers' picturization of Rex Beach's "Flowing Gold" opens on the screen at the Metropolitan Theater this morning or that the next attraction scheduled for RKO-Keith's is "When the Daltons Rode."

Pitched in the Texas oil fields, "Flowing Gold" is as rambunctious a tale of iron men and case-hardened women as you are apt to find coming along any time soon. With gushers coming in, others flaming into the heavens and love always on the bumps, the new film at the Met is no place to go for a nap. Especially, with John Garfield in a role a little different from the others in which he has appeared, Pat O'Brien supplying one of his hardest-berled character studies and Frances Farmer as the gal both lads fancy.

The "Dalton" cast is even than-whicher than that, what with Randolph Scott, Brian Donlevy, Broderick Crawford, George Bancroft, Stuart Erwin, Frank Albertson and numerous others in there to bring back the zing of the days when the Wild West was really wild. It seems a little incongruous to find Kay Francis cast as the leading femme in this sort of thing, but there she is, and according to all advance report from the Coast, giving a whale of an account of herself and her part.

Boy, oil up the great diapason!

When this space recently announced Mickey Rooney for a week of personal appearances at Loew's Capitol, come September 19, it blithely leaped over another Washington favorite who will get here first. Beginning Friday at the Capitol, Gene Ford's "Innovations" stage revue will have Phil Regan as its star. Mr. Regan, still referred to quaintly in some quarters as "the singing cop"—because his voice first came to attention when he was a member of the New York police force—has become too well known to local theatergoers to need any extensive going over here. It will be recalled that Phil was one of the stars mustered by Carter Barron to sing before the Democratic National Convention, in Chicago, along with Harry Richman and a bundle of others. We will lay as high as 11 to 10 that Phil will sing "When Irish Eyes Are Smiling" before he has been on the stage a dime's worth!

The Metropolitan, by the way, has no monopoly on new bill-openings this morning. The Little Theater, adhering to the comedy formula, is inaugurating the regular run of "It's Love I'm After" this morning, following last night's late public preview after the last screening of "Sandy Is a Lady." "It's Love I'm After" is the one in which Leslie Howard, Bette Davis and Olivia de Havilland go through the paces characteristic of a frivolous yarn in which a matinee idol is caught in the romantic clutches of his leading woman and a rich young society bud. There is a ne plus ultra cast in support.

Father Hartke, of the Speech and Drama Department of Catholic University, postcards from Los Angeles: "We're out here acquainting Hollywood with C. U's. work in the theater. They are giving us an interested ear. It's grand." So now, at least, you know where Father Hartke is, after his group's distinguished summer season at the university and Sylvan Theater.

And, if you must know, there was another postcard from Sylvia Kaplowitz, outlining the huge success she and "Her Washington Accordionettes" have enjoyed during the summer-long engagement on Hamid's Million Dollar Pier, at Atlantic City. The Pier has billing the girls next to their top name bands—which is something, even if they did walk away with the honors of the Capitol's last "Going Native" revue.

Lady Abingdon, American chairman of "Refugees of England, Inc.," has announced the formation of a Hollywood branch, under the chairmanship of Constance Bennett. Others on the committee include Mrs. Jack Warner, vice chairman; Georges Achard, French Consul; Claudette Colbert, Mrs. Samuel Goldwyn, Mrs. Darryl Zanuck, Dr. Joel J. Pressman, Mrs. Jay Paley and Mr. and Mrs. Rob Wagner.

Taking-Time-by-Fetlock Note

Crosby Story Heads Roster

In the midst of a summer boom, the Paramount Studio sound recording, music and editing departments have been putting the final atmospheric touches on 14 new films, it was announced by Charles West, editing department head.

First to leave the studio will be "Rhythm on the River," starring Bing Crosby, Mary Martin and Basil Rathbone. This Victor Schertzinger directorial effort, produced by William Le Baron, and introducing Oscar Levant of "Information Please" fame, is the first set for release.

The Joan Blondell and Dick Powell drama, "I Want a Divorce," will be released September 20, and now is in the scoring rooms. Directed by Ralph Murphy, this film features Frank Fay, Gloria Dickson and others.

First film directed by Sam Wood since "Goodbye, Mr. Chips" and "Our Town" is "Rangers of Fortune," starring Fred MacMurray, with Albert Dekker, Gilbert Roland, Patricia Morison and Dick Foran. Wood's own child discovery, Betty Brewer, is playing her first role in this film.

Now being rushed through the editing stages for release early in the football season is "The Quarterback," starring Wayne Morris, with Virginia Dale, Lillian Cornell, Alan Mowbray, Edgar Kennedy, Jerome Cowan, William Framley and Frankie Burke.

"Victory" on Film

The Joseph Conrad thriller, "Victory," starring Fredric March and Betty Field, and directed by John Cromwell, will soon be given its musical background. In featured roles of this drama, which will be released October 11, are Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Margaret Wycherly, Siegfried Rumann, Jerome Cowan, Fritz Feld and Lionel Royce.

Music Maestro Victor Young is conducting the Paramount Recording Orchestra in the scoring of his own composition for Cecil B. De Mille's Technicolor "Northwest Mounted Police," which stars Gary Cooper and Madeleine Carroll, with Robert Preston, Paulette Goddard and Preston Foster. Release of the film is set for November 22.

Musical scores are being readied for "Three Men From Texas," starring William "Hopalong Cassidy" Boyd, and "Cherokee Strip," Richard Dix starring feature, both of which are being produced by Harry Sherman for release in the next two months.

Turbulent Love Among the Oil Derricks

JOHN GARFIELD, FRANCES FARMER AND PAT O'BRIEN as they will be seen in the three principal roles in the Warner Brothers production of "Flowing Gold," an action-drama of the oil fields. Adapted from the novel of the same name by Rex Beach, this high-pitched melodrama will open this morning on the screen at the Metropolitan Theater

Actor Traps Prey With Trick Camera

Frank Jenks today revealed plans to make an elaborate candid camera photographic record of wildlife during the summer.

Jenks will leave for the High Sierra as soon as he is released from "Dancing on a Dime," to start collecting his photographs.

For several months he has been studying various types of camera traps and has already completed some that look like a Rube Goldberg contraption. Normally, such photographs are taken at night with trips that set off a flashlight, but Jenks plans to use his candid camera.

Wills Signed

Home Movies

Billie Burke entertained members of the cast of "Dulcy" at a buffet supper and then showed the first films taken of her two months' old granddaughter, Florence Ziegfeld Stephenson.

Expert Ann

Trick meneuvering of a motorboat, called for in the script of "Dulcy," was an easy accomplishment for Ann Sothern, for she is an expert speedboat pilot.

Three Pages of Stages and Screen Appear in Sunday's Post

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Aug. 27.

You can never tell when you're heading for the top or the bottom in this business. A fine actor named Curt Bois was disgusted after being unable to get an acting job for a year. So he sold a friend of his the idea of co-producing a revue called "Thank You, Columbus." Friend liked the idea but feared Bois might be called away any moment to make a picture. Bois said, "No, the screen doesn't want me. I'll probably never get a picture job again." They started production plans.

Two days later, true to our Hollywood form, Bois was called for "The Lady in Question," and he stole the thunder away from Brian Aherne at the preview, then did the tailor who fits Tracy in "Boom Town:" now he's one of Hollywood's busiest actors—working in "Bittersweet," with three more parts waiting. The revue goes on—with Bois devoting his evenings to it.

That pearl dress Rita Hayworth modeled the other day is a career for a certain woman hired to follow whoever wears it to pick up pearls as they drop off. It's a wonder the poor oysters don't picket the place when it's modeled. How many oysters worked how many years to make a 27-pound dress, and what does the model do when she sits down?

Jack Oakie tells the story about a pal's two boys, aged 9 and 11, who vacationed in San Francisco and visited the fair. Kids ended up at Sally Rand's Nude Ranch, where the girls pitch horseshoes for the amusement of the customers. That evening the boys' father asked them if they'd had a good time. "Sure," they said. "We saw everything. But Sally Rand's girls are terrible. We watched 'em for three hours—and not one of 'em pitched a ringer!

George Murphy got a bawling out from a police sergeant. George, playing a member of New York's "finest" police, went to the Brown Derby for lunch. As he came out, a police sergeant encountered him in full uniform, but without his hat—and was Murphy told off!

Marlene Dietrich and Oscar Homolka were both jittery from doing retake after retake of a scene. Oscar had to say, "If I never see your face again, it will be too soon." Thinking everything was perfect, they went into a last take, when Oscar blew completely, saying, "The sooner I never see your face again, it will be better!"

ᔓᔕ

Red-headed Jimmy Lydon thinks life is just a bowl of spinach. For "Little Men" he has to wear his hair in curls, done at a beauty parlor. When I asked him what he did when he went out nights, he said, "Gosh—stay home. I'm afraid to let my pals see me."

ᔓᔕ

When I asked Newcomer Gene Tierney why she didn't go out to parties, she said, "What's the use? All the attractive men are married." Well, that's how the other girls got 'em.

The New Yorker

Uncle Ezra (Pat Barrett), radio personality, is today's guest columnist For Leonard Lyons.

HOWDY EVVYBUDDY! Well this is certainly a thrill to pinch hit for my good friend, Leonard Lyons. I only hope that he is as cool and comfortable as I am writing this story down on my little farm in Hebron, Ill.

ᔓᔕ

YOU KNOW it's kinda nice to be able to talk to you city folk direct like this, almost as big a thrill as I get when I'm watten out from the "little five watter" down in Rosedale. Of course, all you folks know that people say I'm owner, operator, manager, announcer, copywriter, program director, engineer and janitor of the mythical station familiarly called "the jumping jenny-wren." Truthfully it may be mythical, but I tell you right from my heart that my Saturday night program to me is the highlight of the week, and I have lived with it so long (goin' on ten years now) that sometimes I have to pinch myself to realize that Cecilia, Si Skinner, Aunt Fanny, Mayor Boggs and the Rosedale Dandlits are not watten out from the Rosedale station instead of the radio studios.

ᔓᔕ

IT'S A GREAT feeling for me and Cecilia (you know, she's really Nora, my wife) to be able to get away from the big city of Chicago and come down here to our farm. For it's here that I am able to pick up most of my material. Really the folks of Hebron might just as well live in Rosedale because "the friendly little city" is typical of small towns in every section of the country. Our principal characters can be seen strolling down the main street of Hebron almost any Saturday night. You know it was from listening to stories and anecdotes at countryside gatherings that I was first able to create my character, Uncle Ezra.

ᔓᔕ

OF COURSE, my vaudeville experience is largely responsible for the success of my "little five-watter." I guess I just naturally fell into a theatrical career, as all my associations were with the stage. My father was a musician and my mother an actress, traveling with their own company and playing many of the well-known melodramas of that era.

ᔓᔕ

THERE'S NOTHING like having been an old man since you were 16 years old . . . but that's me. It all started accidentally when I heard of a new show that was soon to start on the road. I immediately applied for a role, and was given the lines of an old man. Afterwards they told me that the reading was satisfactory but needed polishing. So, equipped with a script, I went home, polished up on my reading, and won the part. I guess that this was really the beginning of my character of Uncle Ezra, as I found myself after this in demand to take the parts of old men, though I really didn't begin to appear as Ezra until 1930.

ᔓᔕ

MY FIRST experience as Ezra was on the famous WLS Barn Dance in Chicago. Coincidentally, it was in that city that I met Nora Cuneen, who was to become my wife. For five years we worked together on the Ezra show, and Nora created the character of Cecilia.

ᔓᔕ

I HAVE HAD so many letters and comments from my listeners saying that one of the things they enjoy most about my programmy is my "thought for the day" that closes ever Saturday night show. So Leonard, I think it would be appropriate to sign off this guest column with my thought for the day, and also to thank you for this grand chance to talk to you New Yorkers. I've gotten a big kick out of it. So-long for now.

ᔓᔕ

When two old friends are faring down
The road of life together,
It's only natural now and then
That they meet some stormy weather;
But if the friendship's right and true
It never goes down to defeat,
But somehow or other survives the storm
And comes through on Happiness Street!

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Aug. 27 (INS).—Just heard of a new movie concern—Artists Films Inc. that has been formed to exploit music and to give to schools the best artists in the world via the screen. The plan sounds interesting and if it's practical may lead to something really worth while. Headed by Rudolph Polk, vice president of the Artists Bureau of Columbia Broadcasting, a long list of metropolitan and international favorites will be presented in film plays with music as the theme.

PARSONS

Sounds really marvelous with John Erskine, famed author and musical authority, signed to commentate and offer advice. Richard Bonelli, who is working on "There's Magic in Music" at Paramount, has agreed to make a picture, and others who have signed or who are about to sign are Jose Iturbi, Albert Spalding, Helen Jepson, Gladys Swarthout, Frank Chapman, Lily Pons, Nino Martini, Mischa Elman, Josef Hofmann, Efram Zimbalist, Arturo Toscanini, Leopold Stokowski and Bruno Walter.

Charlie Chaplin is trying to open "The Great Dictator" next week, and he is dickering with the Carthay Circle for what will be one of the most eventful nights in Filmland. Already his office is flooded with telegrams and telephone calls for first-night reservations. I lunched with Charlie and saw a little of "The Great Dictator," which fulfills all his and our best expectations. But I have written an interview with him for Sunday so I mustn't tell too much here. Wait until you hear his music—and see him as Herr Hitler and Jack Oakie as Mussolini with Paulette Goddard as a Jewish girl. It is Chaplin at his best—the world's finest pantomimist at long last speaking lines.

Vivien Leigh obtained her final divorce decree in London yesterday from Leigh Holman, but she cannot wed Laurence Olivier until the official notification is received by mail. Vivien and Laurence start work on "Lady Hamilton and Lord Nelson" this month so it's possible they may not wed until they finish their picture.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Reports are current that Alexis Thompson and his wife, Ann St. George, may reconcile. Betty Grable, who was rumored as his heartbeat, has been seen in the company of Bob Shaw, Linda Darnell's ex-boyfriend, and also dining with Desi Arnaz. He, however, is only an old friend and still is keeping dates with Lucille Ball; Judy Garland and Dave Rose talked for two straight hours in a corner at the Casa Manana—so I reckon it's on again; George Rogers and Dorothy Weldon, of the Rogers dancers, were married at Tia Juana over the week-end; Buddy Westmore has presented Rosemary Lane with an aquamarine and diamond ring, but both say it doesn't mean an engagement; Joan Valerie and Edgar Bergen once more cooing at Slapsie Maxie's.

Robin Thomas, son of Michael Strange, hosted a party at the house of Murphy Saturday night and was unable to appear there until after midnight. He was taken sick and went to sleep but even so the party went on until the wee small hours. In the party were Fanny Brice, the Errol Flynns, Liz Whitney, Orson Welles, Dolores Del Rio, Simone Simon and many others; many of the film folk went to Andrea Leeds' charity party which was attended by hundreds who wanted to help the cause; Broderick Crawford gave his ma (maybe you have heard of her—she is Helen Broderick) an amethyst ring and bracelet for her birthday; Rose Franken had a narrow escape when a stove exploded and burned her hair. Now she is wearing a boyish bob; Leo Morrison accompanied Elsie, the famous bovine, to San Francisco. He denies she emulated Mrs. O'Leary's cow and caused the fire at the S. F. Fair; Albert Basserman has asked for his release from Warners.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Big Board Members Renew Agitation for Longer Hours

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 27.—With the volume of trading in the New York Stock Exchange at the lowest since 1916 in several trading sessions lately, agitation among members for a longer trading session has been renewed.

A proposal to extend the closing hour to 4 p. m., New York time, from the present 3 p. m., it was learned in brokerage circles, has received considerable support. The Association of Stock Exchange Firms was said to be supporting the move, and to have been in touch with exchange officials.

Proponents of the plan urge it as a method of increasing trading volume, arguing it would give traders a longer period in each day to execute orders. Some with offices on the Pacific Coast were said to favor the move, because the present closing hour in New York is only noon there.

Opponents of the plan have taken the position that there is more than ample time to execute all the business available in the present five-hour trading period (two hours on Saturday) and that extending the hours might result in a burdensome increase in expense, particularly when the 40-hour week becomes effective, under the Federal Fair Labor Standards Act, in October.

Also, proposals to extend the trading period in past brought several complaints to the exchange from afternoon newspapers that a later closing would seriously disrupt edition schedules. Some exchange officials expressed concern that it might prompt considerable curtailment of publication of securities tables throughout the country.

The last time there was serious agitation for a longer trading period was in June, 1939, when the exchange considered closing on Saturday. This brought proposals for extending the trading period Mondays through Fridays.

While the officials of the exchange declined to comment upon the present movement, which has developed in recent weeks, it was understood the board of governors may discuss it at its meeting tomorrow.

Contract Bridge

"Who would think thre was a slam in this hand?" writes a contributor, in presenting a question for discussion. "With a minimum opening, I passed at four, yet we made six. My partner didn't want to blame me, nor I him, but one of us clearly was at fault."

The ability to visualize partner's hand and combine it with one's own is more than the ability to count high-card tricks, add them, and when a certain quota is reached say, "This must make game or slam." Fine players picture the real or approximate holdings of their partners. Frequently the inferences sent back and forth are so exact that a perfect picture of the aces, kings and distribution can be drawn. But to be successful it requires precise bidding on the part of one player and a visual imagination on the part of the other.

G. M.'s cyclops eye apparently misled him; for had he seen correctly, he would not have passed his partner at four spades. Here are the cards and the bidding; G. M. was West and held:

♡ 6 4 2
◇ K 8 2
♣ J 5

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1 ♠	Pass	2 ◇	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	3 ♣	Pass
3 ◇	Pass	4 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

G. M. should have considered well before passing. East has indicated a hand pattern of 5-5-3-0, 5-4-3-1 or even 6-4-3-0. In any case he cannot have more than one losing heart, and by his strong bidding, he should have the club and diamond suits nearly solid. West's king of diamonds becomes a potent factor in the weighing of a slam, which if it were in hearts would be negligible. Though West's hand is a minimum opening bid, a bare 2½ tricks, he should bid five spades, and with a conservative partner he should jump to six.

G. M.'s partner actually held:

♡ 10
◇ A Q J 7 3

U. S. Gold Imports At $105,540,418 During Week

By the Associated Press

Gold imports totaled $105,540,418 in the week ended August 21, a reduction of $5,000,000 from the preceding week.

The Commerce Department said principal shipments included $87,274,258 from Canada, $3,799,929 from Portugal, $2,255,481 from Sweden, $3,075,382 from the United Kingdom, $4,261,490 from the Netherlands East Indies, $1,040,778 from Hongkong and $1,009,015 from the Philippine Islands.

Gold deposited under earmark in the Federal Reserve System for the accounts of foreign governments and central banks increased $28,140,334 to $1,680,863,971.

Silver imports, amounting to $567,341, were only about half as much as usual. They included $218,767 from Canada and $139,885 from Mexico.

Silver exports were $4,655. No gold was shipped out.

British Pound Shoots Higher On N.Y. Market

Surge to $3.57 Bid Follows Sharp Drop On Import Ban

New York, Aug. 27.—The price of an English £1 bank note soared to a closing bid of $3.57 late today as holders all over the country deluged money brokers to escape the deadline on a British ban against currency imports.

Last week the British treasury announced that after August 27 no English currency could be imported. The move was planned to circumvent Nazi use of huge amounts of English currency circulating in German-controlled areas in Europe.

A few months ago a £ 1 bank note was worth between $2 and $2.50 in the local market. At the time the import announcement was made last week the price had reached around $3.50. The quotation broke sharply, then abruptly shot forward when holders learned London had allowed until today to dispose of their money.

Veteran money dealers estimated around £300,000 in currency reached the market in the last week. A sizable portion of this, they said, came from war refugees holding the money in the hope of getting a better price. As the 3 p. m. deadline approached such offerings increased to about £75,000.

The price of English notes has no relation to the quotations for the free and the official pounds, currently around $4.03.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Want to read some of our mail? Here's one from Alexandria, Va. It is addressed very formally. It says, "Shirley Povich, Washington Post. Dear Jughead." Er-uh, we'll skip that one, if you don't mind. Here's one on the stationery of the Main Street Baptist Church, of Luray, Va. It should be printable. It says:

POVICH

"Dear Mr. Povich, I was sorry to note that the Washington club had called Jack Sanford from Charlotte for immediate service. Jack has been in a terrible batting slump at Charlotte for two weeks or more, and I was anxious for him to snap out of it before going to Washington. But he is doing his best, I am sure.

"Don't be too hard on him for awhile. Give him a chance to get used to the big show. He is just a big kid anxious to make good and, perhaps, just now a little over anxious and nervous. I hope to be in Washington for the game Thursday of this week, and it would certainly be a pleasure to see you again."

We liked that one because it was signed by the Rev. T. Ryland Sanford, daddy of the Nats' rookie first baseman which thus explains his interest in young Jack. There certainly is nothing more natural than for a father to pull for his boy to make good in the big leagues.

But Baptist Minister Sanford may be believed when he says he is sorry that his boy is called to the big leagues at this time. He knows what batting slumps mean, because he used to be a professional ball player himself. The Rev. Sanford was with the Danville club in the Piedmont League 50 years ago when he chucked professional baseball to take a $90-a-month pastorate in his native Virginia.

Baseball is seemingly the destiny of young Jack Sanford. His daddy and three brothers before him played first base at the University of Richmond, from which the Nats signed him in 1938. The Rev. Sanford would never permit any of his other sons to go into professional baseball, but of Jack he made an exception.

He told us in Florida last spring that he frowned on baseball careers for his three elder sons despite the fact they were star first basemen in college. "I wouldn't let them play professional baseball for one very good reason," he said. "That reason was because I knew they weren't good enough to make the big leagues.

"But Jack has my blessings," he said. "I've waited for him to come along. I think he is the one boy in my family who has the makings of a big leaguer. When he told me he wanted to play professional ball, I approved, because, confidentially, I'd like to see one of my boys in the big leagues, and I honestly believe Jack has a fair chance."

The Rev. Sanford may be something of a prophet. His boy stepped directly from college ball, which is not fast baseball, into the Class B Piedmont League with Charlotte, and made good from the jump. Until a month ago when he met up with his batting slump, he was leading the Piedmont League in hitting. That's his forte—hitting that ball.

Sanford is not a fancy first baseman around the bag, but he is regarded as adequate defensively. It's his hitting possibilities that intrigue the Nats' bosses. Down South last spring they marveled at his stylish batting stroke. Standing there in the box with a stance that breathed style, he looked like murder at the plate. In spring training he hit the ball hard for the Nats.

But he was foredoomed to be sent back to Charlotte. The Nats' bosses had laid all of their first-base eggs in one basket. Jimmy Wasdell was to be their first baseman. And when Wasdell flopped, they bought Zeke Bonura. And when Bonura flopped and was sold, Charlotte was making such a fight for the Piedmont League pennant that Clark Griffith dared not call in Sanford lest he offend Charlotte fans.

But with the Nats' first-base situation getting critical and the Charlotte club dropping back, Sanford was called in. His debut with the Nats was anything but impressive. In eight times at bat in a doubleheader he went hitless, knocking only one ball out of the infield. He appeared to be anything but the line-drive hitter who had batted .325 and more during most of the season at Charlotte.

But the Nats' bosses are making allowances for young Sanford. They know he is facing pitching, the likes of which he had never seen. Even when he appeared befuddled at the slick curves of big league pitchers and sacrificed his fine batting stroke in an attempt to meet the ball somehow, Bucky Harris was not disturbed. "He has to see a lot of that pitching before he catches up with it," said Harris. "But he'll catch up, because he's a natural hitter."

That's what we think, too, if anybody cares. Some day young Sanford will get squared away and become the Nats' No. 1 first baseman. He is suffering now, perhaps, from a keen imagination that magnifies his plight against big league pitching. He is the antithesis of a rookie like, say, Goose Goslin was. Goslin was helped at the start by his lack of imagination. He simply considered the pitcher in a hole when he was at bat. And that supplied the necessary confidence.

Anyway, we like the Sanfords.

With CONSIDINE

New York, Aug. 27.—This is the week during which Sam Snead, the golfer, gets one more chance to prove that he is not one of the worst fold-up artists in sports history. He is competing in the Professional Golfers Association tournament at Hershey—an event for which he failed to qualify last year. And if he pulls his old accordion act in the home stretch a lot of golf people who hailed him as a super Jones will give him up as a hopeless vessel of jitters no longer worth their support.

CONSIDINE

Francis Ouimet, Bobby Jones, Walter Hagen, Gene Sarazen, Grantland Rice and all the other authorities of golf agree that in Snead mankind has at last produced the perfect golfer, mechanically. He hits many yards farther than Jones, the greatest, ever did and he hits just as straight. His touch around the greens is as delicate as his drives and brassies are overpowering. He is a superlative putter, and not even Hagen could ever hack 'em out of the brush along the sidelines as Sammy can.

Snead is a greater driver than Jimmy Thomson, "the greatest driver;" a better iron player than Byron Nelson, "the greatest iron player," and a better putter than Horton Smith, "the greatest putter." He seems to have the perfect nervous system for golf, a hillbilly's torpor, and the perfect lack of imagination—a helpful failing that makes it chemically impossible for him to imagine his ball coming to rest in a brook or trap, before he smacks it.

But he has never won a national tournament. He got to the finals of the P. G. A. championship in 1938 at Shawnee-on-Delaware, but little Paul Runyan gave him a terrible licking. He had the 1939 open in his paw, but he took 13 knocks on the last two holes to blow his chance. He had the 1940 Open sewed up, too, before he started shooting a kind of golf that would have prompted a public links player to break his sticks over his knee. He nearly blew that Canadian tournament last week, after breaking the record twice on the first two rounds. He has dissolved just as abysmally in a half a dozen other important tournaments. But, like Babe Ruth striking out, he looked tougher losing than the winner did winning. But Babe hit 'em a lot, too.

Enough is enough. If Snead is ever going to justify the enthusiastic support of golf people, he must win a real title. It is about the only thing that will save him from being known—for all time—as a fellow who just couldn't take it, when the going got tough.

In barring all professional sport from that haunted country which Marshal Petain persists in calling France. Minister of Youth Jean Ybarnegaray waggled a stern finger at French sportswriters. He commanded them to write shorter stories (which isn't a bad idea) and to quit lauding the merits of individuals.

He ruled that sports heroes get too much attention and "scientists and inventors" too little. It so happens that about the only "scientists and inventors" who can be discussed in the German-controlled French press now are those sadistic tinkerers who have devised bigger and better war machines or poison gases. And these, apparently, are to be preferred to the likes of another Rene Lacoste or another Georges Carpentier or some reigning rugby star.

French sportswriters became more like our own after the World War, and that alone makes them undesirable to the Vichy government. What they wrote about pro sports was the stuff of which peace is made and preserved, for indirectly it spread the gospel of well-being and of sureease from slaughter. The example set and the inspiration derived from our own great professionals, down through the years, must have done a lot to keep war out of this country for 75 years. If Europe had had the equivalent of the Reds-Dodgers or Cleveland-Yankee rivalries, it might not now be emulating the consuming cats of Kilkenny.

A similar order in this country would rule out the American and National Leagues and all their farms and minor league duplicates, Joe Louis and all his boxing contemporaries, the impending pro football season and dozens of other pro endeavors. And make of this an infinitely drearier land.

P. S. God bless America.

Bogart, Skinker, Shea Qualify for Amateur

Greiner's 146 Total Leads Field

Two Virginians, Watts and Bates, Win Other Two Berths; Peacock Is Failure

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Three college graduates, two college students and a high school youngster, from 19 to 25 years of age, won six places to the National Amateur yesterday at Chevy Chase as the 24-man District contingent won only three of the championship berths.

Pacesetter in the field of 38 was the 21-year-old University of Baltimore student, Otto Greiner, who duplicated his medal-winning performance of last year with a 74 and 72 for 146, eight over par. The rounds were played during downpours and drizzles and over a course that was so heavy that the ball would practically be buried after every shot.

Ralph Bogart, the District amateur champion, led this city's three qualifiers with a 147 total, missing a 15-inch putt on the last green that would have tied Greiner. Next was his buddy, Schoolboy Champion Earle Skinker, with 150, while two shots back was Billy Shea, of Congressional.

Bates, Watts Qualify

Virginia sent two delegates to the qualifying rounds, present State Amateur Champion Samuel Bates, jr., and former Titleholder Jimmy Watts, and they won two places, Watts with a 152 total and Bates after a one-hole playoff with Dr. Edward Stinebert, of Baltimore.

Biggest upset of the day was the failure of the "inch" qualifier, Roger Peacock, to make the grade. Considered a sure thing and a real dark horse in the National Amateur proper, Peacock couldn't even match the 17 over par scores that qualified and was on the outside looking in with 156, finishing with three straight bogeys.

Baltimore's second best bet, Spencer Overton, was two too many with 157 while Bobby Brownell, who figured to qualify if his leg would stand up, took 86 in the morning and a fine comeback 73 in the afternoon.

Skinker Youngest

Skinker is the youngest of the qualifiers, 19, and expects to leave next month for his first year at the University of Illinois. Bogart, 20, is a Wilson High School senior; Greiner, 21, is a Baltimore U. Senior, while Shea, also 21, graduated from Georgetown in June. The Virginians are both 25. Bates is a former Williams and Mary golfer, while Watts captained the Washington-Lee linksmen and later attended Harvard Law School.

Skinker and Bates will be making their National Championships next month in Mamaroneck, N. Y., while it will be the second championship for Bogart, Shea and Watts and the third straight for Greiner.

Greiner undoubtedly played the greatest golf of the day and he deserved the medal. The poker-faced Terra Mariae Club member hit 17 of the 18 greens in the afternoon in regulation figures, and was the only man in the field to reach the 227-yard par three ninth hole from the tee. He was 38-36 in the morning and 36-36 in the afternoon.

Bogart Leads

Bogart, the morning round leader with a 73, was 37-36 and 36-36. The fourth hole was good to him as he dropped two 12-foot birdie deuce putts from the same spot. His worst holes were one over par, and a 25-footer saved him from going two over on the eleventh. He birdied the thirty-fifth hole to give

Challedon Sets Mark, Beats Isolater by Nose

Brann Ace Runs Fastest Whitney To Win in Photograph Finish; Rival Hangs on in Brilliant Drive

By the Associated Press

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 27.—Challedon won the Whitney Stakes today, as everyone had expected, but he encountered difficulties that no one had expected.

William L. Brann's handicap king had to run the fastest mile and a quarter in the history of the event to beat out William Woodward's Isolator in a photo finish. His time was 2:03 1-5, three-fifths of a second faster than War Admiral ran in last year's renewal of the 13-year-old stake. The track record is 2:01 4-5, shared by Man o' War and Sir Barton.

Picks Up $2,725

This was Challedon's first Saratoga appearance and his first at a New York track since he was beaten by Johnstown, also a Woodward horse, in the Dwyer at Aqueduct last year. He picked up $2,725 for his third victory in four starts this year and proved he will be on the favorite if he runs for the Saratoga Cup Saturday. Isolater and Dusky Fox also are eligible for the Cup.

Challedon really had to win the hard way, however, and it took all that he and Jockey Woolf could do to beat Isolater, winner of the Merchants' and Citiens' Handicap last week. After breaking on top, Woolf eased Challedon back and let Isolater set the pace. There was no change in the positions until they rounded the final turn, then Challedon drew up even. But instead of weakening, Isolator hung on courageously and it wasn't until the last stride or two that Challedon got his nose in front.

Only $15,456 Bet

With straight betting only, the crowd of 7,819 sent only $15,456 through the mutuel machines on this race. Challedon paid $2.40 for $2.

Zacharias, from the Millsdale Stable of Tony Pelleteri and M. L. Emmerich, made his first start since winning the Youthful at Jamaica last May and further confused the 2-year-old ratings by winning the thirty-eighth Albany Handicap. A $12.80-for-$2 shot, Zacharias ran the 6 furlongs in 1:12 to finish a length and a half in front of Bold Irishman with Ice Water in third place. G. D. Widener's Overdrawn, winner of the flash, stopped after forcing the early pace and came in fourth, while the only Hopeful Stakes eligible, W. E. Boeing's Twinkippy, was last in the field of five.

Shute Undergoes Appendectomy After Qualifying

By the Associated Press

Hershey, Pa., Aug. 27.—Denny Shute, star professional golfer, was "doing as well as could be expected" tonight after an emergency operation for appendicitis.

Denny Shute

Dr. David A. Johnston, who performed the operation, said it would be two or three days before it could be said that Shute was out of danger, and that it would be several months before he could play golf again.

Shute, who won the P. G. A. championship twice, was stricken late today after he had completed his second qualifying round in the current P. G. A. tournament. He scored rounds of 75-76 to qualify easily. Shute won the British Open in 1933, beating Craig Wood in a play-off.

An ailing wrist put him out of tournament play the past winter, and after an operation he only just had returned to competition when he was knocked out here.

Hartnett to Pilot Cubs Next Season

Chicago, Aug. 27 (AP).—P. K. Wrigley, owner of the Chicago Cubs, announced today that Charles Leo (Gabby) Hartnett will be retained as manager of the team.

Wrigley said he was convinced Hartnett had done a good job this season—much better than he did in 1939. Hartnett, now serving his nineteenth season with the club, took over the management in 1938, replacing Charlie Grimm.

Big Names All Qualify for Nat'l Amateur

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 27.—For about the first time since the United States Golf Association instituted its system of holding sectional qualifying rounds for the amateur golf championship, practically all the big-game players will be on deck when the shooting starts for the big prize at the Winged Foot Club September 9.

Of all those who had to play through the 36-hole sectional tests in 28 locations today only one real top-flight player failed to make the qualifying grade. He was Charley Yates, who carried the British amateur championship trophy back to Atlanta two years ago and has performed various other notable golfing feats. The chances are he, too, will be on hand even though he shot 149 today to finish fifth in his home district. That gave him the first alternate's berth with a chance to play if one of the others drops out.

A good many others whose golfing reputations extended farther than their own back yards—such as Tommy Tailer, Crawford Rainwater, Ken Corcoran, Halbert Blue, Ed Kingsley, Jack Munger and Don Schumacher—couldn't qualify—but the real top hands are all due to be present.

Ten Are Exempt

Ten of the most famous, those who have won the Amateur in previous years, didn't have to undergo today's ordeal, and one famous visitor, Australia's Jim Ferrier, wasn't allowed to play.

Metz P. G. A. Medalist; Scores of 153 Qualify

By the Associated Press

Hershey, Pa., Aug. 27.—Dick Metz, of Chicago, one of the more popular of professional golfers, practically wasted two grand rounds of 69, 71 here the last two days to capture medalist honors in the qualifying round of the annual P. G. A. tournament.

For all his deadeye shooting through the slanting rain and his inspired putting on a water-logged course, the former Texan received a medal for his pains and trophy for his mantel. When the real shooting begins tomorrow in the first two rounds of match play, he will be starting from scratch, just like the other 63 who qualified for the main event.

Metz's two-round total of 140, in fact, might have the distinction of being the last in P. G. A. play. Tom Walsh, president of the body, is thinking seriously of abandoning the preliminary skirmishes hereafter and having the boys start in match play from the first day.

The two District of Columbia professionals each finished three strokes out of the playoff with 157 totals, Gene Larkin with 80-77, 157, and Lewis Worsham, jr., 76-81, 157.

Worsham, who had a chance after a first day 76, took a big seven on the third hole and a six on the tenth to fade out of the picture. His nines were 40-41.

Larkin was out in 37 and needed only a 36 back to win a place but he ran into five fives that sent his score to 40 and 77.

Pennant-Hungry Tigers Start Series Here Today

Detroit's second-place Tigers, three games removed from the league-leading Indians, move into Griffith Stadium today for a two-game series with the Nats.

Idle yesterday because of rain that washed out the final of the Cleveland series, the Nats will send Southpaw Ken Chase to the mound in the opener against the Tigers. Chase held the Detroit club to one run and beat the Tigers the last time he faced them.

The rained-out game with Cleveland will be transferred to the Cleveland home grounds when a double-header will be played on the Nats' next Western trip.

Second Baseman Buddy Myer, out of the Nats' line-up with a bruised throwing hand in their last game, will play today against the Tigers.

Notes on Local Amateur Trials

Wilmer Allison, the former national singles and doubles tennis champ, here as a guest of Griffith Warfield, was a spectator at the National Amateur qualifying rounds yesterday at Chevy Chase . . . Allison played in a few of the Eastern Invitation tennis tourneys, and in the national doubles with his partner, Johnny Van Ryn . . . Chevy Chase Assistant Pro Buck Worsham was called in to play with Jimmy Watts, a qualifier, as Norman Frost was unable to play. Worsham played the course in 74-75, 149, third lowest of the day . . . Bobby Brownell learned Monday night when he went for a treatment for his leg, that he was also suffering from a sprained ankle . . . Bobby played the only par nine of the day, a 34, in the afternoon . . . Dr. Stinebert, loser in the playoff, will be the first alternate and Roger Peacock, the surprise nonqualifier, the second . . . The 38 players, who played 685 holes in the morning round, posted only six birdies on the scoreboard.

WILMER ALLISON

Sam Bates, one of the two Virginia qualifiers, is a former amateur champion of the Philippines, and has won seven straight tournaments, including the Virginia amateur, this season . . . The committee moved the tee markers up in the afternoon, a few yards on each hole . . . Louis Fuchs moved his ball from a puddle of water in a sand trap, and he learned when he finished it cost him two valuable strokes . . . Nate Kaufman played one out of a puddle of water, but took three swings to do it . . . Pros Al Houghton, Leo Walper, Tony Sylvester and Fred McLeod were visitors, while Host Pro Bob Barnett was official starter . . . Houghton and Walper will play in the Scranton, Pa., Open . . . William McIntyre, the "Beater" from St. Petersburg, Fla., scored 91 and no card.

Yanks Continue Belated Drive, Beat Chisox in Ninth, 5-4

Babe Singles After DiMag Fans; Champs Now 2½ Games Back Of 2d-Place Tigers

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 27.—The New York Yankees continued their belated drive toward the top in the American League today by turning back the Chicago White Sox in ten innings, 5 to 4. The victory advanced the champions to 5½ games of the idle Cleveland Indians and 2½ games of the likewise idle Detroit Tigers.

Babe Dahlgren was the hero of the tenth inning uprising after Joe DiMaggio, in the role of pinchhitter, had struck out. Red Rolfe doubled to start the frame, and was sacrificed to third by Tommy Henrich. Charley Keller and George Selkirk were intentionally passed by Johnny Rigney to fill the bases.

Rigney then was relieved by Edgar Smith, who promptly fanned DiMaggio, batting for Bill Dickey. Dahlgren then dropped a single into short right to score Rolfe with the winning run. Rigney was charged with the defeat and Johnny Murphy, who relieved Spud Chandler on the mound for the Yanks after Chandler had been lifted for a pinchhitter in the seventh, got credit for his fifth victory.

The Sox scored one run in the second when singles by Wright and Tresh, and a walk filled the bases and Wright came home on a double-play ball. The Yanks came back with two runs in their half on one hit, an error and two walks.

Dykes Ejected

Manager Jimmy Dykes of the Sox objected too strenuously to a called fourth ball on Dahlgren and was ejected from the game by Umpire George Moriarty.

The Sox scored again in the third on a walk, Solters' single and Appling's sacrifice, and they picked up another run in the fifth on hits by John Rosenthal and Joe Kuhel and an infield out.

Rolfe hit a home run into the lower rightfield stands with none on in the Yankee half of the fifth, but the Sox got that one back in the sixth on Kennedy's single, a walk and an error.

Gordon opened the Yank half of the eighth by doubling. He was sacrificed to third by Rolfe and scored on Henrich's single to left.

Paper Reports Secret Tribe Pep Meeting

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, Aug. 27.—The News says a representative group of Cleveland Indians held a secret meeting in Washington yesterday and pledged one another to "undivided concentration" on the goal of winning the American League pennant, regardless of any feeling against Manager Oscar Vitt.

The meeting "developed into a series of 'pep talks,' in which the players told one another that all else must be subordinated to finishing in first place," the newspaper said.

One report was that they "set up a system of voluntary fines to be levied against any player who fails to meet their standards of hustle and optimism."

Vitt, target of a player rebellion two months ago, said he knew nothing about any meeting but "one fellow who hasn't spoken to me for the last two weeks acted as if I were the best friend he has."

"There was more backslapping—and I got a lot of it—when that final putout was made yesterday than I've experienced in months," Vitt declared.

Shortstop's Initial Major League Circuit Blow in Fourth Beats Bees; Bob Bowman Wins Sixth Victory After Slow Start

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Aug. 27.—Martin Marion's first home run of his major league career in the fourth inning today turned out to be the run needed by the St. Louis Cardinals to defeat the Boston Bees, 4 to 3.

The Bees rallied in the eighth for all their runs and drove Bob Bowman to the showers, but did not deprive him of his sixth victory of the season, Clyde Shoun stopped the uprising with the tying and winning runs on base.

Gene Moore opened with a single and scored on Jim Tobin's safety after Phil Masi had walked. The blow that sent Moore home moved Masi to third. Al Glossop forced Tobin but scored Masi. Then John Cooney singled to right, sending Glossop to second and Bowman to the clubhouse. Carvel Rowell's single filled the bases. Max West's fly to Terry Moore scored Glossop and sent Cooney to third. Jimmy Brown tossed out Chester Ross to end the inning.

After allowing three hits in the first two innings Bowman held the Bees hitless until the eighth.

Passeau Beats Giants, 3-1, For Chicubs

5th Victory in 13 Days Drop New York Into Fourth Place

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 27. — Workhorse Claude Passeau, who has been doing as much pitching as resting in the Cubs' drive toward a first division berth in the National League, won his fifth game in 13 days today with a seven-hit 3-to-1 victory over the New York Giants.

It was his seventeenth victory of the year against 11 defeats. He won out when Bill Lohrman weakened in the fifth and the Cubs pushed two runs over on Stan Hack's single, Billy Herman's booming double and Zeke Bonura's single.

The defeat dropped the Giants into fourth place in the pennant chase.

Bonura was the batting hero of the game, connecting for three hits and driving in the run that put the Cubs ahead of his old mates in the fifth. Hank Leiber hit a homer for an extra run in the eighth.

It was Lohrman's fifth hurling setback in a row, and marked only the second time the Cubs have beaten him this year. In three of his four previous outings against the Cubs he shut out Gabby Hartnett's men.

The Giants started the scoring with their only run in the second inning on Hank Danning's slow roller that went for a single, a passed ball, Mel Ott's single and Tony Cuccinello's base hit. The Cubs made three errors for the New York outfit after that, but the Giant's couldn't cash in on them.

Heurich-Saint Game Reset

For the second straight day rain caused postponement of the Heurich-St. Elizabeths baseball game which was to have launched the local Amateur Baseball Federation tournament yesterday.

Officials, however, had high hopes the affair could be started today on the South Ellipse. More rain was the forecast, but if the deluge is not too terrific, action will take place at 4 p. m.

Stands have already been erected on the downtown diamond, and a slight admission charge will be made. Proceeds will be used to defray expenses of the tourney winner on the trip to the national meet in Birmingham, Ala. To the winner of today's game, if any, will go a clash with Pepco nine in the second game tomorrow. Two defeats will oust a team from further play.

6 Distance Stars To Run in 'Longest' Horse Race Today

Chicago, Aug. 27 (AP).—Six distance runners were named today for the longest horse race held here in 70 years, the 4-mile Marathon event to be run tomorrow afternoon at Washington Park.

The race, fifth and last in a series of distance events sponsored by the track, carries a purse of $3,500. These routers were nominated: Woodcock and King's Winning Mark, winner of the Bullman Handicap of 3¾ miles last Wednesday; Selby Burch's Flat Lance, a star Maryland distance runner; English Harry, Wicket, Tristrap and Miss Apprehend.

The track was expected to be either heavy or muddy for the Marathon, the record for which is 7:10, set 28 years ago by Setomia at Churchill Downs.

Infielders Sought

Good infielders are being sought by Marvin's Credit diamond team. Prospects should call Randolph 4900.

Spanish Spear Winner in 5 Qrange Events

Mrs. Lee's 3-Year-Old Star of First Program; Hi-Ho Wins in Jump

By Anne Hagner
A Staff Correspondent

Orange, Va., Aug. 27.—Winning the five classes he entered, Mrs. D. N. Lee's Spanish Spear lived up to his great reputation by outdistancing every young horse on the grounds at the Orange Horse Show, which opened here today.

With Aubrey Fishback, his trainer-rider, in the saddle, the striking youngster gave every indication that he is ready to win the coveted Virginia 3-year-old championship at the Warrenton Horse Show this week-end, in spite of top juvenile competition from all over the State.

Mrs. Lee's Middleburg Stable added another blue to its collection by taking the touch-and-out sweepstake event with Clover Seed, far-striding son of Haphazard.

Today's session, devoted principally to green hunters, gave little opportunity for more experienced horses to prove their worth. However, Robert S. Waters' Royalty II made his first bid for championship honors by winning the halfbred event, with Charles Lewis in the saddle.

Bon Nuit Second

Mrs. Altemus Whitney's Bon Nuit, young gray stallion who has picked up an amazing number of admirers during his brief show career, won a second to Clover Seed and two fourths in the jumper division today despite a severe attack of colic last night that for a time made his appearance in the show very doubtful. Quick treatment provided an immediate cure, however, and the high-bounding son of Royal Canopy looks as if he is set for big things in tomorrow's closing session.

From the District of Columbia standpoint, Lisbeth Stieg's Hi-Ho triumphed over 20 good open jumpers in the limit event to win the biggest event of the day. With young Miss Stieg up, the little chestnut turned in two brilliant rounds in the slippery going to defeat Fishback and Clover Seed, who placed second.

The drizzle that fell most of the day held down the crowd, but clearer weather in the early evening gave indication for many more spectators tomorrow.

Important classes on the schedule are for lightweight, working, and middle and heavyweight hunters, in addition to many other open jumper and hunter events. First class is set for 9:20.

Redskins Denied Use Of College Officials

Gonzaga Coach to Referee East-West Game in Spokane After Pacific Conference Threatens Whistle-Tooters

By Al Hailey
A Staff Correspondent

Spokane, Wash., Aug. 27.—The Redskins may be hot stuff in the old home town but they're so much spinach to college football moguls here—at least, that's the way it appeared today as the squad prepared for its all-important East-West game tomorrow night in Gonzaga University stadium. Pacific Coast Conference officials scheduled to work the game, considered by Coach Ray Flaherty the climax of the month of training in Spokane, have been ordered not to work the affair.

Ed Atherton, czar of Pacific Coast Conference football, informed the athletic round table, sponsor of the "Skins" trip West and the game tomorrow, that officials would lose their standing in the conference if they worked the professional game. Puggy Hunton, coach at Gonzaga, Flaherty's old alma mater, was hurridly called in, and he rounded up a quartet of volunteer officials to aid him. Hunton will be the referee.

Six Redskins will bite the dust after tomorrow's game, as victims of Flaherty's first step in shaving down the squad of 45 to 33. At first, cold to the idea of seeing the Redskins battle among themselves for jobs, the Spokane citizenry has suddenly become interested and a throng of 8,000 is expected to see the business.

Coach Ray Flaherty's East team which defeated Assistant Coach Turk Edwards' Westerners in Seattle a week ago on a last-minute field goal will have the same starting line-up, with Frank Filchok, Jay Turner, Wilbur Moore and Andy Farkas in the backfield. Maxie Krause, who received a badly bruised back in Seattle, will be out of the West line-up, and Bob Seymour, rookie from Oklahoma U., will start at fullback. Jimmy Johnston, Sammy Baugh and Ed Justice will be the other starting West backs.

Flaherty will announce his cut immediately after tomorrow's night game, and he insisted today that he still is undecided as to whether or not any of the veterans will go. At least three — probably four — veterans, all backfield men, are expected to get the ax.

Gentle Dusek Boys in Team Bout at Arena

As was the case last week, Promoter Joe Turner is offering an extra purse to the winner of tomorrow night's headline two-man team bout at Turner's Arena between the duos of Lou Plummer and Eddie Newman and Ernie and Emil Dusek.

In addition to the winning team's share, the extra cash Turner is tossing in, the two teams are wagering a side bet of $100.

Mildred Burke, the recognized world feminine wrestling champion, will face Betty Foster, Florida titleholder, in a special attraction. Miss Foster is 21 and is said to be an expert grappler. Miss Burke, who claims to be the strongest lightweight feminine wrestler in the world, last appeared here against Ritz Lopez, winning her match.

Should Plummer and Newman win, they will hang up their fourth straight, and will run into a veritable flood of challenges from teams all over the East.

In other bouts tomorrow, Sheriff Tom Hanley, a mere stripling of 300 pounds, will face Tommy Mahoney, reformed prize fighter, and Tommy O'Toole will oppose Herb Freeman, veteran grappler.

tion from the sectional rounds. Ferrier was ruled out almost at the last minute when the U. S. G. A. decided a book about his game, published in Australia, had impaired his amateur status.

Billows Qualifies

Among today's qualifiers were Ray Billows, runner up to Ward last year and to Goodman in 1937; Bob Sweney, former British amateur ruler; Dick Chapman, Johnny Lehman, George Doering, Wilford Wehrle, Fred Haas, jr., Maurice McCarthy, Walter Emery, Pat Abbott, Ted Bishop, Bobby Dunkelberger and Bob Clark and Ed Furgol, winner and medalist, respectively, in the National Public Links Tourney, who received special invitations to compete.

The day's scoring honors were shared by Dunkelberger, the little High Point, N. C., star; Jack Shields, of Tulsa, Okla., and Albert (Scotty) Campbell, former Walker cup player who was the only qualifier in the Seattle district. They turned in 36-hole scores of 141 to top their respective districts. Campbell was five under par with 72-69 while Dunkelberger and Shields each scored 70-71.

All-Star Grid Team Stages Secret Drill

Collegians in Final Workout for Packer Battle Tomorrow

By International News Service

Chicago, Aug. 27.—The College All-Stars and the Green Bay Packers, opponents Thursday night at Soldier Field in the seventh annual All-Star gridiron battle, today deserted their practice fields to stage dress rehearsals.

Under lights tonight at Soldier Field the Collegians engaged in secret signal practice, while the Green Bay Packers will do a bit of the same tomorrow night. While row upon row of vacant seats greeted the Collegians tonight as they took the stage for their dress rehearsal, the reverse will be true at game time Thursday when a crowd of more than 85,000 will jam Soldier Field.

This year's game has taken on added importance because of the fact that in the six games played the score is even-Stephen between the professionals and the collegians. The record thus far is two victories each and two ties.

Added impetus has also been given to the forthcoming event because of the sensational manner in which Green Bay waded through the stern opposition in the National League last year to reach the championship and from the high caliber of athletes banded together under the banner of the All-Stars.

Coach Curly Lambeau, of the Green Bay team, has announced to the world at large that if the Packers do not do anything else Thursday night they will score a touchdown—something the Packers didn't do in their previous appearance against the All-Stars in 1937. As a matter of fact the Packers came up on the short end of a 6-0 count that year.

Max Baer Accepts Sept. 23 Match With Comiskey

New York, Aug. 27 (U.P.).—Promoter Jack Kearnes announced tonight that Ancil Hoffman, manager of Max Baer, has accepted a match with Pat Comiskey at the Jersey City, N. J., ball yard for the week of September 23.

Kearns said that he and his three Jersey backers had guaranteed Baer and Hoffman $30,000 with the privilege of taking 30 per cent of the net gate should that figure exceed the guaranteed sum. Kearns added that the money would be deposited in a bank of Hoffman's choice shortly.

A Baer-Comiskey heavyweight contenders' fight shapes up as the most important bout staged by an independent promoter since Mike Jacobs began his fistic monopoly almost six years ago. Kearns expects the match to draw over $100,000, and if young Comiskey can win impressively over Baer, it virtually will assure him of a title shot at Champion Joe Louis in the near future.

Williams, Jannazzo Meet Tonight

Holman Williams, of Chicago, and Izzy Jannazzo, of New York, two leading contenders for the world welterweight championship, will have it out tonight at Griffith Stadium in a 10-round match postponed from Monday because of rain.

Williams continues in the role of favorite, according to the betting boys, and he is due to go to post a 6-5 favorite.

Both fighters loosened up yesterday to keep from getting stale. Williams returned to Turner's Arena and stepped five rounds, with his trainer, Larry Amadee, watching every move, and expressing himself as quite satisfied that Holman had not lost the fine edge he had attained when he laid aside his gloves Saturday.

Guy Anselmi, Jannazzo's manager, however, proved a bit superstitious yesterday. Anselmi doesn't like postponements, but when it came Monday night he said his fighter would not return to train at the same spot Williams went through his paces.

Works at Huron

Therefore, Anselmi hustled Jannazzo and his trainer, Chick Ferrerra, to the stuffy little Huron gym on Eleventh street, and Izzy worked there for more than half an hour.

According to the District Boxing Commission rules, both fighters must reweigh today at 2 p. m. Monday Williams weighed 149 pounds, while Jannazzo came in at 146½.

Manager Anselmi, backed by John Roxborough and Joe Louis, his comanagers, as well as the District Boxing Commission, hopes to have the N. B. A. recognize tonight's bout as the first in an elimination tournament to decide Armstrong's successor. Anselmi is still awaiting a reply to his telegram send Monday to Lieut. Col. Harvey Miller, N. B. A. president.

Matchmaker Gabe Menedez would like to match Cocoa Kid, the No. 1 contender, against the winner of the Williams-Jannazzo bout, and that, too, is quite agreeable with Anselmi and Roxborough. But trying to get the Keed into the ring with the victor is a big headache to Menendez. Trying to get Milt Aron, of Chicago, No. 2 contender, is equally as big a problem. Williams is ranked No. 3 Jannazzo No. 4. But the New York Athletic Commission rates Izzy as its leading contender.

The supporting card stands up as originally scheduled. Tommy (Killer) Kiene, Southern bantamweight champion who weighed 115 Monday, and Joey Puig, of New York, who weighed 116, clash in a six-rounder.

Billy Banks, local colored flash, faces Calvin Calp, Baltimore, in a six; Justo Jimenez, Mexican star, takes on Carl Stein in a six; Jimmy Green and Jabo Keener, to local colored heavies, clash in a four and Tommy Ricco faces George Vlahos in a four.

First bout is at 8:30.

Jockey King Palumbo Escapes Spectacular Marlboro Spill

Hiblaze Wins Feature Race Before 5,000

Palumbo, Astride Molasses Julia, Falls When Horse Bolts Through Fence

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Marlboro, Md., Aug. 27.—Jockey Sammy Palumbo, king of the smaller track riders, escaped serious injury today in a spectacular spill in the fifth race. Palumbo was astride Molasses Julia when the filly lost her saddle equipment and lunged through the fence on the backstretch. The ambulance rushed to the scene but Palumbo was on his feet to meet the conveyance. He canceled his only remaining mount for the day and said he would ride tomorrow providing a sore right wrist did not stiffen.

Molasses Julia was a heavily played favorite and was setting the pace at the time of the accident. Flybalk, owned by John Pons, of Washington, was close to the pacemaker and went on to win in easy fashion. Olivilo, owned by E. H. Cashell, of Rockville, was second with Miss Pilgrim, the property of District Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, third. Flybalk paid $10.80.

5,000 Brave Drizzle

Despite intermittent rain, a crowd of 5,000 turned out to see the sport conducted over a deep muddy track. The day's wagering totaled $93,000 and as usual topped the similar day of last year's meeting.

The Andover Farm Purse, the scheduled feature, resulted in a blanket finish in which the camera was called to the aid of the judges. R. C. Waple's Hiblaze was the winner by a neck margin in front of a nose contest for second money. The Hillbrook Farm's Miss Maker was declared the second horse with Capt. Johnston's Cats Cradle, third. Hiblaze paid $13.10 and was clocked for the 5½ furlongs in a creditable 1:10.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DANCING CLOUD, $18.20, $7.00, $5.20; PARADISE GIRL, $31.00, $10.80; OSOFREE, $3.90.

DANCING CLOUD, railed while close up, responded when shaken up to dispose of OSOFREE and held PARADISE GIRL safe in closing test. PARADISE GIRL, well placed throughout, came with good energy in closing stages and hung right at end. OSOFREE broke on top, set good pace, but weakened under pressure in closing stages. ROMNEY ROYAL, with front bandages on, was closest to pace early and stopped. BRIAR BIRD was knocked back early.

SECOND RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 2:42. Off 2:43. Winner, Mrs. C. M. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SPOUT RUN (entry), $6.60, $3.80, $2.70; BLUE PRELUDE, $4.20, $2.80; CRIMSON LANCER, $4.20.

SPOUT RUN, not hurried early, came out to improve position steadily, went to front with good speed and won easily. BLUE PRELUDE was hustled to dispose of REPEAT and was tiring badly at close. CRIMSON LANCER was keen forward factor from start, bumped DIN nearing stretch and closed gamely. DEODO faltered.

Daily Double, DANCING CLOUD and SPOUT RUN, Paid $57.90

THIRD RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good from gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 3:13. Off 3:14. Winner, John E. Hughes' ch. f. †A. C. Randolph-E. Johnston entry.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MISTY EYE, $5.00, $3.00, $2.50; DELHI DAN (entry), $3.50, $2.40; IDA TIME, $2.60.

MISTY EYE assumed command at once, was steadied along while setting pace and won with some speed in reserve. DELHI DAN was carried wide by DON BARR at first turn and recovered to show good effort. IDA TIME closed with good energy. DON BARR was rushed early and weakened.

FOURTH RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:43. Off 3:45. Winner, R. C. Waple's br. s. (5), by Blaze—Heaway. Trained by M. H. Everhart. Value to winner, $325; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:10.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HI-BLAZE, $13.10, $5.60, $3.80; MISS MAKER, $7.60, $5.10; CAT'S CRADLE, $4.70.

HI-BLAZE, gamely, shook off LULA KHAYYAM and was held together under strong handling in closing stages. MISS MAKER, allowed to settle into stride, came out for racing room and barely failed to get up while going fastest at end. CAT'S CRADLE was vigorously handled while forward factor and held on willingly. LULA KHAYYAM raced on rail. Witmer's claim of foul was not allowed.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 4:17. Off 4:18. Winner, John Hughes' ch. c. (3), by Balko—Fire Fly. Trained by G. A. Cook. Value to winner, $275; second, $75; third, $35; fourth, $15. Time, 2:01.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FLYBALK, $10.80, $5.80, $4.40; OLIVILO, $13.20, $7.00; MISS PILGRIM, $12.10.

FLYBALK, steadied early while racing wide, responded when shaken up and went to front to win easily. OLIVILO was hard ridden and closed with good energy. MISS PILGRIM lacked early speed and closed gamely. BUD'S LIGHT was outrun. MOLASSES JULIA'S saddle came off and Palumbo was unseated.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won easily; place same. Went to post 4:52. Off 4:53. Winner, N. J. Pillman's b. g. (6), by Bubbling Over—Lady Blaworth. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $275; second, $75; third, $35; fourth, $15. Time, 1:59.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BUBBLEWORTH, $4.80, $3.50, $3.20; MAETAKE, $3.40, $3.30; ADO, $5.60.

BUBBLEWORTH was hustled going to first turn, drew out and was not seriously threatened. MAETAKE was hard ridden and showed good effort. ADO closed gamely. PRAIRIE MAN was forward factor under hard drive and weakened.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:23. Off 5:24. Winner, Mrs. C. H. Sprague's ch. m. (5), by Pilate—Bonnie Belle. Trained by C. H. Sprague. Value to winner, $275; second, $75; third, $35; fourth, $15. Time, 2:01.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DACOTAH, $5.20, $3.60, $2.50; PENCADER, $4.80, $3.10; LADY SOLACE, $2.70.

DACOTAH, attended after getting to front, responded when placed to drive and held away to end. PENCADER came out for racing room, went to serious contention and closed gamely on extreme outside. LADY SOLACE weakened after reaching contention on inside. ELSIE J. stopped. CHIEF EVERGREEN had some early speed.

Dudie Takes Feature Race at Narragansett

Horse Then Claimed By King Farm; Double Pays $520.50 to 29

By the Associated Press

Pawtucket, R. I., Aug. 27.—William H. Gallagher won a race but lost a horse at Narragansett Park race track today when his 3-year-old son of Reigh Count, Dudie, a 9-to-10 favorite, took the Colchester Purse and then was claimed by the King Farm. The distance was 6 furlongs.

Running at a claiming price of $3,000, Dudie won by a length and a quarter from W. J. Sprow's Winning Chance, which had three lengths on B. N. Kane's Boy Baby. G. W. Preak's Scotch Trap was fourth.

One of two horses carrying the light impost of 106 pounds, Dudie was kept back of the early pace setters until approaching the half-mile pole. Then Jockey Johnny Barba sent his mount up on the outside and engaged Mrs. E. C. Eastwood's Sack, which had taken the lead in a stiff backstretch duel with Millen & Haymaker's Balkan War.

Winning Chance, outrun early in the race, came through on the rail and made a strong bid for first money. Barba had to hustle Dudie along to save the victory. Boy Baby's strength was sapped when he ran off 6 furlongs before the start.

Dudie paid $3.80, $3 and $2.50, Winning Chance, $6.20 and $3.60, and Boy Baby $3.80. The daily double paid $520.50 on 29 tickets combining My Lawyer, winner of the first, and Up the Hill, winner of the second.

Bill Gallon Wins and Sets Trotting Mark

By the Associated Press

Syracuse, N. Y., Aug. 27.—Season records went by the boards in the Grand Circuit Feature race at the New York State Fair today as Bill Gallon beat Florimel in the $7,000 Noyes stake for two-year--old trotters.

Florimel, owned by the Arden Homestead Stable of Goshen, N. Y., and driven by Pownall, won the first heat and trotted the fastest mile by a juvenile this year, 2:05, but Bill Gallon, owned by R. H. Johnston, Charlotte, N. C., and driven by Lee Smith, came back to cut half a second off that mark in winning the second heat, and then bested Florimel again in the two-horse runoff. Nine horses faced the barrier for this event, but the heat winners proved much the best, and the total time for the three heats also was the best for two-year-olds this year.

Driver Henry Thomas and the Hanover Shoe Farms scored a double on the four-race program, watched by a small crowd, as he drove Atlantic Hanover to a straight-heat victory in the co-feature, the second division pace of the trotting club stake and came back to win first place in the fourth division of the trotting club trot.

—At The Post

Dear Al:

A poll conducted by Edgar Horn and the boys at the Turf and Sport Digest named the fine Vanderbilt 2-year-old, New World. Trainer Tom Lewis was a boxer during the first World War. He was opposed to Gene Tunney in a bout at Paris in 1918. L. O. Payne purchased Kittiwake yesterday morning from A. Derrico before the filly ran in the fifth race. Sammy Palumbo got a good hand when it was announced that he had not been hurt when Molasses Julia went through the fence. Dr. G. T. Strother came down to see Molasses Julia perform. It was a tough break for him and the favorite players. Twenty-nine different trainers won races here during the first five days of the meeting. Claude Feltner is working here as a valet. He will resume training horses next spring. Don't forget the O'Donnell Farm Purse on tomorrow's card. Tom O'Donnell is giving a trophy to the winning owner. It will take a lot of sun to make this track fast before the meeting closes on Saturday. By the way, Timonium opens on Monday and Havre de Grace on September 14. How time flies. J. W. Etheridge claimed Osofree out of yesterday's first race for $500. Galt Davis is busy putting his Rosslyn bowling alley in shape for the fall season. I should get a free game for the plug. I believe I can out roll Art Brown at that. Where was Alan Clarke when Little Mowlee was out of the money? With the ball game called off we had a lot of strange faces at the track. I understand the boys are doing all right at Wheeling. I feel sorry for those horses who are stabled over in the back of the track in a shed with a big sign on it which reads "Cattle Exhibition." That might be more truth than poetry at that. See you on the rail. BILL.

First race—Blenheim Rose will like the soft going and turned in an encouraging race recently. Seems good as any other in this field of maidens. Serrano may turn in a good race in a field of this sort. High Bud is a doubtful starter but should be in the thick of contention if sent postward.

Second race—Justa Canter appears well placed in this sprint. Has worked well and loves the mud. Wahoo has been rested but is a tough gamble because he may be left. Spanish Dot has a bit of class and should find his way into the pay circle.

Third race—All Gray stopped as if shot in that last but has so much speed that I'm going to take my chances. Lady Andy performed in good style while racing greenly last out and is dangerous. Lord Longworth made up much ground last out and is a threat.

Fourth race—Sistaur and Gennaro were close up in their recent outings and seem destined to battle it out for the chief award in this field. I prefer them in the order named. Golden Mayne loves the track and won last out.

Fifth race—Squabble had trouble in the early stages of that recent race. With a break in the racing luck, this could be the right one. The Lewis Entry of Goodwine and Yankee Lad is formidable. Satin Royce should be a factor and may cause an upset.

Sixth race—First Fling seems the best suited of this field. Needs only to run back to that Cumberland race. Uniawful closed like the wind here Monday and will be right there. Flag Etta may forget to stop and be in the pay circle.

Seventh race—I'm going to take America First over the Benning Stable's Clymene. This is a natural choice. However, I'm going to try to root the stable's horse home. Moon Harvest and Chilly Ebbie are better than shown last out.

Best bet—Blenheim Rose.

Home Building 'Lag' Here Seen In Nine Years

Real Estate Men Say Figure in Syndicate Survey Exaggerated

Washington has not built sufficient homes in the last nine years to care for its population increase according to a survey by C. J. Ryan, vice president of Investors Syndicate.

But informed real estate men here were quick to take exception when shown the conclusions of Mr. Ryan's survey. Representative of the view in authoritative sources here was this comment:

"Apparently, Mr. Ryan in his survey has failed to take into consideration the fact that many homes for Washington workers have been erected in nearby Virginia and Maryland. His survey is highly interesting but should be digested with more than a few grains of salt. There most likely was a 'lag' in home building during the past nine years but not to the extent indicated."

Mr. Ryan's Comments

"Population in Washington," said Mr. Ryan in commenting on home building in 310 cities, "approximated 663,153, a rise of 176,284, or 36 per cent over the final population figure for 1930, according to preliminary figures of the Bureau of Census for 1940. From 1931 to 1939, inclusive, homes put up in Washington furnished housing for 129,112 people, or enough to take care of only 73.2 per cent of the estimated population gain in that period."

However, a favorable indication is the fact that Washington home building last year reached the highest valuation level in ten years, Mr. Ryan noted.

The Investors Syndicate survey shows that new homes put up here in 1939 represented 19.2 per cent of total residential construction for the 9-year period. Volume peak of 25,516 came in 1936, while the low was in 1933, when only 2,320 were furnished with new homes.

"Residences erected in Washington last year were valued at $25,974,630, a rise of $8,506,625, or 48.7 per cent, over the 1938 level of $17,468,205. New home expenditures in 1939 were $12,067,830, or 87 per cent higher than the 1930 total of $13,887,000. From 1931 to 1939, inclusive, such valuations aggregated $139,381,282," said Mr. Ryan.

"Last year's valuations constituted 18.6 per cent of the new home values created in the 1931-1939 period. Peak of new home valuations, $25,97,830, was created in 1939, while the low, $3,354,600, was hit in 1933."

Mortgage Bankers to Meet

Economic questions will be discussed at the twenty-seventh annual convention of the Mortgage Bankers Association of America, in Chicago on October 2, 3 and 4, by Dr. Claude L. Benner, vice president of the Continental American Life Insurance Co., of Wilmington, Del. The subject of Dr. Benner's address will be "Some Economic Consequences of the European War."

Dr. Benner has served on the faculties of the Universities of Michigan and Delaware and was formerly a member of the research staff of the Brookings Institution in Washington.

Directors of Julius Garfinckel & Co., Inc., declared the regular quarterly dividend of 37½ cents a share on preferred stock, payable September 30, to stockholders of record September 14, and the regular quarterly dividend of 17½ cents a share on the company's common stock, payable September 14, to stockholders of record September 5.

Cotton Futures

New York, Aug. 27 (AP).—Foreign selling, plus quickened hedging pressure, depressed cotton futures 3 to 7 points today. Final quotations were low for the session despite flurries of demand from trade and mill accounts.

The market got off to a lower start on an overnight accumulation of hedging sales. Demand revived for a while but offerings of about 5,000 bales, believed to be for Bombay account, sent the list downward again.

Hedge sales increased later in the day, which emphasized the recession. Hedging has been unusually light recently because of unfavorable conditions which have held up marketing of the new crop.

Interest in textiles broadened. Worth street reported and business was done at the best levls attained late last week.

Exchange Markets

New York, Aug. 27 (AP).—Alone of the important world currencies, the Canadian dollar gained ground today in relation to the United States dollar in "free" trading.

The Canadian money rose .12½ of a cent to a quotation of 87.12½ United States cents.

The only other international currency to change its relationship to United States money was the Hongkong dollar which gained .06 of a cent.

Closing rates follow (Great Britain in dollars, others in cents):

Official Canadian control board rates for United States dollars: Buying 10 per cent premium, selling 11 per cent premium, equivalent to discounts on Canadian dollars in New York of buying 9.91 per cent, selling 9.09 per cent.

Stocks Continue to Wallow in Narrow Trough; Discontent Grows Over Defense Plan Delay

New York, Aug. 27.—The stock market backed and filled in a range of less than a quarter of a point today and closed with a negligible average decline of 0.03 point in quiet trading of 224,100 shares. Since the middle of June the chart shows the market moving virtually in a straight line and there is as yet no indication of when it will break the bounds of its narrow trough.

Old timers in the street cannot recall a period of such duration in which the market, which is supposed to measure the sentiment and expectations of those with money to invest, has reflected the present degree of uncertainty. There are three major factors concerned in the present uncertainty and a decision one way or the other in any one of them, or even the hint of a decision, would have an immediate reflection in values of securities. Yet we have been going along for more than two months with the outcome in each matter of guesswork. The three major divisions of our perplexity fall under the headings of the war in Europe, the political battle in this country and the possible effect of both on our business.

In the case of the latter there is growing discontent over the delay in promoting our defense program, chiefly because this is no time to toy with the vital problem of preparing our country to withstand attack and secondly because the delay of Washington in cutting through red tape and letting contracts for needed materials is also holding back business improvements.

The number of suits which are suddenly being brought against business concerns carries the hint that politics is playing far too important a role in the matter of defense, and that the groundwork is being laid to declare that it was not the fault of Washington but of business that we are unprepared.

There was another such court action today, this time against four companies and six individuals on charges of price fixing in the aircraft fabric industry. Without having any idea of the degree of guilt of those who were indicted, assuming there is any guilt, the bringing of this action at this time raises some questions. It is alleged, for instance, that the concerns have been guilty since 1936. One wonders why action has been delayed until 1940. One also wonders why action is taken just when we need fabric and everything else for the manufacture of airplanes, and more important still, one wonders how the companies are going to continue to supply the Nation with what it needs if its executives are to be kept waiting in anterooms for a period of months while the Government tries its case. Another question that should be answered is why we can't try this case after the present emergency passes; we have already waited four years.

The dull markets and meaningless price fluctuations which we are having in Wall street reflect more than anything else the disappointment over the bogging down of our defense efforts. The investor who would like to place his savings in a company that is prepared to take a Government contract, cannot be blamed for holding back.

Fluctuations of individual stocks in today's trading meant little. Loft was the most active of the day. There was a pickup in the meat packing shares on reports that cattle prices are at their highest in three years. Armour of Illinois was a favorite and its gain of ⅝ point was large on a percentage basis. Standard of New Jersey dropped a half, one of the largest declines of the better-known stocks. Railroad equipment issues generally were well supported and Kennecott was popular in the metal division.

An easier tone prevailed in bond market prices in most sections of the list today with volume of dealings at $2,626,000 on the stock exchange continuing small.

Interest in Treasury obligations dwindled but most of the few transactions were at lower levels, mainly on renewed unfavorable reaction to events abroad. Final prices in the over-counter market were unchanged to 6-32 lower.

In the foreign list there were some wide price changes without large turnover. Individual Belgian, Czech and Norwegian issues were down sharply while Danish 6s sold up more than 4 points. Canadian bonds were steady except for the rail issues which moved lower. Australians were mixed while Italian and Japanese liens had a generally easier tone. German bonds also were mixed, Berlin City municipal 6½s selling down 2½.

The average of 30 domestic issues was off 0.07 point on the day, a decline which was matched exactly in the average for best grade rails. More speculative carrier issues sold up 0.06 point and utilities were up 0.08 point. Industrials appeared under a little more pressure, declining 0.20 point in the averages.

Boston Wool Market

Boston, Aug. 27 (AP) (U. S. Dept. of Agri.).—Fine Western wools were receiving a fair demand today in Boston. Graded fine territory wools brought 89@91 cents, scoured basis, for staple combing lengths and 83@88 cents, scoured basis, for French combing lengths. Staple combing half blood territory wools brought 83@85 cents, scoured basis. Graded combing bright fleece wools were sold at 39@40 cents, in the grease, for quarter blood and 40@42 cents for low quarter blood.

Wheat Spurts As Operators Rush to Cover

By the Associated Press

Commodities leaned upward in main futures markets yesterday but enough staples struck against the trend to mar uniformity of the advance.

Wheat at Chicago advanced 1⅛ to 1⅛ cents a bushel on a late rush of covering by short operators. Reports of a Russian-Rumanian border clash attracted pit attention. Corn ended ¼ cent lower to 1 higher.

Sugar futures advanced briskly at New York in reflection of the reduction of U. S. import quotas.

Hides, strong Monday, thrust up again with outside gains of ¼ cent a pound. Traders seemed less worried about the competitive importance of the South American hide supply.

Other staples marked up a notch included cocoa, wool tops and cottonseed oil.

Cotton slipped 15 to 35 cents a bale under selling credited to Far Eastern accounts. Coffee and lead also dipped, while silk, rubber and Straits tin were irregular.

B. & O. July Net Under Last Year's

Baltimore, Aug. 27 (AP).—The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad reported yesterday that its net operating income in July was below that of July a year ago but that its net operating income for the first seven months this year was $4,609,238 ahead of the same period in 1939.

Income for the seven months totaled $14,585,294. The July income was $2,209,132, a decrease of $58,706 compared with July, 1939. In an earlier story yesterday the Associated Press erred when it said that July income showed an increase.

Dow Chemical to File $25,000,000 Offering

Midland, Mich., Aug. 27 (AP).—Willard H. Dow, president of the Dow Chemical Co., said today the company expected to file a registration statement with the Securities and Exchange Commission at Washington for issuance on new securities to finance expansion of magnesium metal production at a Texas plant.

Dr. Dow said that in all probability the statement would be filed this week and would seek approval of a sale of $15,000,000 in 10-year debentures and $10,000,000 in common stock.

Loan League To Mark 50th Anniversary

Ten Capital Members Over Half-Century Old To Aid Celebration

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Ten member associations of the District of Columbia Building & Loan League will participate in the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the United States Savings & Loan League next month. These local associations, all established prior to 1890, report combined resources in excess of $111,000,000.

The oldest local group is Oriental Building Association, established in 1861. Metropolis Building Association is the second oldest. Others, in order of their establishment, include American, 1874; Equitable Cooperative, 1879; Washington Permanent, 1881; Perpetual, 1881; Home, 1883; Citizens Equitable, 1883; Eastern, 1889; National Permanent, 1890. Northern Liberty Building Association will celebrate its fiftieth anniversary in 1941.

President George W. West, of the United States Savings & Loan League, reminds that during the first 40 years' existence of these institutions they were the only sources of credit for home owners who wished to pay back on the installment plan and thus assure themselves of debt-free ownership within 7 to 12 years. Their experience with this operation was the basis for recent sponsorship of the plan by Federal instrumentalities.

Most of these original amortizing home-owner credit institutions, he explains, have modernized their practices considerably since their first charter and by-laws were drawn in 1890.

Combined Profits of Nine Auto Firms A re $217,000,000

The Securities Commission reported yesterday, in a supplement to its survey of American listed corporations, that nine major automobile companies had a combined profit after all charges of $217,000,000 last year, compared with $102,000,000 in 1938.

The combined volume of business was placed at $2,254,000,000, an increase of $541,000,000 over 1938.

General Motors Corporation accounted for $183,260,000 of the total net profit, the commission report said.

Celanese Corporation of America

3% Debentures, due August 1, 1955

The following is a brief outline of certain information contained in the offering prospectus and is subject to the more detailed statements in such prospectus and in the registration statement, which also include important information not outlined or indicated herein and which are hereby incorporated by reference. The offering prospectus, which must be furnished to each purchaser, should be read prior to any purchase of Debentures.

THE CORPORATION: The principal business of the Corporation is the manufacture and sale at wholesale of cellulose acetate yarns and fabrics containing such yarns. The principal part of the yarns manufactured by the Corporation is sold, on a current order basis, to weaving and knitting mills, and the Corporation, either directly or through subsidiaries, uses part of its yarn production in the weaving and knitting of fabrics which are sold in finished form.

Manufacturing plants of the Corporation are located near Cumberland, Maryland and Pearisburg, Virginia; wholly-owned subsidiaries have weaving plants at Williamsport, Pennsylvania, and New London, Connecticut; and Celluloid Corporation (a subsidiary, 51% of the common stock of which is owned by the Corporation) has plants in Newark, New Jersey, for the manufacture of plastic products.

The Corporation and its subsidiaries intend to continue in business of the general character outlined in the offering prospectus and, from time to time, may develop, produce and sell other and new products.

Drs. Camille and Henry Dreyfus were active in the organization of the Corporation (in 1918 under the laws of Delaware) and of British Celanese Limited and Canadian Celanese Limited, and reference is made to the offering prospectus for information concerning common directors and officers of the Corporation and such companies and the relationships of the Drs. Dreyfus to the Corporation and such companies.

CAPITALIZATION: Outstanding at June 30, 1940 and to be outstanding upon the issuance of the 3% Debentures and the consummation of the transactions referred to below:

	Outstanding	To be Outstanding

Notes:

(a) Upon the issuance of the 3% Debentures, the Corporation will (1) deposit in trust, funds sufficient to redeem the outstanding 3¼% Debentures (upon which interest was reduced from 4¼% on March 25, 1940), (2) obtain bank loans aggregating $5,000,000, and (3) apply the proceeds of such bank loans, together with other funds, to the payment of the $6,080,000 of outstanding bank loans.

(b) Of these notes, $5,000,000 bear interest at the rate of 2½% per annum (reduced from 3½% on March 25, 1940), and mature serially, 1940-1943, inclusive; the remaining $1,080,000 bear interest at the rate of 3¼% per annum, and mature serially, 1941-1945, inclusive.

(c) 26,266 shares of Common Stock were issued on August 15, 1940 in payment of a stock dividend on the Common Stock.

PURPOSE OF ISSUE: The net proceeds from the sale of the 3% Debentures are estimated at $23,768,775, exclusive of accrued interest and after deducting estimated expenses. Of such net proceeds, $10,550,000 is to be applied to the redemption, on or about the thirtieth day after the issuance of these Debentures, of the outstanding debentures of the Corporation. The balance of the net proceeds is to become a part of the general funds of the Corporation. The Corporation estimates at the present time that it will, over the course of the next two years, use out of its general funds approximately $14,000,000 for plant additions, equipment and improvements.

EARNINGS: The following tabulation, certified by Messrs. Peat, Marwick, Mitchell & Co., independent public accountants, is condensed from the consolidated profit and loss account of the Corporation and its wholly-owned subsidiaries included in the offering prospectus. Such tabulation is subject to, and should be read in connection with, the financial statements and the notes thereto, included in such prospectus.

DEBENTURES: The 3% Debentures are not to be secured by any lien (except under certain circumstances) and are to be issued under an Indenture, dated August 1, 1940, between the Corporation and City Bank Farmers Trust Company, as Trustee. The Indenture is not to authorize the issuance of any additional securities thereunder. The creation of unsecured indebtedness by the Corporation is not to be restricted by the Indenture, except that the Corporation is to covenant not to have outstanding at any one time, except under certain conditions, secured or unsecured funded debt (as defined) in excess of the sum of (a) the 3% Debentures then outstanding, (b) the then unpaid face amount of the 1¼% Bank Loans, and (c) $5,000,000 of additional funded debt. Reference is made to the offering prospectus as to covenants in the Indenture with respect to indebtedness of wholly-owned subsidiaries, and as to certain restrictions on dividends and on distribution of assets by the Corporation.

SINKING FUND AND REDEMPTION: The Corporation is to covenant that (subject to the credit referred to below) it will, semi-annually from August 1, 1941 to February 1, 1955, retire Debentures through the Sinking Fund in the following principal amounts: the first nine semi-annual installments to be of $100,000 each; the remaining semi-annual installments to range from $600,000 to $1,100,000 each; such retirements being sufficient in the aggregate to retire $16,400,000 of the Debentures prior to maturity. The Corporation is to be entitled to a credit, in respect of any Sinking Fund obligation, for Debentures theretofore redeemed (other than through the Sinking Fund) and not previously credited. Retirements for the Sinking Fund may be effected by the deposit by the Corporation of Debentures (theretofore acquired by it otherwise than through redemption) or by redemption of Debentures at their principal amount plus accrued interest.

The Debentures are also to be redeemable (otherwise than through operation of the Sinking Fund) as a whole or in part at any time at the following percentages of the principal amount thereof plus accrued interest: 101% to August 1, 1945; 100½% thereafter to August 1, 1950; and 100% thereafter and prior to maturity.

UNDERWRITING: Subject to certain terms and conditions, the underwriters named in the offering prospectus (including the undersigned) have agreed severally to purchase the 3% Debentures from the Corporation, not later than the eighth full business day after the effective date of the registration statement, at 95¼%; or a total of $23,937,500, plus accrued interest. The offering price of such Debentures to the public is 98%, or a total of $24,500,000, plus accrued interest. The underwriting discount is 2¼%, or a total of $562,500 (not including $40,000 to be paid by the Corporation in reimbursement of certain of the expenses of the underwriters).

plus accrued interest from August 1, 1940, to the date of delivery

The offer of these Debentures is made only by the offering prospectus and is subject to the terms of offering set forth therein, and to approval of legal proceedings by Messrs. Wright, Gordon, Zachry & Parlin, counsel for the underwriters, and by Messrs. Shearman & Sterling, counsel for the Corporation. It is expected that the Debentures in temporary form will be ready for delivery on or about August 29, 1940, at the office of Dillon, Read & Co., New York, against payment therefor in New York funds.

TO FACILITATE THE OFFERING, IT IS INTENDED TO STABILIZE THE PRICE OF THE 3% DEBENTURES, DUE AUGUST 1, 1955. THIS STATEMENT IS NOT AN ASSURANCE THAT THE PRICE OF THE ABOVE SECURITY WILL BE STABILIZED OR THAT THE STABILIZING, IF COMMENCED, MAY NOT BE DISCONTINUED AT ANY TIME.

Further information, in particular financial statements, is contained in the registration statement on file with the Securities and Exchange Commission, and in the offering prospectus which must be furnished to each purchaser and is obtainable from any of the undersigned.

Bogart, Shea Qualify for Nat'l Amateur

him a par four tie with Greiner but he three-putted the last to give the Baltimorean the U. S. G. A. medal.

Skinker was the surprise package of the field. The Columbia youngster was given a chance to qualify, but he not only qualified but had a good chance all day to win the medal. He was comfortably in the low scores in the morning with a 76 and played the first eight holes in par in the late afternoon.

He finished by three-putting the eighteenth green, from 25 feet. He hit only 5 of the 18 greens in the afternoon, but scrambled to pars and birdies.

Comeback laurels go to Billy Shea, the former Middle Atlantic and District champion, who was on the verge of nonqualification in the morning with a 79, but who rallied nicely with a 73 to gain a place with shots to spare. He birdied the thirty-fifth hole, dropping a 10-foot putt, and then went over on 18, a bogey he thought at the time had cost him a place. After an out nine of 42, he was back with 37-37 and 36. He, too, missed the greens with regulation figures, but chipped and putted time and again for pars.

Watts, the 1938 Virginia amateur champion, also posted three commendable nines after a bad start. He was 41 out in the morning when the field was caught in the hardest downpour of the day, but he was back in 37 for a 78, and aided by two birdies he scored a 74 for 152 in the afternoon.

Bates, who threw a second shot on the eighteenth hole within three feet of the pin, but missed the putt for 155, thought his score was too high and he dressed and stopped by the golf shop to pick up his clubs when he was informed his score qualified for the playoff. He chipped for a par four on the first hole while Stinebert was short in two and missed a 12-footer for a par.

Stinebert could blame only himself for not qualifying, for with a place apparently cinched with four holes to play, he finished with two bogey fives, a par on the seventeenth and a two-over par six on the eighteenth when his second shot carried over the green and hit a spectator, saving him some 20 yards. He chipped back and missed the putt for a five.

P. G. A. Medal To Metz as 153 Qualifies

Pursuing Metz to the wire through today's steady rain was Harold (Jug) McSpaden, the old Kansas boy who now plays out of Winchester, Mass. He shot rounds of 70-71-141. Henry Picard, the local professional who knows every tuft of clover, took third place with 73-69-142.

Today's activity, already dreary enough because of the weather, was saddened further by a late announcement that Denny Shute had been taken to the local hospital for an emergency appendectomy.

Shute, winner of the P. G. A. title in 1936 and 1937, was out of competition all the past winter with an ailing wrist, and only recently celebrated his return to the wars by playing in the Canadian Open. He qualified amply the last two days with rounds of 75-76.

Metz's two days of low scoring on a course which boasts a par of 73 were distinguished by brilliant, or lucky, putting. Dick modestly said it was luck. Yesterday he required only 29 putts on 18 sodden greens. Today he took 30.

Strangely, none of the Nation's red hots failed to qualify for match play. Total scores of 153 got in without a struggle. Leo Diegel, who won the title twice in the roaring '20's posted a total of 155 and was left behind, and the veteran Jim Barnes, who won the first P. G. A. tournament in 1916, lost out with 157, but all of the modern gallery attractions survived the test.

Ben Hogan, the winter's biggest money winner, placed fourth at 143, and Ed Dudley, the Philadelphia veteran, scored 145. Vic Ghezzi and John Kinder had 146's. Frank Walsh, Al Watrous and Sam Snead were well within the wire with 147. In the 148 bracket were Johnny Revolta, Gene Sarazen, Jimmy Hines and Ky Lafoon.

Chairman Crowley Becomes President Of Standard Gas

New York, Aug. 27 (AP).—Leo T. Crowley, head of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, has become president as well as chairman of the Standard Gas & Electric Co., holding unit of a big public utility system.

As president, Crowley replaced Bernard W. Lynch, who has been with the Standard Gas System more than 30 years and became president in 1936.

The shift, effective August 15, was disclosed in a letter to Standard Gas & Electric security holders offering the top company's debentures in exchange for common stock of the San Diego Consolidated Gas & Electric Co., part of a plan for simplifying the corporate set-up.

Crowley became chairman of the holding company last December, succeeding Victor Emanuel, who took the chairmanship of the finance committee.

Crowley retained his Government post as chairman of the FDIC, but is expected to devote all his attention to the utility system after the November elections.

New Investment Firm Makes Initial Offering

New York, Aug. 27 (AP).—The first new investment company offering securities under the recently-enacted Federal law regulating investment companies was announced today.

Lord, Abbett & Co., a Wall Street investment house, offered publicly five classes of common stock of Union Trusted Funds, Inc., involving about $10,000,000 at current prices.

"The new company embodies in its corporate organization a number of features harmonizing with the spirit as well as the letter of the recently-enacted bill," the announcement said.

Foreign Markets

London, Aug. 27 (AP).—Security prices held up well today although trade was confined mainly to leaders in each category. British government bonds showed general gains of ¼ point. A few losses spotted the industrial group although textiles attracted buying interest. Kaffirs recovered after a shaky start. Trinidad issues again took leadership of the oils. A few provincial orders sustained domestic rails. Foreign bonds coasted along evenly.

Liverpool, Aug. 27 (AP).—Early declines in cotton futures were erased later today and the market closed 1 to 4 points up. Local support and trade calling provided support.

Today's Radio Highlights

1:15 p. m., WMAL—Harriet Elliott, only woman member of the President's Defense Commission and Dean of Women at the University of North Carolina, is interviewed by Pauline Frederick on Let's Talk it Over.

7 p. m., WMAL—Freedom of speech and the press versus the subversive forces of demogogues is one of the fundamental questions of the day. From the time of Thomas Jefferson and Patrick Henry to these days of William Allen White and Henry Luce, freedom of speech, worship and the press has been the motivating force of This, Our America. Bernard C. Schoenfeld wrote the script.

7:15, WOL—Just to repeat the change we called your attention to yesterday: Fulton Lewis, jr., is now heard Mondays through Fridays 15 minutes later than formerly; now at 7:15.

7:30, WMAL—Templeton Fox, a radio actress who worked up to either success via the Pasadena Little Theater and as band vocalist for one night stands, plays a role paralleling her own life on Manhattan at Midnight.

8, WRC—Now it's Abbott and Costello's turn to offer their version of a film "western," only they'll have no Rochester to prod them along, no Marlene Dietrich to sing, "See What the Boys in the Back Room Will Have."

8:30, WJSV—George Philipp Telemann, contemporary of J. S. Bach, composed the Suite in A minor for Flute and Strings, programmed by Bernard Herrmann for tonight's Columbia Concert Orchestra series stressing unfamiliar music. Nicholas Koulouklis is the flautist. Liadov's "The Enchanted Lake" and the Overture to Dvorak's "Vanda" complete the concert.

8:30, WMAL—Senator Bennett Champ Clark, of Missouri, discusses the Burke-Wadsworth compulsory military training bill.

9:15, WJSV—Assistant Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson, Howard Hunter, F. H. Dryden and E. H. Smith look at the WPA and national defense.

9:20, WOL—Col. Charles Kerwood follows Raymond Gram Swing and the latest news reports at 9:15 with his authoritative discussion on the Messerschmidts, Blenheim Bombers, the Dornier-17s and the Spitfires now waging the Battle of Britain.

10:15, WOL—Senator Burton K. Wheeler, Montana Democrat and last-ditch opponent of the Burke-Wadsworth conscription bill, furthers his opposition.

Arthur Godfrey, WJSV early morning humorist, an ardent boating enthusiast, has donated the trophies for one of the events in the forthcoming President's Cup Regatta on the Potomac late in September. It's the Pacific one-design hydroplane race, and for it the owners must build their own boats at a cost not to exceed $700.

And speaking of Mr. Godfrey: The story comes from a prominent Washingtonian who was host to a visiting couple from Minneapolis a few days ago, trying to do all he could to keep them happy.

At dinner the first night, the woman declared "There's only one person I really want to meet in Washington." The host instantly started hemming and hawing. "Well," he said, "I might be able to arrange it. But you must understand it's very difficult these days. The President's a very busy man, you know."

"Oh, I didn't mean Mr. Roosevelt," the woman replied quickly. "I want to see Arthur Godfrey. We hear him on the radio in Minneapolis every morning and we think he's the funniest man alive."

Which occasioned a rather relieved look on the face of the Washingtonian as he escorted them to the studios of WJSV the other morning to meet Mr. Godfrey.

'TOP' CAMPUS FASHIONS THAT GO 'ROUND 'N 'ROUND

KEYED TO COLLEGE FASHIONS 1940

KEYED TO COLLEGE—to your needs, your flair for juggling, your miles of legwork, your moods and whims and not least, if last, to your restricted resources, this page is KEYED TO COLLEGE. Here is a turnstile of interchangeables that will turn your friends dizzy with envy. Here also are other requirements, for everything from a snow gale to a gala date. No guesswork. No fripperies. No non-essentials. While you sunned and swam, we were up to our ears in research. Wherever you're going for higher learning, The Hecht Co. tells you with authority HERE'S HOW!
